Cable Switches Channels

By MAUREEN QUINLAN
As a result of three new premium services soon to be marketed, Continental Cablevision is changing channel numbers.

Glenn Oakley, systems manager for Continental Cablevision, says channels are not being changed due to customer complaints. He said the three new channels will mean an opportunity to organize the channels and simplify the program listings in the Continental magazine.

"We are grouping channels together, creating a continuity in the channel lineup," said Drew Bouldin, community services director for Winchester. In the beginning, it will be confusing for customers, but in the long run it will make it easier, he said. The Cablevision magazine contains all program listings for Winchester, Saugus, and Reading and can be confusing when each channel does not carry the same programming in each town, says Oakley.

On Sept. 16, between 3 a.m. and 5 a.m., channelline ups will change. Continental Cable will send out a list of the upcoming channel changes to subscribers in order to avoid any confusion.

The Disney Channel, The New England Sports Network (NESN) and the SportsChannel are the three new channels and will cost $9.95 each a month, according to Oakley.

"I think it's something subscribers are looking forward to," commented Glenn Oakley, Winchester systems manager of Continental Cable.

"The new services offer people a real value for their purchasing dollar," added Oakley.

Selectmen recently questioned the ability to control the expansion of Cablevision and plan to meet with the town's Cable Advisory Board.

Sales representatives for Cablevision will launch door-to-door selling beginning the first week of October, according to Drew Bouldin, the new community services director for Winchester.

The Disney Channel will provide family oriented programming for 16 hours a day of new series and classics from the Disney Studios. NESN features the Boston Red Sox and the Boston Bruins. The sportschannel features the Boston Celtics and Hartford Whalers with local college hockey, Big East Basketball.

In the future, Oakley hopes to have stickers for each town's channel listings printed so that customers can place them on the back of the remote control.

Cablevision has also designed new packages and discounts. Among them are The movie spotlight, for the movie lover which includes expanded HBO, Cinemax, Showtime, Remote Control, and Continental Cablevision Magazine for $36.45.

The Sports Spotlight package features exclusive sports action and great movies, expanded HBO, SportsChannel, NESN, Remote Control, and Continental Cablevision Magazine for $35.35.

Family spotlight presents entertainment for the entire family to enjoy. Expanded HBO, showtime, Disney, Remote Control and Continental Cablevision Magazine for $36.45.

Rotondi Plan Hits A Snag

By JILL M. HIGGINS

Winchester resident Sam Rotondi says he is confident the Conservation Commission will give his housing proposal the go-ahead once he submits a more detailed plan to the board.

In a notice to Rotondi dated Aug. 29, the board said it would not approve the necessary order of conditions "on the basis of lack of sufficient accurate information."

The statement is the result of a lengthy Conservation Commission hearing on Rotondi's plans to build housing on 4.5 acres off Forest st. The hearing was twice continued and jammed each time with opponents who live near the site.

Although denying Rotondi's current notice of intent, the Conservation Commission did not close the door to other plans for the complex.

In its unanimous decision, the board stated, "The Commission is prepared to consider a revised notice of intent."

That statement, said Rotondi, basically leaves the door open for approval of the project if he can satisfy the board's concerns about wetlands protection.

"I'm confident that the commission will give us an order of conditions," said Rotondi on Tuesday. "Otherwise," he said, "I'd appeal it."

The former state senator and Winchester native said, "It's my inclination that this response wasn't a denial, but a request for more information."

He said he would not appeal the decision unless his lawyer advises him to do so.

Among other data, the board wants written proof from the Metropolitan District Commission stating the MDC accepts Rotondi's upper water storage area plans.

Chairman Maggie Howard said on Tuesday, "I can't say what we'll do next down the road."

"We all felt the project has definite possibilities."

But Howard said there are still several details lacking which the board feels are crucial to its making an informed, accurate decision.

"The figures that came in originally were sloppy. They were revised and revised again. But we were still convinced that they were not as tight or accurate as they should be," said Howard.

She said that while her board confirmed with the MDC information (Please See ROTONDI, Page 13)

High-Tech Field Grows In Winchester

By JON HABER

Special To The Star

Winchester hi-tech? Although by no means a Silicon Valley or Rt. 128, Winchester, like many suburban towns across the country is home to several high technology firms.

A combination of available facilities, pleasant environment and proximity to the resources like MIT and the high tech companies in the 128 region makes suburban Massachusetts particularly appealing to hundreds of electronics and computer firms.

Here is a look at a half dozen companies in our home town.

PCD, Precision Connector Design Inc., has its offices, research and assembly facilities in the Cross Street Industrial Park. Here they make hundreds of varieties of plugs and hook-ups which connect computers to scientific instruments and other high tech devices.

"Basically connectors connect printed circuit boards within a computer or to outside sensors or scientific equipment," says John Dwight, President of PCD.

"Connectors are a diverse field," he continues, "There are thousands and thousands of products for all sorts of scientific, industrial and military uses."

PCD does 70 percent of its business with the military, providing defense related computer connectors for companies such as Boeing and Raytheon. Industrial connectors for companies such as IBM make up the other 30 percent of their sales.

Dwight bought PCD in 1980. Prior to that, the company had been run by a group of former Raytheon employees who primarily made specialty products for Raytheon.

With the injection of venture capital, PCD has grown in the last five years from 25 employees to over 150 engineers, administrators and assemblers, and it looks like this rapid growth will continue.

"We expect to double our size in the next few years," says Dwight. "And we're always in the market for new people."

Dymec is another Cross st. computer component manufacturer.

Founded 12 years ago by Dick Tatrow, the Winchester-based company was then known as Dynamic Measurements Corp. Since then, the company has changed its name to Dymec and now employs more than 75 people in engineering and production.

Their primary product is the "voltage and frequency converter" which translates information from analog or human terms into digital or computer language.

The human mind will perceive a line written on a piece of graph paper as a smooth continuous curve, this is called analog perception. The computer will see this same line as a set of points coordinates on the graph, this is called digital perception.

Dymec's microchips convert analog data readings from various pieces of equipment into the digital language the computer can understand.

For very precise work, it can be difficult to translate data without losing accuracy. This is why converters must be of very high quality.

"We are world leaders in our product," says Walter Oliva, chief engineer at Dymec. "Our product has the highest performance and largest share of the market of any converters of its type." Their devices are made for fiber optic equipment and scientific apparatus used by industry and the military across the country and around the world.

Not everyone in the high tech business in Winchester is involved in the manufacture of computer parts. Olympic Scientific manufactures scientific instruments and laboratory supplies for research in chemistry and biology.

Rush Industries is a distributor of computer hardware including terminals, printers, and mainframe units. They lease equipment to companies such as Raytheon and Sanders.

One local firm, Database Fulfillment on Cross st., uses state-of-the-art equipment for a non-scientific purpose. They have computerized magazine distribution and subscription information for over 150 professional journals.

"Despite popular perception, Database Fulfillment is not a computer dating service," says James Lawson, manager of client services at the company.

"Fulfillment is a term used in the publishing industry to indicate the filling of subscription quotas."

Database Fulfillment prepares subscription lists and mailing labels for trade journals ranging from "Toy and Hobby World Magazine" and "Golf Review" to "Modern Africa Magazine" and "Building Design Journal."

"Every field has its own journal," says Lawson, "and it is this market, rather than the consumer journal market which we serve."

Bill McMillan, founder of the company, had been in the publishing industry when he decided in 1962 to apply the newly emerging computer technology to the field of magazine distribution. He started the company in Arlington, but soon moved to Winchester, first to an East st. address near the Winchester Woburn border, and later to its present Cross st. offices.

Most of the work is done with the aid of two powerful state-of-the-art (Please See HI-TECH, page 15)

The Winchester Star POLICE LOG

Monday, Sept. 2

At 9:06 p.m., a hit and run accident was reported. A Water st. resident said his car was struck on the left front with minor damage to the bumper, while parked on Water st. According to a witness, a light colored car struck the parked car.

At 9:45 a.m., a family disturbance was reported. The person causing the dispute was asked by police to stop harassing his family or he would be placed in protective custody. At 12:45 p.m. the assailant's brother came to the police station to report that his brother had threatened to kill him and was hitting him with a belt. Police report the alleged assailant had been drinking heavily. At this time he was taken to the Woburn Police Department by Winchester Police, booked and placed in a cell.

Sunday, Sept. 1

At 1:20 p.m., a youth from Woburn riding a dirt bike was arrested outside the Winchester Indoor Tennis Club on East st. for speeding and driving without a license. He was scheduled to appear in court early this week.

At 11:38 a.m., vandalism was reported on Swanton st. A rock had been thrown through a window of a resident's home.

At 9:41 a.m. on Town Way, a wood picket gate was struck and damaged. Last weekend a similar incident occurred at the same Town Way home.

At 7:24 p.m., a larceny on Grove st was reported. The incident occurred during the week of Aug. 19. Stolen were a set of $28 cubic zirconia earrings, a $700 gold chain pendant, a $375 pendant watch on a gold chain, a $450 gold nugget on a gold chain, and a $200 wrist watch. Police report the total value of items stolen is approximately $1,700.

At 2:51 a.m., a 22-year-old man from Wendell st. was arrested for trying to steal dog at the Winchester Dog Pound. He was booked and later released on bail.

Saturday, Aug. 31

At 8:16 a.m., a Church st. resident reported thieves stole a color T.V., a panasonic VCR recorder, and an AM/FM Cassette Recorder. The resident reported that he left his apartment on Aug. 25 and when he returned home on Aug. 31 he discovered someone had entered his apartment. The burglar climbed up a vent pipe in the rear of the dwelling and pushed through the screen.

Friday, Aug. 30

At 6:25 p.m., A motor vehicle accident was reported on the corner of Ridge rd. and Pepper Hill dr. Extensive front end damage was done to one car, which was towed from the scene. No damage was done to the other car, and there was no report of personal injury. The collision occurred during a heavy downpour.

At 8:14 a.m., at the intersection of Mt. Vernon st. and Washington st., a motor vehicle accident was reported. The driver of a Toyota Corolla from Billerica was hit broadside and received damage to the driver's door. The driver was taken to Winchester Hospital and treated for a minor head injury and bruises on the left side of his body. The other vehicle had front end damages. The driver, from Medford, was not injured.

Thursday, Aug. 29

At 3:30 p.m., a disturbance was reported at Ken's Sub Shop. Six to eight youths, gathered in front of the store, were loud and the music was loud, according to police. The group was told to leave and that the radio would be confiscated if noise continued. Police have reported previous problems with the group.

At 11:43 p.m., a 32-year-old man from Everett and a 24-year-old man from Boston were found on Laraway rd. and placed in protective custody. The Boston man was in the driver's seat, according to police. The Everett man was treated for cuts above the right eye and police reported slurred speech, and alcohol on the man's breath. He refused to take a breathalyzer test. The man from Everett was unconscious when found, police report.

Gun, $6,000 Stolen From Local Home

A 38-caliber pistol and $6,000 in cash were stolen from a Lockeland rd. home sometime between 5 p.m. Sunday and 2 a.m. Monday, police report.

A homeowner told police late Monday morning that a ladder was left on the west side of his house and entry was gained through the door on the second floor balcony leading to the master bedroom.

According to the police report, the man said $6,000 in cash was taken from his top dresser drawer. His gun, a 38 caliber Smith and Wesson Model 7 blue air weight was taken from between his mattresses.

He said the gun was valued at $350. He also reported stolen a radio he said was worth $300.

A variety of women's jewelry and a man's gold ring were also stolen, but the report did not indicate the specific items or their value.

Police report no fingerprints were found at the scene. The investigation is continuing.

Housing Authority Member Attends Training

Winchester Housing Authority member William A. McCarthy of 16 Tufts rd. recently received a certificate honoring completion of the two-and-a-half day Commissioners Training Program ("CTP") at Tufts University in Medford. Eighty housing authority commissioners from 45 local agencies throughout the Commonwealth attended the sessions. A total of five such programs are being held throughout the summer.

The Commissioners Training Program is a newly developed part of the Center for Management and Community Development which is affiliated with the Department of Urban and Environmental Policy at Tufts. The entire program is supported by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Communities and Development. The CTP is directed by Jim Stockard, a public housing authority commissioner for 10 years and an Adjunct Associate Professor at Tufts. Stockard pointed out that there are 242 housing authorities in Massachusetts (nearly 10 percent of all those in the nation) and over 1,200 commissioners who set policy for these agencies.

"Yet many of these dedicated local public servants have never really had an opportunity to learn more about what is expected of them, to find out about some of the technical aspects of the agencies they guide, and to discuss some of the issues they face with other commissioners."

The CTP is the first program designed specifically for Massachusetts housing authority commissioners to assist them in improving the policy making at their agencies. The program focused on the role of the commissioner and included such general topics as the history of public housing, the programs available for public housing, and the conduct of good meetings. The commissioners discussed more specific topics including finance, management and maintenance, personnel, tenant selection, development and modernization, and advocacy. The goal of the program is to help commissioners work closely with their executive directors to provide good quality housing for the people their housing authorities serve. Upon returning from the session, Commissioner McCarthy reported that "the training program" was timely and will enable me to better utilize our new 705 and 707 Housing Programs."

A free informational demonstration will be held Tuesday, Sept. 10, from 5:30 to 6 p.m. in Classroom A & B of the Lawrence Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, to show what the jazzerobics program is all about.

Jazzerobics is a 10-week, 20-session program, offered by LMH in cooperation with Health Fit Consultants of Wellesley, that offers aerobic exercise with a jazz style dance. The program will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5 to 6 or 6 to 7 p.m., beginning on Tuesday, Sept. 17, at the LMH School of Nursing.

Call the LMH Public Relations Department at 396-9250 for more information and registration.

Hospital Offers

Weight Program

Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford offers an eight-week behavior modification weight control program designed to incorporate dieting, nutrition and exercise.

The program, conducted by an LMH nutritionist, will include discussions and counseling on the role of vitamins, exercise, fat diets and wise shopping.

The program, to be held in the LMH School of Nursing on Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m., runs from Sept. 24 to Nov. 12. Registration and a medical clearance form are required.

For more information and an application, please call Lawrence Memorial Hospital at 396-9250, extension 1633.

Dr. Anne Jennings
On Hospital Staff

Choate-Symmes Hospitals Inc. have appointed Anne Elizabeth Jennings, M.D., to the staff.

Dr. Jennings, who is temporarily located at 792 Massachusetts ave. in Arlington, is an internist with specialty in nephrology. She received her medical degree with honors from Tufts University School of Medicine in 1980 and completed internship and residency requirements at New England Medical Center, where she was also awarded a fellowship in nephrology in 1983.

Healthy Food Class
To Start Sept 16

Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford is offering "Cooking Healthy," a course designed to help people learn more about preparing good-tasting and healthy foods with factors such as high fiber, low fat and weight control in mind.

The four-session course offers cooking demonstrations, meal planning and favorite recipes with an emphasis on nutritional eating. The program will be held in the LMH cafeteria on Mondays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., beginning on Sept. 16.

Registration is required. Please call Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford at 396-9250, extension 1633 for more information and an application.

2 Doctors Join
Family Center

Drs. Lynn Manning and Richard Sheff have joined the staff of the Family Care Center at New England Memorial Hospital, in Stoneham, as family physicians.

The Family Care Center is a group of family physicians, similar to the general practitioner of yesteryear, who cares for the entire family's healthcare needs.

Asthma Program
For Kids Offered

Captain Wonderlung, a program designed for asthmatic children ages 3 to 6, and their parents, is being offered at Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford.

This six-week educational and conditioning program, co-sponsored by LMH and the American Lung Assn. of Middlesex County, covers basic breathing and relaxation exercises, and discussions about what may trigger an asthma attack.

The program will be held on Wednesdays from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., beginning on Sept. 11 at the LMH School of Nursing. Registration is required. For more information and to register, call the American Lung Assn. at 272-2866.

Breathing Clinic
To Start Sept. 10

A Breathe Easy Clinic for adults with emphysema, asthma or chronic bronchitis will be held at Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford, beginning Sept. 10. The clinic is designed to teach adults more about chronic lung disease and ways to improve their abilities to perform daily activities.

The seven-week program, conducted by LMH physical therapist Ann Flanagan, will be held Tuesday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 in the LMH Physical Therapy Dept., 170 Governors ave., Medford. The sessions include discussions, breathing exercises, relaxation techniques, diet and medication instruction.

Registration is required and class size is limited. For more information, call the LMH Rehabilitative Services Dept. at 396-9250, extension 1221.

Hospital Offers
Respiratory Care
Service At Home

The Respiratory Home Care Program, operated by the Choate-Symmes Health Services subsidiary Choate-Symmes Community Services, provides respiratory equipment and services in the home for those who might otherwise require frequent hospitalizations due to respiratory ailments such as asthma, emphysema, or bronchitis.

Because many individuals with lung disease have a reduced ability to absorb oxygen, they suffer from fatigue and shortness of breath. A variety of oxygen units, available through the Choate-Symmes Respiratory Home Care Program, give such patients a "second wind," enabling them to function at their highest possible level outside of the hospital. Oxygen dependent can function quite comfortably with the help of an electrical oxygen concentrator, which supplies oxygen via a small nose tube or cannula which may be worn continuously or after exertion.

Respiratory patients who need oxygen less frequently can go shopping, visiting, or even traveling with portable units that contain up to a two-hour oxygen supply in canister form.

Respiratory Home Care patients are referred to the program by their physician and receive an initial instructional visit from their respiratory therapist, with additional monthly visits from the therapist to evaluate the patient-equipment capability.

Expectant Mother
Fitness Is Offered

Expectant mothers can learn how to exercise safely during pregnancy at a six-week Fitness Through the Childbearing Year class offered by New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham, starting Thursday, Sept. 5, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Participants must pre-register for the course and have their physician's permission before beginning the program. Cost for the six weeks is $30. For additional information and forms contact the NEMH Physical Therapy department, 665-1740, ext. 316.

The program was developed by the Physical Therapy and OB/GYN departments to teach mothers-to-be about essentials of safe exercise throughout pregnancy and into the post-partum months. Run by two registered physical therapists, each Thursday evening class will include stretching and gentle exercise, a relaxation segment, and a brief lecture.

Hospital Gives Gifts to Newborns

Newborns and mothers on the maternity unit at New England Memorial Hospital, Stoneham, receive a customized trio of gifts to remind them of their birth experience.

Each mother-baby couple will be given a canvas tote bag, a one-piece playsuit for baby, and a pack of 10 birth announcement cards with envelopes. All three items feature four-color pastel rainbow designs and the printed message "Brought to You by New England Memorial Hospital."

The new gift packages were designed by the Public Relations department to emphasize the theme of consistent caring offered by the health care team in maternity

SENIOR SCENE

Ann Ciampa, Regina Karnilla, and Anne Feuss at Jenks Center Crafts and Stitchery class.

Crafts and Stitchery Class

With Americans of all ages returning to the classroom this month, local seniors will be heading back to the Jenks Senior Center to new challenges of learning.

Among the various training activities scheduled for this fall is the popular Crafts and Stitchery Class starting on Friday at 1 p.m. The group meets every Friday for two hours.

Under the direction of Jane Norberg, the classes offer a wide range of activities. Appliqueing, crocheting, embroidery and needlepoint work, knitting, quilting and stenciling have been covered in recent years. Tapestry remains an unfulfilled challenge.

Through the efforts of Jane Norberg, the Winchester Arts Lottery

Council has provided funds for the second year to purchase materials for the class. These grants have enabled the group to expand its activities.

A large number of items are being created for the October 4-5 Annual Fair. Available will be such items as afghans, hats, pillows, pot-holders, small quilts, stenciled cheese and bread boards, stenciled notepaper, sweaters and tote bags.

All are welcome to learn new skills or perfect their present techniques. There is a small charge for weekly participation and a sign-up at the Jenks Center desk is necessary.

Energy Tax Credits

The federal energy tax credit program available since 1978 is due to expire this year. Seniors are reminded that if the energy efficiency of your home can be improved, the costs may be allowable for a tax credit. IRS Publication 903 "Energy Credits for Individuals", contains full information about weatherization work that meets the credit requirements.

Jenks Center Programs

As the summer days lead into the fall season, local seniors are reminded of the diversification of programs available to all at the Jenks Center. The monthly NEWS LETTER is free to all seniors. A telephone call will add your name to the mailing list.

In addition to a vast array of recreational and social activities, the educational program includes lectures and seminars on topics of current concern to seniors, a Book Club, and a Men's Discussion Group. This latter group meets next Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. Call the Center to inquire about attendance.

Health improvement plays a dominant role at the Jenks Center. Exercise classes, the twice-monthly Get Well Clinic and the special screening clinics and inoculations, sponsored by the Board of Health and other local organizations, are available to all seniors.

Most meaningful to the professional staff and volunteers at the Jenks Center are those programs by their very nature receiving little publicity. Personal counseling, outreach activities, and widow-to-widow programs receive top priority.

Telephone the Jenks Center for details on any of its programs.

Yoga Offers Health

A personal program for holistic living will be explored by the Yoga Creativity group at the Jenks Center as the group resumes weekly sessions on Monday, Sept. 9 at 9:45 a.m.

Using the colorful Self Health Guide published by the Kripalu Yoga Center in Lenox, the group will teach each other as different individuals and lead brief discussions each week after Yoga exercises.

Newcomers are invited to join the men and women presently attending; beginners and intermediates work together naturally, as each individual performs according to his/her own body flexibility, fitness and experience.

Annette Riley will introduce the Self Health Guide on Monday, Sept. 9, with a discussion of the three "A's" as guideposts to self discovery: Awareness, Acceptance and Adjustment.

Other members will lead brief discussions throughout the fall, selecting from the guide such topics as: Learning How to Play; the Art of Relaxed Work; Discovering Your Own Optimum Diet; Meditation and Spiritual Attunement; and Creating a Supportive Life Style.

The final topic, communication and self expression, will be led by Paulett Taggart using sensory awareness, theater games and improvisation.

Art Lending Program To Resume

The Winchester Art Assoc. is continuing its traditional art lending program this year with a few new twists.

This year, the association's 22nd annual lending program will be conducted on one day only, instead of the usual three-weekend arrangement.

Also, borrowers can deduct the cost of the program from their taxes. The annual program enables local artists to show their work throughout Winchester homes, while residents contribute new aspiring artists.

The Art Assoc. is beginning the program's 22nd year on Sept. 22 at the Vanderbilt home on Highland Ave.

This year will bring about a restructuring of the program which the association hopes will benefit artists and subscribers alike. There will be just one work of art offered by each artist, so as to offer more variety to subscribers and to encourage artists to submit one of their best works.

Additionally, there will be only one other lending party (Boodakian Rug Showroom, March 16) during the '85-'86 lending year. Subscribers will be able to return artwork and make new choices at the same time.

The Art Assoc. was able to make $2,000 of scholarship money available for worthy art students this past year. As there is no commission collected on works sold through the program, the association is able to provide a forum for the artists' work and at the same time assist prospective young artists.

During the Sunday, Sept. 22 lending program reception, residents will be able to meet the artist and select the artwork they want. Refreshments will also be served.

The following is the schedule for the Lending Program Day: 1:30-2 p.m. Residents return '84-'85 artwork 2-2:30 p.m. Artists bring in new artwork and pick up old art. 3-3:30 p.m. Residents review new artwork offerings. 3:30 p.m. Residents choose new artwork.

Artists are reminded that new artwork must be brought to the Vanderbilt home, 332 Highland Ave., by 3 p.m. Anyone who cannot bring in artwork by then should contact Carolyn Latanision at 729-0691.

Archival Center Reopens Sept. 3

The Henry E. Simonds Archival Center of the Town of Winchester, located at 15 High St., reopens on Tuesday Sept. 3. The Center's hours are Tuesday 9 a.m. to 12 noon, Wednesday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Our Readers Come A Dime A Dozen

When you're looking to reach people in Arlington, Winchester, and Belmont, consider Century Newspapers.

Each week over 84,000 readers have our papers mailed to their homes or buy a copy at the newsstand.

In these towns you'll find more people reading our papers than any other publication. Period.

And though you're reaching some of the most affluent readers in the area, you won't have to use too much of your own expendable income in the process.

For example, this 4 column by 10 1/2 inch advertisement would cost $705.60 to reach our 84,000 readers. That's less than one cent per reader.

Or only a dime a dozen.

PUT THE FREEZE ON HEATING REPAIR BILLS.

With the Boston Gas Home Heating Service Plan.

You can't predict when something will go wrong with your gas heating equipment.

That's why we encourage our customers to get the Boston Gas Home Heating Service Plan.

With it, you get the peace of mind of knowing that, if something goes wrong with your heating equipment, we'll come and repair it - anytime, day or night - FREE OF CHARGE (for covered parts and services). And you can get the same comprehensive coverage for your gas water heater, too.

If you already have the Plan, you know how valuable it is. Last year alone, thousands of our customers called us for repairs that would have been covered under the Plan. And heating repairs can be expensive, especially if parts are required.

When you think how much the Plan can save you, you'll be surprised how inexpensive it is. And if you already have the Plan, you know that it's worth every penny! Plus, you can now save over 15% with our new 3-Year Plan.

Watch your mail for full details - you'll want to act soon to get the Home Heating Service Plan protecting your heating equipment this winter.

Is 'News' A Point Of View?

By TERRY MAROTTA

Sometimes you open a paper and read a news item you know at once is highly significant, in terms of how it will affect both you personally and the society at large.

People who read about the dropping of that secret weapon on Hiroshima 40 years ago no doubt knew they swallowed some pretty significant information along with their Wheaties that morning. Those reading about the mounting toll of AIDS victims today probably know too that this is no Sunday-school virus that has the health-care people all scratching their heads.

But most of the time the stuff you read in the paper seems to carry limited significance. Take the piece that appeared about Michael Jackson's having bought the rights to all the Beatles songs a week or two ago. To many, that item probably fit very neatly into the So-What file they maintain for all such small-potatoes pieces of information.

Not to me, though. I read about it about his outbidding all the big-money guys to put up a cool forty million for those songs - and the news just sent shivers down my spine.

Why? I didn't know myself for some time. But after a few days of letting it simmer on the back burner of my sub-conscious mind, the answer finally came to me. I figure it this way.

Michael Jackson is a young man who doesn't smoke and doesn't drink. He's mild, self-effacing and confessedly spiritual. He co-wrote "We Are The World," the USA-For-Africa song that raised so much money for those starving in the Sub-Sahara.

But aside from producing that video this past spring, he has held himself curiously aloof from the public eye since the finish of last summer's cross-country Victory Tour.

So what is he doing, buying all those old Beatles tunes? Does he just want more money, so he can hold up in an even larger house with an even more elaborate system of security? I don't think so, somehow. I don't think the dollars mean that much to little Michael Jackson any more.

Maybe, just maybe, he plans to take all that money - all the royalties he'll earn now every time anybody anywhere on the planet plays a Beatles song over the airwaves - and give it away. To the starving in Africa, let's say.

There'd be a lovely kind of justice in an act like that, wouldn't there?

Michael made his money in rock 'n' roll, whose beginnings trace their roots in large part to the soil of Africa itself, and to the rhythms of her people brought here against their will.

There'd be a wonderful kind of poetry, a kind of redemption even, in seeing what was once Africa's returning to Africa at last, not in the form of music this time but translated into the sacks of grain that that music had purchased.

And who better than Michael Jackson to oversee this return? The boy who looks like a girl, with a girl's whiskerless cheek and a girl's soprano voice. The boy whose broad black nose has been surgically altered to resemble the narrow pointed one of a white person.

You could say that Michael Jackson is all of us, in a way, man and woman, dark-skinned and light. You could wonder if there weren't some fixed purpose in his having made himself over to confound the traditional boundaries of sex and color this way.

We're beginning to realize now that nothing can save us except the acknowledgement that there are no real boundaries among the creatures on this earth. That your children are my children, that hunger knows no color, that the land and the land's bounty must be everyone's or no one's at all.

Some people point to nuclear arsenals and fatal mutating diseases let loose in the population. They see reason for despair about our fate in this remote outpost of the galaxy.

Myself, I see reason for hope. I think we've learned some big lessons in this tattered century, and learned them the hard way.

Maybe I'm wrong about the rights to the Beatles' songs and Mr. Jackson's intent. Maybe this is just a small dream I've woven here, something to be cast into the So-What drawer you keep for insignificant items read about in the newspaper.

On the other hand, it just may be that I'm right. In any case, where would we be without our dreams, do you think?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wildlife Is A Joy Amid Hubbub

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

It has been another night of deep peaceful sleep in Winchester. Now as the morning light appears, the steady honking of the daily travelers starts. About twenty insistent honks are heard, shattering the quiet, but it's a nice way to be waked up.

I jump out of bed with eager anticipation to see the V-shaped formation of Canadian geese fly over the trees at about the same level every day. The geese honk enthusiastically as they glory in their flight and flap their wings with perfect rhythm. They follow the leader as they return to their pond on Cross Street.

These magnificent creatures can get about on the land, on the water and in the air—really awesome birds! Watching them gets my morning off to a pleasant start, seeing their daily flight, hearing the honking and knowing they are keeping their wings at the ready, so to speak.

People live today surrounded by towering structures, sophisticated technology and ribbons and loops of highways. So it becomes important to get back to basics occasionally and to enjoy a touch of wild life. Winchester is a beautiful town with lakes, ponds and rivers where people, geese and ducks live in harmony. Each benefits the other and is in turn benefited by the other, as the bond comes together in full circle. Man is the better for it when he can enjoy greenery, flowers, birds and animals.

It's a heartwarming cushion in the progress which has become so necessary in today's world.

Reader Questions Cartoons

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I wonder why you ran that cartoon from Punch about John Stonehouse? I got the point, or, rather, I understand the allusion. But then I was at the London School of Economics and Political Science with him after World War II.

How many of your other Winchester readers recall his rather checkered career? According to my (unscientific) sampling, none.

Have I missed something?

Graham Woolton

Letters Policy
Letters to The Editor are welcome on matters of interest to local readers. Deadline for submission is 4 p.m. on Monday.

With the kiddos back in school, 'seems there are at least a few more folks walkin' around town with smiles on their faces.

Why is it, though, that "the little kids" are looking littler, while "the big kids" look like they belong in Cosmopolitan magazine?

Anyhow, seeing them trudge off to the classrooms sure brought alive memories of saddle shoes and brand new sweaters. (Centuries ago, of course.)

Ahh, yes. Happy are the parents of schoolchildren, for they will be free of the summertime blues.

That is, until the shopping bills roll in. . .

By the way, folks — let's remember to be extra careful drivers in the mornings. Even though you may not have had your first cup of coffee, there are some real perishables out there.

With schools open, the youngsters are back on the streets, crossing busy roads sometimes not so carefully.

We have some pretty good crossing guards, but let's not make their jobs any harder than they need be.

Keep an eye out for that one student who might just not be looking out for you. . .

By the way, good to see the library is honoring Jean Twitcheil after all her years of service.

It takes a lot of patience to keep smiling over passles of youngsters who are intent on finding obscure facts that they "just gotta have."

'Seems just about anyone can remember "the" librarian who was an angel of mercy when you were just a day away from that 30-page term paper that was assigned months before. . .

Best of luck to Winchester's own library veteran. . .

Speaking of veterans, sorry to hear of the death of Selectman Michael Saraco's father.

Just last week Mike was telling those of us at the Selectmen's meeting about how his dad was the last Winchester World War I veteran to return to his home town to live.

Mr. Saraco lived a good long life, we're told. 'Hope the Saraco family can find comfort in that thought. . .

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 11-Report No. 35
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 30, 1985

THE HOUSE AND SENATE

The House and Senate continue to meet informally and formal sessions are scheduled to resume on Sept. 9.

One of the key issues now brewing and likely to surface shortly after the legislature reconvenes is that of a tax cut. Citizens for Limited Taxation, the sponsors of the successful Proposition 2½ tax limitation law, has already filed an initiative petition which combines a two year phaseout of the surtax and a cap limiting the growth in total state tax revenues to the growth in wage and salaries of the state's taxpayers.

If the Attorney General determines that the petition meets certain constitutional requirements, sponsors must collect 61,508 voter signatures at which time the House and Senate can act on the proposal. If the legislature passes the proposal and it is signed by Gov. Dukakis, it becomes law.

If lawmakers reject the initiative or fail to act on it by next May the sponsors can then gather an additional 10,252 voter signatures to insure the question goes on the November 1986 ballot.

Currently there are two key tax cutting measures pending in the legislature.

SURTAX REPEAL (H 6510) — The House has already given near final approval and sent to the Senate H 6510 — a bill phasing out the 7.5 percent surtax over three years. The overwhelming 141-7 vote in favor was on July 18 and came after at least six failed attempts to repeal or phaseout the surtax, including a three year phaseout proposed as a supplemental budget amendment and defeated 79-61 just a month earlier on June 20.

The bill is now in the Senate Ways and Means Committee. The Senate has not yet acted on the bill but has already defeated other proposed amendments this year to repeal the surtax. One such attempt, a proposed amendment to the supplemental budget, failed on July 1 by a 23-12 vote. It would have repealed the entire surtax rather than phasing it out over a period of years.

Two House roll calls are recorded below. The first is the June 20 vote by which the House 79-61 defeated an amendment phasing out the surtax over three years. The second is the July 18 vote by which the House 141-7 approved a bill phasing out the surtax over three years.

The Senate roll call recorded below is the July 1 vote by which the Senate defeated 23-12 an amendment repealing the surtax. On all roll calls, a "Yea" vote is for the bill or amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes both times. Sen. Richard Kraus did not vote.

$64 MILLION TAX REBATE (H 5990) — Also pending in the legislature is H 5990 — a later version of Gov. Dukakis' $64 million tax rebate bill including a sliding scale of one-time exemptions on 1985 tax returns. The package offers a savings in the range of $5.40 for an individual taxpayer earning more than $20,000 to $39.30 for one earning less than $8750. The range for couples is between $10.80 for a combined income of more than $40,000 to $62.50 for a combined income of less than $17,500.

On May 1, the House 145-1, passed this proposal which also includes two "rainy day funds" — a local aid stabilization one for cities and towns and a state stabilization fund to protect the state and local communities in the event of an economic downturn. The bill has yet to be considered by the Senate and is currently pending in the Senate Ways and Means Committee along with the surtax bill.

Earlier this year, however, on June 12 during debate on the state budget, the Senate 30-6, defeated a proposed state budget amendment providing for a different version of the $64 million rebate. This version simply provided for an additional $200 exemption for each taxpayer.

The House roll call below is the May 1 vote by which the House 145-1, approved its $64 million tax rebate and stabilization funds. The Senate roll call is the June 12 vote by which the Senate 30-6 defeated another version of a $64 million tax rebate.

On both roll calls, a "Yea" vote is for the bill or amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

SCHOOL NEWS

Gallup Poll Shows Americans Worry About Teacher Quality

A new Gallup poll on education has found that Americans are worried about attracting top talent into the teaching profession.

According to the survey, commissioned by the National Education Association, most Americans (57 percent) believe their schools are having trouble getting enough good teachers.

Yet the public strongly opposes any efforts to meet the emerging teacher shortage by diluting teacher certification standards or cutting back on teacher training courses.

In fact, among Americans who feel their local schools are already having trouble finding good teachers, only 6 percent would be willing to lower standards to make it easier to find teachers. And seven of 10 reject the hiring of subject area experts who have no formal education training as teachers.

One in two Americans, the Gallup/NEA poll also found, believes that admission standards ought to be raised for students entering teaching.

What else would the public do to improve the quality of education? One idea, mentioned by 60 percent of the sample, would be to institute some form of competency testing for teachers.

An equal number of Americans, according to Gallup, want to raise teacher salaries. Over six in ten (63 percent) believe education can be improved a great deal by increasing teachers' salaries.

The public, the poll found, believes teachers should earn as much as 20 percent more than they currently do. The average experienced U.S. teacher now makes about $23,500 a year. Americans want to see the average salary for experienced high school teachers at $29,000 a year and the average salary for experienced elementary teachers at $27,000.

The Gallup/NEA poll also found Americans willing to back up their recommendations with more tax dollars. A majority, 52 percent, favor more funds for public education and teacher training — even if it means higher taxes.

In 1983, when Gallup asked this question for a poll for Newsweek, only 45 percent of Americans backed more money for education, even if that meant higher taxes.

The Gallup/NEA poll is based on the findings of a telephone survey of 1501 adults conducted April 29 - May 20. The margin of sampling error is plus or minus 3 percentage points.

State and school districts, says Futrell, must take steps to attract top-quality young people into teaching.

As noted by a recent Rand Corporation study, "Beyond the Commission Reports: The Coming Crisis in Teaching," one of those steps should be to raise teacher salaries. NEA recommends a beginning teacher salary of $24,000 a year.

The Rand study points out that beginning salaries for teachers are lower than those in virtually all other professions that require a bachelor's degree — even when adjusted to reflect a 12-month salary equivalent.

Teachers' salaries also reach the "ceiling" much more quickly than other professions.

HEALTH BEAT

Hospital Is Seeking Volunteers

The Friends of Winchester Hospital will conduct fall orientation for new volunteers on Wednesday, Sept. 18, at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. in the hospital board room.

Interested residents are invited to join the group for coffee, a brief presentation and a tour of Winchester Hospital.

Volunteers are needed especially during afternoons and particularly in the Messenger Service, which provides transport and errands.

For additional information about the orientation contact the Volunteer Department at Winchester Hospital.

Ellen Leiter
Joins Nurses

Visiting Nurse and Community Health Inc., announces the addition of new staff nurse Ellen W. Leiter as intravenous coordinator.

Leiter is qualified to clinically practice intravenous therapy by the National Intravenous Therapy Assoc. Inc.'s credential board.

Her previous nursing experience includes being a patient care coordinator for American Continue Care, Westford; and emergency room staff nurse, Nashoba Community Hospital, Ayer; and a staff nurse, Cardiac Care Unit, University Hospital, Boston.

She is a member of the National Intravenous Therapy Assoc. and the American Heart Assoc.

Hospice Care
Is Offering Training

Hospice Care Inc., a non-profit organization that supports terminally ill patients and their families, has expanded its services to include Winchester. It seeks volunteers to join its Hospice Support Worker program.

Hospice Support Workers deal directly with the patients and their families, providing emotional and physical support and serve as a link between the patient and professional staff.

According to Betsy Everett, coordinator of volunteers, support workers help one family at a time, guiding each through the patient's illness and the family's bereavement.

"Their support is as varied as the individuals they help."

Upon acceptance into the program, participants must complete an intensive 12-week training session which is scheduled to begin the week of Sept. 30. A commitment of one year following the training is required. For more information, contact Hospice Care.

Symmes Course:
Managing Stress

Relaxation training can make a positive difference in one's life. It is the best way to manage stress and is proven non-medical approach to treat high blood pressure.

Relaxation techniques help weight reduction, stop smoking and teach a person to become more assertive.

A variety of relaxation techniques will be taught in a fun, practical and informative workshop at Symmes Hospital in Arlington on Thursdays, Sept. 12 through Oct. 10, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Techniques taught by Cindy Levine, M.S.W., will include progressive muscle relaxation, guided imagery, visualization, breathing exercises, and relaxation response autogenics. A relaxation training cassette tape and handouts will be included in the course.

Participation is limited to a 12 member group and pre-registration is required. For additional information and registration contact Symmes Hospital.

Dental Clinic
Is Available

The Middlesex Community College Dental Hygiene Clinic in Bedford offers low-cost cleaning, fluoride and x-ray services on Tuesdays from 8 p.m. to 5 p.m. The service is free to senior citizens on Wednesdays and Fridays from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and Thursdays from 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. through Dec. 13. Contact the clinic for an appointment.

Seminar Helps
Smokers Quit

Smokers can quit the habit in five days through a hospital-sponsored program.

New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham offers a five-day program through which participants learn techniques to quit smoking and weather the withdrawal process.

A professional staff, including a physician and health educator, provides instruction and incentive for persons interested.

The cost for the program is $45. Contact the Health Education Department for additional information.

Hospital Offers
Health Workshops

Mount Auburn Hospital features fall health education programs concerning women's health subjects, elderly concerns and a variety of psychological and clinical topics.

The hospital also offers workshops on nutrition and fitness, weight loss, smoking, stress management, CPR, and Alzheimer's disease.

Register now for workshops beginning in September.

Lecture Links
Computer, Nurse

New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham will present a guest lecture tonight by Dr. Diane Skiba, assistant professor and director of the Computer Resource Laboratory at the Boston University School of Nursing.

The lecture will begin at 7 p.m. in the gymnasium of Greater Boston Academy, located on the hospital grounds.

Tickets are $15 ($10 for NEMH employees) at the door. For additional information contact the New England Memorial Hospital.

Health Care Plan Introduced

The Diagnostic Related Group (DRG) reimbursement system for health care costs will be implemented in Massachusetts beginning in October.

The New England Memorial Hospital staff development department is offering a two-hour course to familiarize health care professionals and the public with the DRG system.

The program will focus on the concept of reimbursement as well as provide strategies for practicing successfully within the economic climate set by DRG's. Speakers will include Sandra Trainor, Suzanne Goethius and Dawn Doherty.

The two-hour session will be offered on three occasions: Sept. 17, 7:30 to 9:30 a.m.; Sept. 18, 7 to 9 p.m. and Sept. 24, 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. in the NEMH auditorium.

The fee for non-employees is $10 and pre-registration is required by Sept. 13. For more information or to register contact New England Memorial Hospital.

Benefit Bike
Trek Planned

Get in gear and join the American Lung Assoc.'s Autumn Escape Bike Trek for Life and Breath on Sept. 21, 22, 23 on Cape Cod.

Cyclists will embark on the Cape Cod Princess from Plymouth to Provincetown, where they will then ride along Cape Cod's scenic National Seashore, stopping for overnight stays in the campground.

Proceeds from sponsor sheets will enable the American Lung Assoc. to continue providing services, materials and research in the battle to prevent and control lung disease.

For further information contact the American Lung Assoc. of Middlesex County.

Seeks Volunteers

Volunteer nurses are needed immediately to help provide vital hypertension screening and education in communities and businesses as part of an ongoing program in the metropolitan Boston area. The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay, needs both RN's and LPN's to provide this public service.

Volunteers will be asked to participate in screening to be held throughout the area, and will be oriented to Red Cross screening procedures. Daytime availability is a must.

Although 60 million Americans have hypertension, more commonly known as high blood pressure, many people do not understand what it is. Left untreated, this condition can cause heart attack, kidney failure, or stroke.

To help the American Red Cross screen and educate members of the community, contact your local Red Cross chapter.

Hoyt Receives
Award From BU

Richard Hoyt, Ph.D., of Winchester, Associate Professor at Boston University School of Medicine, Department of Anatomy, received the Dr. Stanley L. Robbins Award for excellence in teaching. The award is presented on the basis of nomination from both the students and the faculty body.

Hoyt graduated from Bates College and received his Ph.D. from Harvard University.

CLUB NOTES

Mystic Valley Council Plans Fall Meeting

Local residents interested in serving as volunteers for the Mystic Valley Council For Children are invited to attend the council's Sept. 19 meeting at the First Congregational Church, 21 Church st.

The Council, part of the state's Office For Children, is responsible for coordinating, licensing and monitoring services to children.

The 7 p.m. meeting will include an introduction to the council, highlights of the year's successes and an overview of council activities for the upcoming year.

The council needs more volunteers to contribute a minimal amount of time toward the welfare of children in Mystic Valley.

The council's board of directors meets every other month during the school year in order to share information and set direction for council activity. Annual board elections will be held in October.

Residents are welcome to participate in a council committee whether or not they are on the Board of Directors.

The current council committees include: employer-related day care, proposal review and community review committees which evaluate children's programs, and a committee composed of area family day care providers.

In addition, the council sponsors a Local Parents Anonymous chapter. Educational forums on a variety of topics are presented to the community through council efforts.

A Chapter 766 forum is currently being planned for October. Each year the Mystic Valley Council For Children looks forward to gaining new members who add creative ideas, additional enthusiasm and energy to the council.

ABC Plans Sept. 14 Can, Bottle Drive

The Winchester ABC program is asking all local residents to set aside all returnable cans and bottles for the ABC Can and Bottle Drive to be held Sept. 14.

The drive will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Sons of Italy parking lot on Swanton st., adjacent to the town transfer station.

Those who unable to drop off their donations on that day can contact

Sandy Thompson at 729-8063 or Donna Don at 729-1807 to ensure a convenient pickup time.

The funds are derived from this and other drives are an important source of income for A Better Chance, a program designed to give minority students a challenging high school education so they are afforded the opportunity to attend college.

Holyoke Club Sets Meeting

The Mount Holyoke Club of Mystic Valley will hold its annual business meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 11.

All alumnae are invited to attend the meeting at the home of Helene Ryan, 6 Grove st.

For more information, contact Mary Peterson at 30 Allen rd.

Toastmistress Club To Meet

The local chapter of the International Toastmistresses Club will hold open house meetings Sept. 9 and Sept. 23.

The first meeting will be Sept. 9 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Winchester

Public Library, 80 Washington st.

The second meeting will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 23 at the library.

Dorothy E. Tucker of Medford will be moderator Sept. 9, while June Pietrantoni of Medford will moderate the Sept. 23 meeting.

The meetings offer training in communication skills, leadership, creative thinking and organizational techniques, all aimed at enhancing the skills of community members and business professionals.

The club is open to all area women. For further information, call Carol Johnson at 665-1796.

Republicans Plan Sept. 13 Social Event

The Republican Town Committee and the Women's Republican Club of Winchester are co-sponsoring a fundraising cocktail party to kick off the fall season.

The party will be from 6 to 8 p.m. on Sept. 13 at the home of Ralph and Berta Swanson, 44 Swanson rd.

Information about tickets, which will cost $7.50 per person, is available from Mrs. Thorton Stearns, 5 Fernway.

Enka Opens Shop Sept. 11

The Enka Society will open its Enka Exchange shop on Main st. on Wednesday, Sept. 11.

During the first week, items will be accepted for consignment. Clothing will be accepted Wednesday, Sept. 11 through Friday, Sept. 13 from 10 to 4 p.m. each of those days.

Regular shop hours, beginning on Wednesday, Sept. 18, will be Wednesdays from 10 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m.; Thursdays 10 to 4; Fridays 10 to 1 and Saturdays 9 to 12.

Residents are invited to collect all fall and winter clothes for sale at the shop. Clothing is accepted on consignment with half of the sale price returned to the donor.

In a world where quality workmanship and door to door service seem like relics of the past, Faulkner's Cleaning, located at 437 Franklin st., Melrose, offers both of these to area residents.

For more than 38 years Faulkner's Cleaning has served the cleaning needs of Winchester residents and has built up a reputation for quality workmanship that has made them a trusted name in drycleaning and has made many Winchester residents lifelong customers.

Faulkner's not only drycleans all the usual items including pants suits, dresses, and coats, and cleans and presses shirts, but they also go one step further — Faulkner's inspects every article of clothing and replaces buttons or sews seams at no charge.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better," explains owner/proprietor Francis Hardy.

As far as service is concerned Faulkner's Cleaning offers something we tend to associate with past decades — door to door service. At no extra charge Faulkner's will pick up and deliver your drycleaning to your house.

Every Tuesday and Thursday their truck goes through Winchester for convenient door to door service. There is no extra charge for this convenience and customers can arrange for free pick-up and delivery by calling Faulkner's Cleaning at 665-6300.

In addition to cleaning all the usual items, Faulkner's also cleans various household items including slipcovers, draperies, and bedspreads. They are also experts at cleaning both suede and leather garments.

And, if you don't have the space around your home or apartment to store seasonal garb, Faulkner's offers storage for anything from furs to wools. Box storage is available in which you receive a large box to store your clothes which are cleaned and pressed just prior to pickup, and ready to wear when you retrieve them by calling Faulkner's Cleaning several days in advance.

For quality workmanship and the customer satisfaction which has been the trademark of Faulkner's for more than 38 years, or for convenient door to door service at no extra charge, come into Faulkner's at 437 Franklin st. Melrose, or just pick up the phone and call them at 665-6300.

Faulkner's Cleaning is open Monday through Friday, 7-5, Saturdays, 8-5.

The Trustees and Director of the Winchester Public Library will hold a reception in honor of Jean Twitchell on Saturday, Sept. 7, 1985, from 2-4 p.m. in the Junior Library. Twitchell is retiring after 23 years at the library, including 13 years as Children's Librarian.

Twitchell has made significant contributions to the library in the areas of collection development and community relations. During her tenure, the junior library collection has grown from 21,500 to 28,500 volumes, including such new collections as a parents' shelf and books for toddlers.

Forming and maintaining ties with the community schools and individual teachers has been another of her important accomplishments. She has put together class collections for teachers, and has taught library skills to countless Winchester children.

In addition to her own skills as a librarian, she has won the admiration of her staff for her consistent encouragement of their creativity and innovation. She has overseen the introduction of special programming from story hours for toddlers to the telephone story line to an annual summer reading program.

Jean Twitchell, Winchester librarian, is retiring after many years.

From Sept. 8 to Sept. 26, the Winchester Art Assn.'s Gallery at 585 A Main st. will feature three artists who will exhibit three distinctly different interpretations of painting.

Christine E. Riccardi is a resident of Melrose, where she has been an art educator for several years in the public schools as well as a private studio painting instructor. She is a graduate of the Massachusetts College of Art, and has continued her studies at the Museum School and the DeCordova Museum.

A Winchester resident since 1923, Aram T. Mouradian of Woodside rd. was very active in town until about 10 years ago, at which time poor health slowed him down.

However, this offered him the opportunity to resume painting, a satisfying talent and hobby he has enjoyed since the age of 13. He will exhibit a painting of two collie dogs resting on rocks that he painted at age 15.

Determined to achieve the appearance of oil paint, Mouradian worked to overcome the technical problems presented by the acrylic media and has successfully achieved his goal.

Jack D. Giordano, a resident of Stoneham, is a graduate of Massachusetts College of Art, with a B.A. in Fine Arts, and has studied at the Miami Dade Junior college for one year.

Upon graduation from Massachusetts Art, he was awarded the David Berger Award for excellence in painting. He has held slide show exhibitions for evaluation purposes at the Stoneham Public Library

The opening reception will be Sunday, Sept. 8 from 5 to 7. Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 12 to 4.

Housing Advisory Group To Tackle Issues Tonight

The Winchester Citizens Advisory Committee held its first public meeting recently at the Winchester Housing Authority. Representatives of the Board of Selectmen, Planning Board, Winchester Housing Authority, Winchester Fair Housing Committee, and other members were present.

The major topic discussed was the criteria to be used in site selection for the 705 scattered site housing development. Chariman of the Winchester Housing Authority, Joseph Riga, was temporary committee chairman. The advisory group will meet again tonight at 7 for an organizational meeting to appoint a chairman and secretary.

Immediately following the organizational meeting, there will be a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. The public meeting will be held in the community room of the Winchester Housing Authority at 13 Westley st.

Arthritis Group To Meet Sept. 17

Richard J. Zangara M.D. will be the guest speaker at the Arthritis Support Group meeting to be held on Tuesday, Sept. 17, from 7:30 to 9 at the Choate Hospital in Woburn.

Dr. Zangara, a Lexington rheumatologist, will speak on scleroderma and lupus, two of the less common forms of rheumatic and connective tissue diseases. Dr. Zangara will discuss the ways the diseases are manifested, the systems involved, the

Classes To Start

As Labor Day traditionally signifies the end of summer, thoughts turn to fall schedules and activities. The Winchester Music Program invites interested students, young and old, to register for private music lessons which start the week of Sept. 23.

Started five years ago to augment public school offerings, the Music Program offers private lessons and ensembles after school hours at McCall Junior High.

Lessons are given in banjo, baritone, bass, cello, clarinet, guitar (classical, folk, and popular), flute, french horn, mandolin, oboe, organ, percussion, recorder, saxophone, trombone, trumpet, tuba, violin, viola, and voice.

Small classes (2-3 students), tailored to individual interests, are also given in music theory, which includes ear training, sight singing, and conducting basics.

New this year are two eurhythmics classes, one for three-year olds and one for four-year olds.

For further information call Nancy Goodwin of Wolcott Terr. or Corie Nichols of 10 Oxford st., or Sandy Thompson of 48 Samoset rd.

Workshop Begins On Sept. 23

Understanding learning styles is an adventure. When we feel good about the way we learn, when we succeed in what we try, we start paying attention to how other people learn.

Innovative learners like to experience and reflect. They seek meaning and learn by listening and sharing ideas. They excel in viewing concrete situations from many perspectives.

Analytic learners like to reflect and conceptualize. They are thorough and industrious. They learn by thinking through ideas.

Common Sense learners like to conceptualize and experiment. They need to know how things work, how things they are asked to do will help in real life. They need hands-on experiences and enjoy solving problems.

Dynamic learners like to experience and experiment. They seek hidden possibilities and need to know what can be done with things. They like variety and flexibility, and learn by a trial and error or self-discovery process.

All four styles of learning are equally valuable. Each has its own strengths and weaknesses.

Winchester's Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Charles Mitsakos, sees the value of understanding the learning process both in and out of school.

"Parents and teachers are better equipped to understand children and set realistic goals when they recognize how their children approach learning and experience. Those who are considering further education can benefit from developing the successful strategies used by good learners."

Mitsakos invites the community to take advantage of Winchester's free learning workshops offered at the Lynch School Administrative Center.

The morning workshops will be held from 10 to 11:45 each Tuesday and Thursday from Sept. 23 to Dec. 20. The evening workshops will be held once a week, times and location will be announced soon.

For more information, call Ellen Racioppi or Marty Fuller at 729-3091.

★ Rotondi

presented by Rotondi, members were still not clear about exactly how Rotondi would install pipe to meet the MDC specifications.

According to MDC guidelines, developers cannot install drainage pipes any deeper than six feet above MDC easements.

The Conservation Board also wants Rotondi to conduct a "professional survey" regarding the "total drainage area contributing to the site."

Howard said the board wants to be certain that it has "everything we need" to make a fully informed decision.

The Conservation Commission said it needs more information on the following:

Total drainage area contributing to site.
Actual elevation of culvert and MDC water pipe.

Recalculation of 100 year flood height.

Written statement from the MDC accepting proposed upper storage area.

Recalculation of culvert flow, showing hydraulic profile through proposed culvert in 100 year flood taking into account entrance and exit losses. These calculations should be signed and stamped by the engineer.

Upstream compensatory storage plan with volumes, heights and two sections (transverse and longitudinal) located on plans showing existing and proposed water levels; plan should also show relationships to existing MDC water pipe.

Plan showing slopes resulting from any filling done within 100 feet of stream.

In early August, when the hearing began, Rotondi cut back on his original plans to build 70 units of housing off Forest st. At that time, he said he would build only 57 units of housing, including 13 for low-to-moderate families, in a move to get local approval for the plan.

The initial 70-unit plan called for 18 units for low-to-moderate income families, with the rest being rented for between $800 and $1,000.

Neighbors have been highly critical of the proposal, claiming it would cause flooding and present a traffic hazard. They have crammed virtually every hearing and meeting on the proposal.

Surprisingly, Conservation Chairman Howard said she has received no comments from residents on the board's decision. She added, however, "I'd expect several people had something to say, though."

Hospital Plans 4-Part Workshop About Parenting

The challenges and the stresses of each stage of childhood — for both the child and the parent — will be discussed in a Parenting Workshop to be sponsored by Winchester Hospital in September. The four-part workshop will be held on Sept. 5, 12, 19 and 26 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Kingsbury Seminar Room at the hospital.

The following topics will be covered on the following dates:

Sept. 5: ages 4-8. Speakers: Dr. Richard d'Entremont, pediatrician, and Dr. Michael Marcus, child psychiatrist.

Sept. 12: ages 8-11. Speakers: Dr. Howard Rashba, pediatrician, and

Dr. Michael Marcus, child psychiatrist.

Sept. 19: ages 11-14. Speakers: Dr. Donald McLean, pediatrician, and Dr. Michael Marcus, child psychiatrist.

Sept. 26: parental stress. Speaker:

Dr. Michael Marcus, child psychiatrist.

There will be a $10 fee for the four-part Parenting Workshop. For pre-registration and further information, call Winchester Hospital's Education Department at 729-9000, ext. 3010.

★ HI-TECH

IBM 4641 main frame computers which store and process thousands of names of subscribers to hundreds of magazines, as well as generating statistics on a magazine's clientel.

Before computer technology, all addressing and labeling was done with Printing Presses, metal plates and bulky hard copy address files.

Today, mountains of data can be sent back and forth between Database Fulfillment's offices in Winchester, New York and Atlanta via magnetic computer tape. All of their files, also on tape, can fit into one small closet-sized room.

They are just one example of the huge new American data processing industry, where information has become a commodity.

Winchester's high tech connections are not just limited to US manufacturers.

The Japanese computer company Computer Engineering and Consulting Ltd. has its United States office right here in town on One Myopia rd.

"My responsibility is to identify good computer products, especially software product, suitable for the Japanese market," says Fumio Marakami, CEC's American operative.

"Another responsibility is to find good start-up high tech companies CEC can invest in," he adds.

Murakami's contacts stretch across the country. Operating in Winchester, he has negotiated for the rights to IBM mainframe computer software from Cynosore in New Jersey, Starling Software Market in California and Gold Hill Computers in Massachusetts.

He has also arranged an investment of CEC capital into the Modular Power Co. in California, manufacturers of computer power units.

From his home office on Myopia rd., Murakami is surrounded by Telex, telecopier and computers that keep him in close touch with the main office of CEC in Tokyo.

CEC is a software design firm with more than 1,000 employees, most of whom are engaged in developing new software. Others like Murakami, are sent around the world to purchase material from foreign markets.

Although these diverse firms have little contact with one another, all seem to share an appreciation of Winchester, particularly the park located across the street from the Cross Street Industrial area.

These companies contribute to Winchester through their taxes, hiring local people, and occasional public service.

Database Fulfillment did Winchester a big favor last year when the town census bureau was having difficulty with unusually thick census forms which were difficult to process.

Even with further expansion planned for most of these companies, they seem content to keep their existing facilities here in town.

In doing so, they will also keep alive Winchester's contribution to the new American tradition of suburban high tech.

Habitat: Habit-

The Habitat Institute for The Environment plans a fall program of more than 50 classes that promote interest and participation in the natural world.

Founded in 1971 to encourage environmental awareness and education, Habitat is a non-profit organization located on a 26-acre sanctuary of woods, meadows and gardens one mile outside Belmont Center.

Course registration is due one week prior to the first course session, and requires no prerequisite training unless specified.

Annual memberships are available for $12 per person or $18 per family and entitle members to course discounts, a quarterly newsletter and free access to various programs and grounds.

Canada Goose, Pintail, Green-winged Teal, American Wigeon and Common Merganser. Bring a field guide. Sessions: 7:30-10 p.m. Sept. 17; 5-7 p.m. Sept. 24. Fee: $22 ($18).

Fall Migration In the Sudbury River Valley

Evening slide/talk focuses on the ornithological studies of naturalists Henry David Thoreau, William Brewster and Ludlow Griscom, and provides a historical perspective on changes to area birdlife and landscape in the Sudbury River Valley. Sessions: 7:30-9 p.m. Sept. 20; 7:30 a.m.-3 p.m. Sept. 21. Fee: $31 ($26).

Fall Wildflowers

Old favorites and unusual wildflowers are examined in an identification of flowering species

American Pintail

For more information, contact Habitat at (617) 489-3850. A partial listing of classes follows.

Natural History

Fall Hawk Watching

The field identification, behavior and migration patterns of 16 species of Hawks are studied as they migrate through Massachusetts. Species include Bald Eagles, Ospreys and Peregrine Falcons. A bag lunch and binoculars are recommended for the all-day field trip to Mt. Wachusett. Sessions: 7:30-10 p.m. Sept. 4 and 11; field trip Sept. 7. Fee: $36 ($30 members).

Beginning Adult Naturalist

A broad background in field biology is gained through examination of specimens, basic biology, habitat, interrelationships and outdoor field observation. Bring a hand lens. Limited to 15. Sessions: 9:30-11:30 a.m. Sept. 14, 21, 28, Oct. 5. Fee: $28 ($22).

Fall Waterfowl Migration

Common waterfowl migrants are studied through migration.

The migration, field identification and aspects of behavior of common waterfowl migrants are studied as they migrate through Massachusetts. Species include and discussion of fall plant adaptations. Participants should bring specimens. Limited to 15. Sessions: 1-3 p.m. Sept. 21, 28. Fee: $20 ($16).

Naturalist Guide Training Program

Persons with some familiarity with natural history are trained to be guides for school classes and other children's groups that visit Habitat for nature walks. Class time will involve familiarity with Habitat's trails and areas plus lesson planning and teaching skills. Upon completion, participants will lead groups of 6-8 children for at least four walks. Note: This course is geared for people who are seriously interested in guiding groups at Habitat. Sessions: 10 a.m.-noon, Sept. 24, 26, Oct. 1, 3. Fee: $20 ($16).

Sharing Nature With Children

Techniques for teaching in the out-of-doors in both urban and suburban settings. Sessions: 7:30-9:30 p.m. Sept. 26, Oct. 3, 10, 17; all-day field trip Oct. 12. Fee: $35 ($30).

The Art of Seelg

Through a slide/lecture and a walk on the grounds, students will learn to see through the eyes of a naturalist with more than 30 years of experience. Sessions: 1-4 p.m. Oct. 5. Fee: $12 ($10).

Late Fall Walks

Plants' preparation for winter are observed in walks to local conservation areas, including Habitat, Juniper Hill and Whipple Park in Lexington and Horn Pond in Woburn. Bring hand lens. Limited to 15. Sessions: 9:30-11:30 a.m. Oct. 19, 26, Nov. 2, 9. Fee: $28 ($22).

Women and Nature:

Exploring Our Roots

What To Learn

Gert Fitzsimmons, 67, and Jarrett McKinnon, 7 months, are both ends of the spectrum in the Woburn YMCA's swimming program.

In The Drink: Learning To Swim At Any Age Is OK

By SUSAN CURTIS

Age does not have to be a factor in learning to swim.

According to Brian Hanley, aquatics director at the North Suburban YMCA in Woburn, students ages 4 months to 76 years old are enrolled in swim classes.

Adults 18 and older are an important part of the aquatic program with approximately 100 adults participating in each nine-week session.

One star alumna of Hanley's program, Gertrude Fitzsimmons of Arlington, began her swimming career at age 64, at the same time she started retirement.

"I was always scared to death of the water," says Fitzsimmons. "When I was a kid, I used to get dunked by my aunt's boyfriend. I hated it!"

"I used to take my grandchildren swimming but I'd only go up to my thighs. That was it for me."

"Since I can remember, I wanted to learn to swim and I knew I'd do it someday!"

Not only did two years of lessons and leisure swimming add to Fitzsimmons' physical and mental well being, but it also contributed to maintaining the quality of her life.

"Two years ago this summer, I had cardiac arrest in the water, at the Y. I died there," says Fitzsimmons. "I saw lights, heard bells."

"Brian (Hanley) did mouth-to-mouth and saved me. Then the firemen took me to Choate Hospital. I was later taken to Mt. Auburn Hospital where I worked before I retired as a nursing assistant."

Six months later, she was back at full speed in the pool.

"After my attack, I wanted to swim. I said to my doctor, 'You mean I wanted to swim my whole life and finally learned and now you won't let me?'"

"My doctor said that it would do me more harm if I did not go back to swimming," Fitzsimmons says.

She and her doctor credit her rapid and complete recovery, in no small part, to her excellent physical condition. Fitzsimmons, now 68, tries to swim at least three times a week. Exercise and bicycling are also part of her weekly routine.

While the quest for improved fitness may lead some people to pursue swimming, Hanley says most adults are motivated by their family.

"Many students are parents of children in our program. The biggest group have participated in the 'Water Babies' classes. These parents want to enjoy and share activities with their families. Often the parent is the only member of a family who does not know how to swim," Hanley says.

"For an adult, admitting to not knowing how to swim is especially difficult," he says.

Brian Hanley

"Many adults come here with a fear of water. They may have been conditioned as children by parental warnings about the danger of water or they may simply have had no access to water."

Hanley estimates that of those students who persist, 95 percent learn how to swim. Even those few who drop out of the program do so with a degree of acquired comfort and some knowledge of water safety.

Adults usually request private lessons. Hanley, however, encourages participation in classes. Classes usually consist of eight or nine students and one instructor.

"Having others in the same boat can help," he says.

"Teaching swimming is basically the same for children and adults," says Hanley. "First you must allow the student time to adjust to the new sensations of the water such as the feeling of buoyancy, the shift in the center of balance and the slow motion of the water."

"Next, the muscles used for swimming must be toned up through a series of drills and exercises, and at the same time we work on encouraging our students to submerge."

"Finally," Hanley says, "everything is tied together through a series of steps beginning with the front float and ending with the float plus the kick and arm stroke. At this point the student can swim as far as he can hold his breath."

Hanley cites personal satisfaction as an added benefit for adult learners.

"Learning a new skill is exciting at any age yet can be even more rewarding at an older age. While adults continue to gain mental skills, learning to swim may be the first new physical activity acquired in years. And it is within the reach of just about everybody, at any age."

Beginner and intermediate classes for adults will be Tuesdays at 8 p.m., Wednesdays at 11 a.m., and Thursdays at 8:45 p.m.

Fall sessions begin on Sept. 9 and registration is ongoing through the first week of classes.

The fee for the nine-week fall session is $26 for members and $43 for non-members.

"Fall is perhaps the best time to learn or improve your swimming skills," says Hanley. "Physically you are at your best and mentally, after a whole summer of watching others enjoy the water, you are the most determined."

Information about these classes and other programs offered at the North Suburban YMCA may be obtained by calling 935-3270.

Midnight to 2 a.m.	Tenth sign following
2 to 4 a.m.	Eleventh sign following

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Not the time to begin anything new. Finish up a transaction and don't count on long-lasting support. Accepting more responsibility and making a full commitment will add to your sense of well-being. Get good health advice.

TACRUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Take note of behind-the-scenes information for use at a future date. Your financial judgment is "right on" and the future looks bright. Before you buy that beautiful item be sure it won't endanger your long-term security.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Face up to pressures and responsibilities — you can do it and it pays off for you soon. Reassess your budget and cut out any deadwood. By being a good sport you can settle a domestic argument and come out a winner.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Let go of the past and begin a new project with confidence. Your popularity is high, you're magnetic and in the driver's seat! Be decisive and others follow your lead. Go over long-range budget and security plans.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Timing is key, so keep things under your hat until the appropriate moment. Improve your personal appearance and dress carefully because you'll be on display now. Be practical and responsible — your reputation is at stake.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — You're extremely perceptive now, so trust your hunches and follow through on them. You are optimistic and ambitious with high energy and lots of activity. Changes that occur may mean making some personal adjustments.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Accept the invitation for a short journey — you could make some interesting contacts. Your efforts are rewarded now and your spirits should soar. Express your ideas and others will understand. A dream is within reach.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Don't second-guess the past — you did the right thing. If you encounter a block to your efforts now, be creative and you'll figure a way around it. Finances look bright and you can afford an item you've wanted.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Show a loved one how much you care and the response will amaze you. Don't do all the talking — listen to what is going on around you and you get some inspiring ideas. Then display your talents and go after your desires.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Be diplomatic and willing to make compromises to keep the peace. Your view of romance could be impractical and idealistic, so make an effort to see things as they really are. Consult the experts about money matters.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Look for ways to improve your efficiency and streamline your work efforts. You are especially innovative now so you can take some risks and think big! Go after greater gains and do some public relations work.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Use your heightened emotional mood toward artistic and creative efforts. If you overwork you could feel somewhat depleted, so pace yourself and pay attention to your health. Defer to your partner in a major decision.

Our Children Is Gratitude Passe?

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Q. Is gratitude old-fashioned? I see so little of it among teenagers these days, even among my own two and their friends. Despite the fact that we do so much for them (and so do the other parents I know), a simple "thank you" doesn't seem to be in their vocabulary.

They could at least repay us a little bit by helping around the house, picking up their own dirty clothing and things like that.

We obviously have lost some valuable time in getting good habits started, but is there anything we can do now?

A. Because it won't ever be any earlier, the only way to go seems to be to start now.

Hold a family meeting, listing responsibilities and assignments (including parents as well as the youngsters), and limiting luxuries for them that seem to be in the realm of indulgences. The latter vary from one family to another, of course, perhaps ranging from a teenager's own car to ice cream or a movie, depending on family income and parental treats for themselves. After all, one of our roles as parents is as a model for our children.

The meeting, the lists and the limitations are sometimes difficult to handle, but your options appear to be limited right now. Other readers may have additional suggestions.

Now, about that thank-you factor - your using those words when they are appropriate (there's that modeling again!) and expecting them to do the same may help get the ball rolling toward basic good manners. Even if they verbalize the words without feeling or recognition, that step at least may be in the right direction.

Letters may be sent to Dr. Willard Abraham, Our Children, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Are you the parent of a pre-school child, 2 to 5 years old? Send a stamp, plus your request for information about a monthly service that may help you, to Dr. Abraham, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

What's Free 'Specially For Parents

By Terry Bisbee

Learning Pamphlets

As a parent you like to feel you're doing everything right. After all, you taught this little person of yours everything he or she knows. So how about a little expert help? It's free. And it's from a reliable source — the National Association for the Education of Young Children. This offer gives you guidelines in three different areas of child care.

How to Choose a Good Early Childhood Program is the first brochure offered. If you're thinking about enrolling your child in an early childhood program, you'll find some helpful suggestions here on what to look for in a good program.

Choosing Good Toys for Young Children, the second pamphlet, presents guidelines for toys enjoyed by different age groups, from 2-year-olds to 6-year-olds. The toys you select influence what your children learn and think.

Helping Children Learn About Reading is the third pamphlet. Many children already know about reading when they enter kindergarten. They've picked up hints from you as you've read to them. This brochure tells you how you can help your children in their efforts to learn to read.

Directions: Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for two pamphlets. For all three, affix 39 cents postage.

Ask For: Pamphlet by name. Mail To: NAEYC, 1834 Connecticut Ave N.W., Washington, DC 20009.

Emergency Booklet

Do you know what to do when your child's life is threatened by illness or injury?

What To Do For Childhood Emergencies And Illnesses is a free, 35-page booklet offered by the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia that tells you what actions to take in emergencies.

Poisoning, bleeding, burns, eye injuries, falls, bites, fevers — just about all the childhood hazards are explained. Then the explanation is followed by a list of quick actions you should take.

The things you should do are followed by a list of things you should not do. And that is followed by suggestions for preventing such an injury.

Common childhood ailments are included. The symptoms of chicken pox, mumps and measles are all outlined, as well as treatments for them and danger signs to watch for.

This booklet is a good, concise guide and should be a beneficial addition to any household where small children roam. Single copies are free; two or more copies are priced at 50 cents each.

Directions: Send a postcard for a single copy.

Ask For: What To Do For Childhood Emergencies And Illnesses.

Mail To: Public Relations, Department, F.R.E. The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, 34th St. and Civic Center Blvd., Philadelphia, PA 19104.

"Freebies" is compiled by Freebies Magazine, a national publication that features free (or postage-and-handling-only) offers you can request through the mail. To receive information about Freebies, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Freebies Magazine, P.O. Box 20283-CP, Santa Barbara, CA 93120.

A Weekend Away Fiddling At The Fairs

By GERARD J. GAGNON
ALA Auto & Travel Club

The big Eastern States Exposition, a waterfront festival, a fiddlers' contest and a number of country fairs are among the varied weekend attractions in New England, Sept. 13-15.

A million or more people are expected to attend the 64th Annual Eastern States Exposition, The Big E, at West Springfield, Mass., during its 12-day run, Sept. 11, through Sept. 22.

Touted as New England's Great State Fair, it offers a variety of attractions. There'll be agricultural exhibits and shows, a giant midway, entertainment, thrill shows, the Avenue of States, the Better Living Center, a circus, exhibits, displays, contests, a daily parade, a petting zoo, helicopter rides and lots more.

The Big E opens at 9 a.m. for agricultural activities and exhibits and closes at 10 p.m. Tickets: $6; seniors and children 6-13, $3; children under 6, free. Tel. (413) 737-2443.

Water, Water
In Rhode Island, the Providence Waterfront Festival will be Sept. 12-15, with many events and activities at various sites. An opening ceremony and concert will be held at Old Stone Square Park, Thursday, 6 p.m.

Festival features will include tours of a 12-gun, 110-foot reproduction of the Continental Navy Sloop "Providence" on Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m., at India Point Park. There'll also be an Artists and Artisans Show, Antiquesfest, concerts, exhibitions, tours, seaplane rides, games, entertainment and more. On Saturday, restaurants will compete in a Pasta Challenge. Tel. (401) 277-2601.

On Sunday, noon-6 p.m., a Heritage Festival will be held on the State House lawn in Providence. There'll be songs and dances of many countries by colorfully costumed performers, and arts, crafts and ethnic foods. Tel. (401) 277-2669.

FALL HOME IMPROVEMENT

Increase Aesthetics To Sell Home Fast

The best time to reroof isn't always when the old roof has worn out.

If you're thinking of putting your home up for sale and the roof is middle aged or older, a new roof might help it sell.

Another reason for reroofing prior to the old roof's demise is aesthetics. Some people just want to change the look of the roof they have. Old age, in roofing terms, may be as little as 15 years or less, depending on the existing roof covering.

Homeowners have learned that the color and style of a roof can change the image of a home in many ways. A dark color on a steeply roofed or tall home, says the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association, makes such a house seem less towering. A light colored roof on a low, single-story home will give it stature.

Roof color can also be used to give a home balance and prestige. Especially popular today is a new generation of asphalt shingles, including fiber glass-based and organic-based, that offer homeowners good value, eye-appeal and fire safety.

They are available in a range of handsome colors including subdued earthtone shades of browns and beiges that blend or contrast with the other exterior color elements of a home. Many of these asphalt shingles are designed to last up to 25 years or more, yet require minimal maintenance.

Manufactured to meet the fire resistance standard of Underwriters Laboratories, asphalt shingles bearing the UL Class C or the higher Class A label have been thoroughly tested against fire exposure.

They will not ignite easily, contribute to the spread of flame over the roof area or emit burning brands that might touch off new fires.

Additional information is available in "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Roofing." To get a copy, send 50 cents to ARMA, Box 3248, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163.

Winter: Time To Shape Up

SPACE! In most homes it's the final frontier... the challenge is to find enough. This is especially true today, as more and more people choose smaller homes, condominiums and apartments.

Where every inch counts, the space allotted for closets, drawers and shelves usually isn't enough for all the shoes, clothes, knickknacks, books, collectibles, food and "stuff" families collect.

There are a few simple answers that require only hammer, nails, a saw or two, a tape measure, a level, a little paint or stain, and the ability to read and follow directions. Do-it-yourself projects may be the answer to all your space needs.

First you've got to use your imagination to discover what space you already have that simply needs to be rearranged. Perhaps an old closet, or an empty corner, or even an entire room that isn't being used. Then all you need to do is adapt project plans already designed by experts like Georgia-Pacific, to fit your own particular needs.

One such project for the bedroom is a window seat. Not only does it add a colonial feeling to the room, but it also provides storage and a corner to curl up in and read a good book.

A "make-at-home" dresser can be constructed by stacking a set of plywood boxes, adding runners, drawers and knobs... a simple idea with tremendous potential.

The usefulness of a closet can be tripled by installing easy-to-make shelves. The addition of drawers helps keep towels and toiletries in the bath out of sight, and new towel bars make your bathroom even more organized.

In fact, shelving is a smart addition to almost any room. Books and collectibles can be stored and displayed in beautiful cases in a library or den. They can add needed storage in your home workshop. A wrap-around shelving unit is a perfect way to help your kitchen, a room that always needs more space.

And what about those unusual places? Consider the benefit of an overhead bin in a hallway or shelving at an angle to fit the slope of the attic, or under the stairs.

All these projects can be built by the do-it-yourselfer with a few simple tools and the right building product... plywood, particleboard, waterboard, oriented strandboard or lumber. Add a little paint, stain or sealer and give your home a new lease on life.

For more ideas and detailed plans and instruction on "shaping up your space," send $2.00 to Georgia-Pacific Corporation, The Storage Book, Dept. MNS, P.O. Box 48408, Atlanta GA 30348.

Do-It-Yourself Quiz Can Tell Home's Safety

Is your home attractive to burglars? Or do your precautions tell potential crooks to look elsewhere for an easy mark?

Despite the fact that burglary statistics are down by nearly nine percent nationwide according to recent FBI statistics, approximately one out of 14 homes will be burglarized this year.

The following do-it-yourself Home Security Survey, provided by Honeywell Protection Services, will take only a few minutes and can help you correct some of the most obvious danger points. Simply mark the boxes with your answers and then score yourself as directed.

Home Security Survey

- 1) Does your home have exterior lighting?
 - A. ☐ No lighting.
 - B. ☐ Some lighting.
 - C. ☐ Lighting, front, back and garage area.
- 2) Do you leave these lights on from sundown to sunup?

- A. ☐ No.
- B. ☐ Yes, turn on and off manually.
- C. ☐ Yes, automatic timer automatically turns lights on and off.

- 3) Is your home fairly isolated, far from neighbors, or not easily visible to neighbors?

- A. ☐ Yes, neighbors cannot see my home, or hear noises.
- B. ☐ House is hidden from view by fences, trees, shrubbery, etc., but is close enough to neighbors for them to hear a disturbance.
- C. ☐ No, neighbors can see my home clearly and are within earshot.

- 4) Do you have an attached garage?
 - A. ☐ Yes.
 - C. ☐ No.

- 5) Do you have shrubbery around your home?
 - A. ☐ Yes.
 - B. ☐ Yes, but not near windows or doors.
 - C. ☐ No, not near house or garage.

- 6) Do you have windows that can be reached from the ground?
 - A. ☐ Yes.
 - C. ☐ No.

- 7) Do you have a basement?
 - A. ☐ Yes, with an outside entrance or windows.
 - B. ☐ Yes, with windows only.
 - C. ☐ No.

- 8) Have there been burglaries or incidents of vandalism in your neighborhood?
 - A. ☐ Yes, frequently.
 - B. ☐ A few.
 - C. ☐ None.

- 9) What are your doors made from?
 - A. ☐ Wooden, hollow or lightweight.
 - B. ☐ Wooden, solid or heavy.
 - C. ☐ Metal.

- 10) Do any of your doors have windows in them?
 - A. ☐ Yes.
 - B. ☐ Front door has adjacent window.
 - C. ☐ No, none.

- 11) What kinds of locks do you have on your doors?
 - A. ☐ Spring locks (simple lock in the knob).
 - C. ☐ Deadbolt.

- 12) How many locks do you have on your windows?
 - A. ☐ One, standard.
 - C. ☐ Two on each window.

- 13) Do any of the adults in your house travel regularly?
 - A. ☐ Yes.
 - C. ☐ No.

Are You Paying Too Much Money?

According to a recent statement by the Mass. Dept. of Resources, at the end of 1984 there were 15,000 active solar installations in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. They estimate that by the end of 1985 this number will have jumped to 25,000.

The big increase is anticipated partly because the federal and state solar energy tax credits are scheduled to expire on December 31st of this year!

These tax credits pay for up to 61 percent (as much as $5,000) of your solar system. Combined with energy savings, the tax credits mean many customers are eligible to have a solar system installed at little or no cost.

Solar water-heating has proved itself to be a very practical option here in New England for many reasons. The average family of four spends $400 - $700 per year to heat water. A solar system can save you 70 percent of this on the average. Solar also compares favorably with the best investments available today. It commonly yields a tax free return on investment of 8 to 15 percent the first year. It beats them all, however, when you consider it can do nothing but improve as energy prices increase.

As many New Englanders have found, solar allows you to turn off your water heater for almost half the year.

Cambridge Alternative Power, a local solar company which has been in business since 1977, offers a free no-obligation solar feasibility survey to help you determine the following:

- if solar is feasible for your home;
- if you can take advantage of federal and state tax credits for solar energy;
- how much money solar can save you; and
- if solar energy is affordable.

Call 547-0400 for your free survey.

Test Can Point Out Home's Protection Trouble Spots

14) Do you take vacations away from home?

A. Yes.
C. No.

15) Are there times during the day when no adults are at home?

A. Yes, often.
B. Rarely.
C. Almost never.

16) Do you have children living at home?

A. Yes.
C. No.

17) Do you have an elderly person living with you?

A. Yes.
C. No.

18) Does anyone in your family have heart trouble or another physical disability?

A. Yes.
C. No.

19) What kind of climate do you live in?

A. Cold.
C. Warm.

20) Have you ever left keys outside your home?

A. Yes, in a hiding place.
B. Left with a neighbor, friend or household help.
C. No.

21) Do you ever leave your doors or windows open when running an errand, working in the yard, or sleeping?

A. Yes.
B. Sometimes.
C. Never.

Here's how to score your safety answers:

1. Add up all your "A" answers, your "B" answers, and your "C" answers.

2. Subtract 10 points for each "A" answer and 5 points for each "B" answer. Add 10 points for each "C" answer.

3. Scoring:
-105 and lower: Be careful! Your home is an open invitation to burglars.

-104 to 0: A determined thief could break into your home. Think about extra locks and other deterrents.

0 to 100: A good start, but your home safety plan needs work.

WHICH AGENCY TO LIST WITH

If you are about to put your home up for sale, your first question should be — which agency will you list it with? You will be marketing one of your largest lifetime investments. It makes good business sense to select the right agent to help you do it.

The agency should be established. Years in business are important, but you also want to consider reputation. Solicit

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North South Starmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 58 cal rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some puny punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard canvas at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members have all over from Maine to Rhode Island to New York. We are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borison at 1-815-3102 for further information. 11.3/TF

Selectmen Question Assessors' Tax Plan

By JILL M. HIGGINS

A move by the Board of Assessors to shift the tax burden to businesses from residential taxpayers is being questioned by several selectmen.

Selectmen are scheduled to meet with the board during the regular Monday selectmen's session on the assessors' new tax plan. Under the plan, businesses would pay a higher percentage of taxes.

In mid-August, the assessors tentatively set the tax rate for fiscal 1986 at $21.98 — an increase of 74 cents over last year's rate.

The assessors' tax proposal also would change the rate of property classification from 100 percent to 120 percent classification.

Both boards were scheduled to meet jointly on the subject Sept. 3 at a regular selectmen's meeting, but the session was canceled.

On Monday, the boards were again scheduled to meet, but two of the three assessors were out of town, according to the assessors' office.

Reached by phone on Tuesday, several selectmen said they are anxious to learn why the assessors want to increase the classification percentage from 100 percent of last year to 120 percent.

"I want to know why the assessors think we should be going with 120 percent," said Selectman Alan Macdonald.

"I am in favor of 100 percent equalized valuation. If we have businesses pay more in taxes, it at least should be done on the basis of fair assessment," he said.

According to some assessing methods, businesses can be assessed according to the actual income, rather than possible income.

"I would say if we do it that way

(according to actual income) it would be like taxing according to ability to pay," said Macdonald.

Selectman Wade Welch said he will find the decision on setting the tax rate difficult. He said he generally favors approving decisions of elected boards. He said they have been elected specifically to tap their resources for the best decision.

Still, he said, "When the assessors come back in 1985 with a recommendation of 120 percent, I say, 'Wow!'"

He added, however, "I don't feel nearly as strong about this as I did last year. I don't feel nearly as strong or as comfortable about 100 percent either."

He suggested that classification could be a way to return money to the taxpayers, saying, "I recall the vote in town on Prop. 2's was better than two to one. Clearly that says to me that people want less taxes."

Selectman Mark Lombardi said he is "having second thoughts" about 120 percent classification.

He said if the town uses 120 percent classification, taxpayers would receive a far less significant break in comparison to the burden that businesses would face.

For the amount of relief that (residents) get, you shouldn't have to penalize the businesses."

Selectman Judith Muggia said that since Winchester has little "big business" in town anyhow, the taxes culled from the current businesses wouldn't likely be significant.

"$50 or $100 isn't a lot of money for many homeowners, but $300 or $400 is a big chunk for striving businesses to cope with," she said.

All selectmen interviewed said they are eager to meet with the assessors to hear the board's rationale for the 120 percent classification plan.

Chairman Michael Saraco was unavailable for comment and did not return several phone calls from The Star on Tuesday.

Once selectmen vote on the rate, the information can be sent to the Department of Revenue for certification. The department's stamp of approval is required before the town can send out the tax bills.

In other business, selectmen: •WERE ADVISED an article should be placed on the fall town meeting warrant seeking $458,721 to pay for the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority assessment.

According to Bonner's memo, "an article should be placed on the November Town Meeting warrant requesting the appropriation, from available funds, of $458,721 in order for the town to be able to pay MWRA P&S assessment."

The request is a one-time occurrence, according to Bonner's memo, due mainly to the recent transition from the Metropolitan District Commission to the MWRA system.

In the future, the assessment will be a line item appropriation within the DPW budget, according to Bonner.

He concluded that there will be "no net effect" on the town's free cash position and the fiscal year 1986 tax rate will be the same as already established by selectmen.

•APPOINTED Paul Knouse as a Commissioner of Trust Funds. There is still another unexpired term, which the board expects to fill possibly next week.

Town Launches Low Income Rent Program

By AARON ZITNER

A seven-member family recently became the first Winchester clients of Chapter 707, a state program to subsidize rents for low and moderate income families.

The family moved into a town-owned apartment on Reservoir st. The town had spent $15,000 in repairs to the property.

The town holds four more 707 certificates and owns two other properties which may eventually go to certificate-holders — one on Alben st. and one on Highland ave.

Housing Authority Executive Director Jerry Keefe, whose board runs the program locally, said granting the 707 certificate was "a first and a big step for Winchester." The town has had some project grants threatened because the state does not feel the town has adequate low income housing.

A tenant is still in the Alben st. property.

Keefe said both units would probably go to Chapter 707 clients.

The town also assists families under the Chapter 705 program and more tempered. "It's a small step," she said. "It is a start."

There are many more eligible applicants than there is assistance available. The need for increased assistance to families for housing costs in Winchester is very great, Warren said.

Thirty or 31 families from in and outside Winchester are on the waiting list for the remaining four 707 certificates, Keefe said, and the top few are actively searching for housing in town.

The Housing Authority probably will ask fall Town Meeting for funds to repair the town-owned Highland ave. property. According to Housing Authority member Mary Meader, it needs to have lead paint removed and the floors repaired.

A tenant is still in the Alben st. property.

Keefe said both units would probably go to Chapter 707 clients.

The town also assists families under the Chapter 705 program and runs about 100 units of elderly housing under Chapter 467, according to Fair Housing Chairman Warren.

"But the units under 707 and 705 are very very few compared to the need in Winchester," she said.

Keefe said the town recently applied twice for federal funds under the Section 8 program, but was rejected both times.

The town was first rejected by the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development because the government felt the town applied for too few units to make the program economically feasible.

Keefe described the second rejection as a Catch-22 situation. "They said because we didn't have any Section 8 certificates they wouldn't give us any. It is rather ridiculous to reject us that way."

The Housing Authority plans to reapply for Section 8, though, Keefe said. "I think we'll just keep at 'em and hope we can get through to someone in there."

School Board Pushes For Two Town Warrant Articles

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Winchester's School Committee wants an odd number of members, and will recommend an article increasing the board from six to seven for the annual fall Town Meeting.

In its regular Tuesday meeting, the committee voted to recommend several articles for the fall Town Meeting warrant.

Another major issue addresses the state's new public education reform law.

The committee met in executive session before its regular Tuesday session to discuss the financial ramifications of the reform law — mainly the teacher pay hikes which are part of the law.

After the executive session, at least one member expressed concern that the town will have to foot a massive increase in teacher wage costs after the state hands the program over to the communities.

However, the board refused to state for the record whether it favors or opposes the Public School Improvement Law of 1985 for Winchester.

One of the committee's concerns, according to member Catherine Alexander, is the clause regarding minimum annual teacher's salary.

The act states school districts will pay all teachers hired after July 1, 1985, a minimum of $18,000 and the state will provide the necessary funds.

Alexander said this creates "a rippling effect." By raising a first-year teacher's salary, all salaries of teachers throughout the system must be raised, she said.

The potential costs are especially concerning, she said, since the state act stipulates that the town will be responsible for footing the bill after two years.

During the board's open session, Chairman Edward O'Connell said, "For implementation, we must consider placing the articles in the warrant for the November Town Meeting." O'Connell emphasized, "We have not taken any position on these as of yet."

A unanimous vote was reached to place teacher's salaries and the school improvement fund as warrants on the town meeting agenda.

The school improvement act includes annual allocations of $10 per fiscal year 1986 and for all schools in 1987. The funds will be allocated by the principal of the school, 3 elected teachers, two parents elected by the PTO, and one other person from the community chosen by the school committee.

The act stipulates that funds may be used for new and innovative programs and projects, with school committee retaining oversight authority.

O'Connell said, "Our intention is to gather members of councils so we do share in a broad way all information common to all of us. It's an exciting opportunity for parent involvement."

In other action, Superintendent Charles Mitsakos conveyed his concerns about an overvalued first grade class of 28 children at Ambrose School.

"My choice is to recommend another first grade teacher," he said.

Mitsakos indicated the school department is underbudgeted. He requested the approval of an additional first grade teacher and two aides in the elementary schools.

The board voted 5 to 1 in favor of the measure. Alexander opposed the "package deal" — indicating that she did not see the need for an aide at the Lincoln School for a class of 24 children.

The board also voted unanimously for the transfer of 3.7 acres of land transferred to the town cemetery commission.

The committee also was notified of the appointment of the new members of the Community Schools Association Education Committee for this year.

The members are: chairman, Dianne Thilly, high school officer, Phyllis Duggitt, McCall School, Pam Jervey, Ambrose School, Susan Lapan, Lincoln School, Nancy Evans, Lynch School, Liz Wolfson, Maraca School, Ralph Johnson, and Vinson-Owen School, Jane D'Ambrasio.

The board also unanimously approved implementing a federal policy that allows declining eligibility for free milk and free meals and reduced prices in Winchester schools.

By AARON ZITNER

A town committee is considering proposals from firms who want the jobs of consultant to Winchester's health insurance and worker's compensation programs.

The Special Insurance Committee, established by Town Meeting last spring, heard a presentation Wednesday night by Claims Monitoring Service Inc. of Marshfield on how the company would cut costs in the town's contract with Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

The committee also heard elaborations on a proposal by Insurance Cost Control (ICC) of Worcester that was first presented Aug. 28.

The committee will make recommendations to next year's Town Meeting on health and worker's compensation programs, which are getting more expensive every year.

The town last year paid Blue Cross-Blue Shield $944,000 to cover 550 current and retired employees — a 15 percent increase over the year before, according to Town Comptroller Joe Bonner.

The ICC proposal, the only one available at press time, says the company will not alter benefits.

Rather, ICC proposes to audit the eligibility of health care fund recipients, their hospital stays and claims forms.

The company also offers administrative and legal services and would make recommendations about Winchester's health insurance options.

ICC's fee would be $27,175. But if the town does not save $27,000 on its insurance bill, ICC will deduct the difference from its fee.

"Today, even small employers are likely to be paying thousands of dollars every year for benefits to ineligible recipients, or where someone else has the primary cost responsibility, or for inappropriate hospital stays," ICC writes in its proposal.

"Abuse of the existing health care systems has created a tremendous additional burden for employers."

Winchester pays on a "prospective premium basis," meaning that the in-suror estimates the claims in a year based on the previous year's claims. At the end of a year, adjustments in the fee are made based on the difference between estimated and actual claims.

According to ICC, this guarantees that Blue Cross-Blue Shield will always receive its money — and that they have no incentive to manage their program.

The Special Insurance Committee will most likely limit its consulting candidates to the two companies.

Compptroller Bonner doubts there

"There are only a limited number of business in the field," Bonner says.

The committee will also consider changing its coverage from Blue Cross-Master Medical to Master Health Plus, which Bonner describes as a "more managed program with more reviews," including second opinions required for some operations.

The committee is chaired by Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer. It meets next on Sept. 18 to consider consultants for Winchester's worker's compensation program.

POLICE LOG

Monday, Sept. 9

At 12:35 p.m., a resident on George rd. reported a vandal had thrown eggs at his Saab. The resident noted an Aug. 9 incident when the passenger side window of the same car was smashed and a radio and numerous cassette tapes were taken.

At 3:26 p.m., a resident reported his child's $50 black dirt bike with a rear yellow rim was stolen from MacDonald Field some time on Sat., Sept. 7.

At 11:59 p.m., an employee of the Bristol Construction Inc. reported $350 worth of stolen construction equipment from 600 Main st. Equipment included: four red staging frames, eight metal cross braces, eight screw jacks, and six two by 12 by 16 wooden planks.

Sunday, Sept. 8

At 3:14 a.m., in the Knights of Columbus Hall parking lot at the corner of Main st. and Mt. Vernon st., a car was reported on fire. According to the owner, the car ignited as it was being started. Police assisted the fire department at the scene.

At 5:02 p.m., police reported a loud party on Hemingway st. Residents called to complain of the noise and police advised the person to turn down the music.

Saturday, Sept. 7

At 2:49 p.m., a store owner on Waterfield rd. reported that a customer was harassing her. According to the police report, she stated that he had propositioned her and then began to make sexual remarks toward her. She asked him to leave and reported the incident to police.

At 5:02 p.m., a resident reported a $650 14 karat Gold Center Ruby ring with 10 diamonds missing from her house on Glen Green. The resident reported it missing to her insurance company on Aug. 18 and the company requested a police report. The ring was last seen in the kitchen and the door to the kitchen was open. There was no sign of forced entry.

At 6:24 p.m., a resident fell off a moped at Cross and Forest sts. The woman was taken to Winchester Hospital where she was treated for minor injuries and released.

At 10:58 p.m., police dispersed a group of youths in front of the Purity Foodmart.

At 11:39 p.m., on Westland ave. residents complained to police that youths were making loud noises in the nearby woods. When police arrived, the youths had left.

At 11:04 p.m. according to a police report, a group of youths gathered in front of Brigham's were creating a disturbance.

At 10:49 p.m., a disturbance was reported on High st. The group of youths were gone when police arrived.

Friday, Sept. 6

At 5:15 p.m., on Main st., the owner of a 1984 Datsun reported his car had been hit by a hit and run driver. The car was parked in the Geo Tech. Co. lot and was damaged on the driver's side.

At 8:26 p.m., a Main st. resident told police he was arrested by the state police in Andover for motor vehicle charges. His 1969 Toyota wagon was towed by a Reading tow service. The resident reported that several items were stolen from the car between the time it was towed and when he retrieved it. Police advised him to comprise a list and report it to the Reading police.

At 10:22 p.m., police dispersed a group of youths from behind Muraco School.

At 10:45 p.m., police dispersed a group of local youths from the vicinity of Charles rd. One youth asked to leave by police was a Charles rd. residence.

Thursday, Sept. 5

At 11:46 a.m., a South Gateway resident reported stolen a $400 color T.V. The burglar entered the house through a screened window on the porch. Police found no evidence.

At 2:20 p.m., a Highland ave. resident reported stolen a Smith and Wesson 9mm automatic gun and 50 rounds of ammunition, a Llama 22 long rifle, $1,700 in cash, assorted jewelry, a rare coin collection, and a VCR recorder. The burglar entered the rear of the house through sliding doors and ransacked the kitchen and all bedrooms between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

It was the second such burglary in Winchester within the week. Early last week, burglars stole cash and guns in another local home.

At 6:09 p.m., Taylor Rental on Swanton st. reported that a resident of Billerica rented a compressor for one day, on Aug. 29, and has not returned it. The resident gave a false name and address. The incident is under investigation according to a police report.

At 10 p.m. on Swanton st. police arrested a Woburn resident for operating under the influence. The resident struck another car while driving on the wrong side of Swanton st. According to the police report, the individual failed several sobriety tests and was booked and transported to Woburn Police Department and released on bail.

At 10:21 p.m., the owner of Ko Ko Boodakian and Sons on Main st. reported a broken window in the front of his store. According to the police report, a rock smashed the window and set off the alarm. Police checked the area, but found no suspects.

At 10:30 p.m., a Squire rd. resident reported a breaking and entering in progress. According to the police report, the resident described the burglar as a black male between the ages of 30 and 35, 5'10" medium build, wearing a navy blue stocking cap, and dark clothes. When police arrived he was gone. Nothing was stolen, according to police.

At 10:45 p.m., police reported a disturbance in front of Domino's Pizza on Main st. When police arrived, the group of youths had dispersed.

Applicant Fuels Liquor License Questions

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

While selectmen will meet Sept. 23 with the four finalists for the town's sole liquor store license, at least one applicant is already advertising for help.

William F. Caci, one of the four liquor store semi-finalists, has already started advertising for an assistant manager.

That has some residents concerned that the board has already made up its mind about who it will choose.

Selectman Judith Muggia, who said she has been approached by several residents, insists that no such decision has been made.

Selectman Chairman Michael Saraco refused to comment on the matter, saying he knew nothing about the advertising.

For the past two weeks, Caci has advertised for an assistant manager position in the classified section of The Winchester Star. The Arlington Advocate, and The Belmont Citizen. Caci is one of the finalists for the license, but does not own a store.

The advertisement reads: "Wine and Liquor Assistant Manager: Needed for new liquor and fine wine spirit shop to open soon in Winchester. The last line of the ad gives the name of the store as 'Uncommon Spirits and Wine'."

Reached by phone late last week, Caci said he is only trying to be able to provide selectmen with as much information as possible about his proposed store. He said he thought the board would want to know the names of all employees, which is why he placed a help-wanted ad in the paper.

The minutes of the Aug. 12 Selectman's meeting indicate Caci plans to sell beer and wine at the Albani building being constructed at 600 Main st.

Caci said he would run a store with his partners, brother Frank Caci, sister Louise Doherty, and her husband William Doherty, and Benjamin and Nancy Diminico Caci.

As of last Friday, Caci said he had already advised several potential employees that the decision for the sole liquor store license had not been reached yet.

At the Aug. 12 Selectman's meeting, where all 13 applicants were interviewed by the members of the board, Muggia asked Caci if he would be hiring any outside help.

According to the minutes, "Caci stated that he would be hiring outside help to manage the day-to-day operation but they would not be handling any of the financial aspects of the company, the family would do that."

Muggia said the recent advertising "doesn't have an impact on my thinking," Muggia added that the issue has not been discussed privately by selectmen.

The four finalists, Stuart Bowen, Nicholas A. Buonopane and Caci, all of Winchester, and Ann M. and Sean Galvin of West Medford, were ordered by selectman at the Aug. 19 meeting to submit a final application by Sept. 9.

The public hearing will be held on Sept. 23 and the final decision will be announced by Sept. 30.

Coaches, Athletic Directors Hear Talk On Drug Abuse

Middlesex County District Attorney Scott Harshbarger was the keynote speaker at "A Seminar for the Prevention of Substance Use by Athletes" recently.

Harshbarger addressed 200 high school coaches and athletic directors from throughout Middlesex County, including numerous from Winchester, about drug and alcohol prevention. The all-day seminar was hosted by the Middlesex League and the Mediplex Group, a drug and alcohol abuse center.

District Attorney Harshbarger was introduced by Middlesex County Sheriff John McGonigle. Harshbarger commended McGonigle for his support of alcohol and drug abuse prevention programs in the County.

Harshbarger told the coaches he recognized that working with teenage athletes is a difficult task at any time, but particularly in today's society.

"Today's young athletes, in fact all young people, face tough choices and decisions about drug and alcohol use with which previous generations did not have to contend. These problems know no geographic boundaries, cutting across urban and suburban communities."

The district attorney emphasized the important role that coaches can play as positive role models for high school athletes.

"It is from you that teenagers learn the importance of discipline, credibility, structure, and respect. As coaches, you have the opportunity to hold young athletes accountable for their actions and to have an impact on their lives," asserted Harshbarger.

"There is a very relevant and important relationship between you as coaches and me as the District Attorney," said Harshbarger.

Star Publisher Obtains Three More Newspapers

Century Publications Inc., publishers of The Arlington Advocate, The Winchester Star and The Belmont Citizen, has acquired the newspapers published by the Herald Publishing Co. of Belmont.

These papers are The Belmont Herald, The Watertown Sun and the Newton Villager & Transcript. In that Century publishes The Belmont Citizen on Thursdays, The Belmont Herald will now be published as a weekend paper in order to give advertisers two opportunities to reach the Belmont market and to give readers a later news deadline.

As there are other weekly newspapers in Watertown and Newton, The Sun and Villager & Transcript will also adopt a weekend publication date in order to provide readers and advertisers an alternative.

Kevin Cox, advertising manager for the Herald Publishing Co., will continue with Century Publications Inc. Kathryn Jorgensen, who with her husband C. Peter Jorgensen is owner of Century, has been named interim editor of The Belmont Herald. She holds a master's degree in journalism from Boston University and for 12 years was editor of The Arlington Advocate. Previously she worked for daily newspapers in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

Appointed as editor of The Watertown Sun and Newton Transcript, is Amy Crane, a graduate of Furman University, who has been a reporter in Naugatuck and West Hartford, Conn.

Named Assistant Editor for the two papers is Richard Manugian who was an editorial prize winner while serving as an information specialist in the Air Force. He received the George Washington Honor Medal for Journalism Excellence from the Valley Forge Foundation.

Typesetting and composition of the papers will be done at the Century building in Winchester Center while printing will continue to be handled by the former publishers, Jack Martin, his brother David and sister Marian Currier, who have retained the web offset newspaper printing business at 19 Flett rd., Belmont.

Century will operate the newly acquired papers from rented office space in the Martin building. Telephone numbers and mail addresses will remain the same.

ALCOHOL + DRIVING = DISASTER

There is no doubt that a majority of our people now believe that drunk driving is clearly wrong and that those who drive under the influence should be punished.

We now have a law that does just that. But it's going to take continued public awareness and citizen support to get to the real solution to our state's drunk driving problem.

We ask you to join us in this new effort. Please, don't drive after drinking and be sure that when your family or friends have been drinking they don't drive.

In this way, all of us will be doing our part to make our state's roadways accident free.

SENIOR SCENE

Square Dancing

When Mal and Claire Masters with other seniors open the fall schedule of square dancing this Tues., Sept. 17 at 2 p.m. at the Jenks Senior Center, they will be continuing a form of dance practiced by the early New England settlers.

Although square dancing may be considered an early American folk dance, it has its roots in European folk dances reaching back for several hundred years. In early America it bore a similarity to the English folk steps and to the French quadrille, the latter becoming more popular after the Boston tea incident.

As the settlers moved westward, the western or cowboy dance evolved. The Appalachian Mountain dance and the Kentucky country dance added flavor to the original New England variety. Later, the influence of the Spanish and Mexican dances of the Southwest lead to new rhythmic patterns.

As practiced at the Jenks Center, square dancing is moderately strenuous and contributes to the physical well-being of the participants. New friendships are made through these enjoyable dance sessions.

The popular "caller" of previous seasons, Milburn Dixon, returns to lead the group. Mil, formerly a teacher in the Winchester school system, creates a high level of congeniality with his calls and provides instruction, variety, and enjoyment. Singles are welcome to share in the fun at the Jenks Center next Tuesday at 2 p.m.

Seniors Day

The State Office of Elder Affairs is holding "The Governor's Cup" day on Sun., Sept. 29 on Charles st., between the Boston Common and Gardens.

Dedicated to fitness, there will be a 5 mile road race, a 3 mile competitive walk, and for the less athletically inclined, a 1 mile fun walk. The fun walk starts at noon.

In addition to Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, Bobby Orr and Johnny Kelley will be present for this day of fun and fitness. Entertainment and refreshments will start in the morning and continue through the afternoon.

Those who plan to participate in one of the walks, telephone 727-4092 for details.

Energy Tax Credits

The federal energy tax credit program available since 1978 is due to expire this year. Seniors are reminded that if the energy efficiency of your home can be improved, the costs may be allowable for a tax credit. IRS Publication 903 "Energy Credits for Individuals", contains full information about weatherization work that meets the credit requirements.

Jenks Center Programs

As the summer days lead into the fall season, local seniors are reminded of the diversification of programs available to all at the Jenks Center. The monthly NEWS LETTER is free to all seniors. A telephone call will add your name to the mailing list.

In addition to a vast array of recreational and social activities, the educational program includes lectures and seminars on topics of current concern to seniors, a Book Club, and a Men's Discussion Group. This latter group meets next Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. Call the Center to inquire about attendance.

Health improvement plays a dominant role at the Jenks Center. Exercise classes, the twice-monthly Get Well Clinic and the special screening clinics and inoculations, sponsored by the Board of Health and other local organizations, are available to all seniors.

Most meaningful to the professional staff and volunteers at the Jenks Center are those programs by their very nature receiving little publicity. Personal counselling, outreach activities, and widow-to-widow programs receive top priority.

Telephone the Jenks Center for details on any of its programs.

Oncology Services Move To New Area

Oncology Services at the Symmes Hospital Division of Choate-Symmes Hospitals Inc. has moved from the Multi-Service Center into newly-renovated 3A wing in the main hospital building, which will soon incorporate diabetes and laser treatment programs.

The department's move to its new location is intended to enhance patient convenience because virtually all outpatient services, such as Laboratory Services, Radiology Services, Physical Therapy, and Social Work Services are close at hand.

Most of crust hidden

Of all the planets, Earth is the only one with oceans that make 70 percent of its crust inaccessible to view.

Codeine from poppies

The key ingredient in 65 million prescriptions dispensed by America's drugstores in 1983 was codeine, an opium-poddy derivative. Other products of the flower are morphine, opium and heroin.

Library Honors Twitchell

Jean Twitchell, who recently retired after a 23-year career at the Winchester Public Library, including 13 years as children's librarian, was honored at a reception on Saturday, Sept. 7, hosted by the Director and Trustees of the Library.

During a short program introduced by Library Director Matthew Sperber, trustee, Alice Mirak praised Twitchell's achievements and her dedication to the library and to the children of Winchester.

Likening her career at the library to a school career, Mirak presented her with a "diploma" in the form of a framed pen and ink drawing of the library building.

Heid Zeibig, children's librarian, read a poem contributed by Margot Stiles, and McCall student Jennifer Delaney recalled her visit to the library.

All thanked the librarian veteran for the warm, inviting atmosphere she created and maintained in the junior library.

Prayer Series Will Begin

Immaculate Conception Parish of Winchester Woburn is presenting "Biblical Prayer: Dialogue of the Heart," a Scripture series focusing on the growth of prayer in both the Old and New Covenants.

The series of six talks will address itself to such topics as: How did the Old Testament people adore, thank and ask forgiveness in prayer, and how did this change with the coming of the New Covenant?

The series will be held Sept. 17, 24,

Oct. 1, 8, 15, and 22 at the Immaculate Conception School from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

The program will be conducted by the Rev. Leonard J. Tighe, a diocesan priest assigned to the Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain. Tighe has been a teacher in adult education for many years, specializing in the prayer life, spiritual development and scripture. East/West mystic theology, Islamic theology, liturgical art, iconography, and Marian theology.

The Immaculate Conception School is located on Sheridan circle, off Main st. (Route 38), on the Winchester/Woburn line. The fee for the 6 sessions is $10. Registration will take place from 7 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the opening session. Participants are asked to bring a Bible. Refreshments will be served.

This program begins the second year of the Scripture Study Series at Immaculate Conception. The series has been dedicated to the memory of the Rev. Kingsley E. Dalpadado, OMI, who was in residence at Immaculate Conception for two years. The Rev. Dalpadado was a Biblical scholar and author, whose life was dedicated to spreading the Word of God.

St. Eulalia's Open Series

A workshop for the parents of high school students will be Tuesday, Sept. 17, from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. at St. Eulalia Church, 50 Ridge st., Winchester.

The speaker is the Rev. Peter Walker, chaplain at Bishop Fenwick High School, Peabody, and an adolescent counselor. He will address such issues as, understanding the changes in the life of the early teenager, how parents can help their teens meet the challenges and opportunities of the high school years.

High Holiday Services Planned

The Jewish Congregation of Winchester will hold services in celebration of the High Holidays: Sept. 15, at 8 p.m., Erev Rosh Hashanah; Sept. 16, at 10 a.m., Rosh Hashanah; Sept. 17, at 9:30 a.m., Rosh Hashanah study; Sept. 24, at 6:30 p.m., Kol Nidre; and Sept. 25, at 10 a.m., Yom Kippur service, at 5:30 p.m., study group and Yisker and concluding service at 6 p.m.

All services will be conducted at the Jewish congregation's headquarters at the First Congregational Church of Winchester located on Church st. in Winchester Center.

League Sponsors Financial Forum

"It's not the thought that counts, it's the money," reads a sign in the office of one citizen activist.

The League of Women Voters' upcoming public forum on town finance aims to show that in fiscal policy issues, thought does count. Creative thinking is the goal of this regional L.W.V. forum, entitled "Whither Town Finance?" "Breaking Out of Our Fiscal Box." It will be held Wednesday, Sept. 18 from 8:45 to 9:30 p.m. at Arlington Town Hall, 730 Mass. ave., Arlington.

With many local officials, thinking about fiscal matters tends to stop at the bottom line: "Where's the beef?" Indeed, Prop. 2½, the probable end of federal aid, and high state spending have combined to put severe stress on local budgets and to preclude broad long-range thinking and planning. Problems and solutions tend to be defined on a narrow local basis.

In an effort to encourage local leaders to think about the broad picture, the Leagues of Winchester, Arlington, Belmont and Lexington will co-sponsor the regional forum. It brings together a panel of legislators and officials to brainstorm ways to break away from conventional thinking on town/state fiscal policy.

The league position on fiscal policy supports a "state and local tax structure that will have an equitable impact on taxpayers and adequately support state services..." and supports "distribution of state aid in a manner which will equalize municipal resources." The panelists will be exploring these topics.

Public debate about fiscal policy issues is expected to heat up in the coming year as the Governor's Tax Reform Commission and Legislature's Local Aid Commission gear up for action. There is also speculation that the 1986 ballot will contain statewide referenda on local aid and state spending.

For more information about the forum or about the League contact Jane Rutherford, 11 Sanborn st.

Local Woman Has A Penchant For Pugs Her Hobby Has Grown Into Serious Business

By MARY ANN MCCARTHY

Rounding the corner of Joan DeVrieze's kitchen, a visitor is greeted by three barking, gyrating dogs, whooping and hurling themselves into the air.

"Ideally, some day the doorbell will ring and I'll say 'down' (she moves her arm in an arc toward the floor) and they'll all lie quietly," says DeVrieze, laughing and apologizing for the display of dog enthusiasm.

Measures less subtle than a carefully placed arm are called for today. DeVrieze douses each dog with a spray of water and their bubbling enthusiasm cools to a simmer.

To DeVrieze, these dogs are her "hobby," her "responsibility," her "companions." The Winchester housewife has shown her dogs at dog shows and entered two in obedience trials.

Since she first began training a mutt named Ginger seven years ago, DeVrieze has gained knowledge and enthusiasm for her sport and sharpened her sense of competition.

She moved first from mutt to purebred, then from a relatively docile breed to an energetic, aggressive — and more highly trainable — dog.

Tibbits and Pugit, six-year-old purebred pugs, have completed the first of three levels of obedience training, earning Companion Dog certificates. These dogs — whose lineage, she says, extends to the 1500s in China — were shown but did not earn Champion status.

DeVrieze explains that neither of these small, tan-and-black dogs possesses the physical perfection or temperament to excel in competition. She says she will continue to train them in the higher levels of obedience but will not push them to compete.

DeVrieze is more ambitious for her latest acquisition, a one-year-old silky terrier named Winky. The toy terrier has won at 10 shows since May and is "probably just one dog show away" from earning the title of Champion, she says.

Winky's awards decorate the refrigerator and hang on the kitchen wall.

DeVrieze shuffles through a handful of ribbons, picking out a blue one marked "First" and a purple one marked "Winners." "Blue ribbons are beautiful, but purple ribbons are the best because you get points, and without points you can't be a Champion," she says grinning.

Pointing to an elaborate purple-and-yellow ribbon, won from the Providence County Kennel Club on July 27, she explains, "This was a big win. We beat a Champion that was No. 1 in the toy group twice."

DeVrieze says it is hard to find competition for Winky because there aren't a lot of silky terriers in the area. She has gone to dog shows in Connecticut and New York and this month will send Winky to a show in Canada with a professional handler, she says.

The gray-blue and tan-terrier, who currently "can only look beautiful," will soon begin obedience training, DeVrieze says. She hopes to train Winky to the highest level of obedience within three years.

To earn an obedience certificate, DeVrieze says, dogs "must pass a very specific test three times under three different judges at the American Kennel Club."

Levels of obedience range from Companion Dog, requiring heeling and coming when called; Companion Dog Excellent, requiring retrieving and jumping over obstacles; and Utility Dog, requiring such subtle skills as scent discrimination and responding to commands by hand signal only, she says.

Each level requires a greater amount of independent decision making by the dog, she says.

DeVrieze says she enters about 15 dog shows yearly, enrolls her dogs in obedience classes and belongs to two dog clubs, the Concord Dog Training Club and the Charles River Dog Training Club in Newton.

Although her husband, Theo, and two teen-age children consider her hobby "an eccentricity," DeVrieze describes her involvement as "moderate."

She says she is not interested in high-stakes showing and doesn't let the sport interfere with family activities.

"There are some people who own motor homes and go to dog shows almost every weekend," she says. "They hit the road like some small circus. A lot of them are very successful and have small kennels. Some even become professional handlers."

The "top, top dog-show game" is even more outrageous, she says. "I heard a rumor that a top Maltese in the country was in a divorce settlement and was leased to a third party for $30,000 for three years."

"At dog shows, you meet the richest of the rich and incredibly poor people who put what they've got into this because it gives them ego satisfaction to win," she says.

DeVrieze says her family, initially skeptical of her zeal for the sport, is beginning to see things her way.

"Now that I'm winning, my family is happy. They rub their hands together with glee," she says. "But they still think I spend a lot of time with my dogs."

'Winky' is bound to win a prize...

DeVrieze gets a sloppy kiss from her prize pugs.

Health Care Cost Issue Is A Complex Dilemma

By John C. Hoy
President, New England Board of Higher Education

Campaigns for health care cost containment are continuing without sufficient understanding of the complex economic relationship existing between health care delivery, academic medicine and the very structure of New England life.

While many government leaders are aware that New England as a whole is tangibly strengthened by the presence of medical schools and affiliated teaching hospitals, the public is largely unaware that it is served by the most distinguished concentration of academic medicine in the world.

The region's academic health centers (comprising nine medical schools and their associated schools of allied health professionals and teaching hospitals), as well as many of New England's bio-medical industrial firms, non-profit hospitals, and laboratories, are internationally and nationally prominent in medical research.

How will this distinguished level of quality be maintained? How economically significant is health science research and education to New England itself?

The New England Board of Higher Education (NEBHE) has announced a six-state study of the relationship between academic health centers and the regional economy.

Conducted by a NEBHE Commission drawn from medicine, business, and public service, the study will determine how much the centers contribute — in jobs, wages and as magnets for research support — to the regional economy.

The Commission will review the major issues the centers face, including the potential for deterioration of financial support fueled in part by concern over rising health care costs during the past decade and the impact of cost containment initiatives.

In addition to assessing the centers' present economic contributions, the NEBHE commission will determine the current and potential contribution of bio-medical and bio-technical corporate development in New England arising from academic research in the region.

The two-year study will investigate ways of strengthening New England as an international center for development of the bio-medical industry which has gained stature here and faces growing competition from other countries. Some facts already known are:

- Medical instrument and supply corporations in New England currently represent a $2.0 billion industry.
- The Academic Health Centers of New England and MIT have produced technical and entrepreneurial leaders for over half the medical and bio-tech firms in the U.S.
- More than 120 internationally recognized advanced bio-medical and bio-technical corporations have been created in New England recently.

The study will be overseen by NEBHE's Commission on Academic Health Centers and the Economy of New England — a newly created 30-member panel composed of leaders in government, industry and medicine. The Washington, D.C.-based Association of Academic Health Centers has cooperated fully in the development of the project through AAHC President John Hogness, M.D.

The Commission chairman is Dr. James M. Howell, senior vice president and chief economist of the Bank of Boston, who three years ago headed NEBHE's Commission on Higher Education and the Economy of New England which produced A Threat to Excellence, the first report in the national parade of publications on the condition of education in the U.S.

Howell indicated, "We suspect our analysis will clearly reveal that the region's nine academic health centers have a far-reaching beneficial effect on New England's economy and its quality of life yet their potential role in economic development is relatively untapped."

Keeping in mind the region has only 5.3 percent of the U.S. population, key measures of federal allocation of resources for health research and development in New England reveal the following facts among others:

- Of the $2.6 billion in research and development funds allocated by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Resources (the largest federal R&D budget), New England universities with medical schools received $275 million on 10.5 percent of the national total.

• New England received 19.5 percent of all National Institute of Health (NIH) Fellowships and 18.9 percent of all NIH Training Grants in the U.S. in FY 1982, reflecting an additional measure of the strength of graduate health science education in the region. In addition, NIH Research Grant Awards provided New England with 15.1 percent of the national total.

• New England's share of the new Small Business Innovation Research Grant program for the National Institute of Health in FY 1983 represented 23.4 percent of all grants awarded in the U.S.

• New England voluntary hospitals receive $84 million or 38.5 percent of all federal research and development and R&D plant support. Of the top 30 U.S. hospitals, the 12 New England-ranked institutions receive 45.7 percent of all such funds nationally.

The region's nine academic health centers (defined as a medical school and related allied health graduate programs together with major affiliated teaching hospitals) include Brown, Boston, Harvard, Tufts and Yale Universities, the Universities of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont, and Dartmouth College. The Maine Medical Center is also participating in the study, although Maine is without a medical school.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology has agreed to join in the NEBHE analysis since it contributes significantly to health-related research in the region with fully one-third of all MIT research and development today engaged in bio-medicine, bio-engineering fields.

Regional data reveals the nine medical schools currently training 3,993 medical students or 6.0 percent of the nation's students earning their M.D., many from other states beyond the region.

The medical schools and their affiliated teaching hospitals attract 5452 or 7.3 percent of U.S. M.D.s to New England's 338 residency programs.

New England has consistently been a world leader in medical research with a series of firsts stretching from the first program on vaccination in 1792 to bio-magnetics research in 1985.

New England is among the leading regions of the U.S. in the number of physicians per 100,000 of population.

A measure of how interdependent the New England states are is the ratio of replacement physicians from the state's own population (regardless of where they are trained). Vermont is able to replace physicians as they retire, although many will be trained outside of Vermont.

Massachusetts, on the other hand, because of the higher number of physicians per 100,000 of population will not quite be able to do so. Allowance must be made for the fact that a higher proportion of the Massachusetts physicians are engaged in teaching and research than are physicians in other states.

The table shows the number and rank of physicians per 100,000 of population in each state and how many state residents per 100,000 enter medical school. The ratio of physicians to state residents entering medical schools reveals whether or not sufficient residents enter to replace the current number of physicians in the state as they retire or leave practice.

Note that the ratio for each state is equivalent to the number of years that the average doctor would have to practice in order to be replaced by a new medical graduate.

The Commission on Academic Health Centers and the Economy of New England met formally for the first time on Sept. 9 in Boston, following a year of extensive planning sessions. Severe financial pressures straining the budgets of academic health centers form the backdrop for the Commission's work. A number of Commissioners have expressed concern that the traditional Academic Health Centers may rapidly become a "smokestack industry."

New England academic health centers are faced with growing financial hardships, stemming from cutbacks in Medicare and Medicaid, state caps on hospital service charges and a determination by insurance companies and corporations to slow skyrocketing reimbursement rates. Alternative lower cost delivery systems are developing through the region.

Like tax-exempt higher education institutions in general, academic health centers are also viewed in some quarters as a tax drain on the municipalities where they are based. Under political pressure many colleges and universities have agreed to pay property taxes or make contributions in lieu of taxes.

These problems have been aggravated by the diminishing value of federal dollars in support of higher education, particularly for research and development over the past decade.

On the other hand, there are hopeful signs. There is no question that academic health centers are substantially responsible for a climate of growth in bio-medical corporations in the region.

The commission will investigate how academic health centers can attract expansion of pharmaceutical, diagnostic and medical equipment companies to New England as well as enhance regional capacity as a prominent "incubator" for startup industries in new health-related technologies and processes.

While New England is currently a leader bio-pharmaceutical research, actual production of bio-pharmaceutical products may take place elsewhere, particularly in Europe and Japan. Other nations are providing venture capital, tax incentives, guidance in building laboratories and direct university assistance in performing clinical trials on products. Jim Howell argues: "It is important for this region to capture a share of the new processes and production jobs generated from bio-med and bio-tech R&D."

The Commission will also review how graduate medical education and health care delivery can adapt to new systems, processes, and technologies to better serve the public without increasing costs.

In creating the Commission and throughout the planning process, I have become convinced that the economic benefits, present and future, of New England academic health centers must be understood by the general public and by policymakers in business, government, and education, in order to analyze the impact of unwise or imprudent efforts at containing short term costs at the expense of long term maintenance of one of this nation's most distinguished concentrations of medical education and research.

While the issues to be confronted are complex and in some cases controversial, the task must be addressed.

The two-year study will conclude with region-wide briefings and wide publication of Commission findings directed toward more complete public understanding of the powerful resource the academic health centers represent and their significant impact upon the economic vitality and health of the population of New England.

John C. Hoy is president of the New England Board of Higher Education.

Lunch Can Be Serious Business

By TERRY MAROTTA

A friend of mine tells me that from all he can observe, there is considerable tension involved in having a business lunch with a member of the opposite sex because of a certain awkwardness about how to handle goodbyes at the end of it.

Now this tension only emerges, he says, if the two lunchers work for different organizations. If they work for the same organization, what they're having isn't a business lunch in the first place, but more of a lunch lunch.

A lunch lunch between co-workers has no real ending, properly speaking, since its participants can grouse about work the whole time they're having it. blow their noses on their napkins if they like, then slouch back to the office together, picking their teeth and sighing heavily as it moves into view. Goodbyes are wholly unnecessary.

Things are a little more complicated when you're talking about the real business lunch between a man and a woman, according to my friend.

I had never thought about all this before he brought the subject up, but I guess goodbyes are tricky things to handle just right, by their very nature.

If it's someone in your immediate circle of concern that you're bidding farewell to, you're on familiar ground at least. You can turn up their coat collars and smooth back their hair, like all those loving moms in the aspirin commercials.

You can tell them to look both ways, and fasten their seat belts, and not get too tired — I trot out a regular litany of this stuff when I say my own motherly goodbyes.

If it's someone who means essentially nothing to you, the goodbyes come easy too. You can just tell these people to have a nice day, today's version of the parting curse, one used with withering effectiveness by insolent checkout girls at the supermarket.

"See ya" works well too, carrying with it the subtle implication of "Not too soon, I hope."

But when you're saying goodbye to someone you don't know well, the waters are a little trickier to navigate. Add to this the fact that your co-luncher works for an outfit that yours does business with: if you mess up on the niceties, there could be repercussions clear up the ladder to the executive washroom. And add to this the fact that the person's a member of the opposite sex. It's all very complicated, according to my friend.

"See ya" would be very much out of line at the end of this kind of lunch. Same with "Have a nice day." You'd think a handshake and some parting pleasantries would do it, but intergender handshakes are still tough on a lot of people, believe it or not.

Men especially, don't know if the lady will welcome one or be offended by it; if she'll offer the oldtime lady's shake, which feels like a handful of soggy french fries, or extend the hearty male squeeze more common in today's world.

As I think more about all this, I see there may be some truth to my friend's observation.

I have business lunches myself in the course of selling my column to various editors. Many of them fall in, to my friend's category since so many newspapers are still headed by men.

One particular lunch comes to mind now, a lunch in the course of which I knocked over my water glass, pushed the wrong button on the frozen yogurt machine causing it to exude endless drizzles of yogurt onto the floor below, and generally behaved, what with all the whooping, hopping around and mute gesticulating, like all four Marx Brothers rolled into one.

The goodbyes did seem a bit strained that day, come to think of it now.

I turned up the man's coat collar for him, anyway, and reminded him to look both ways on his walk back to the office. He slammered a bit, and edged toward the door. I didn't even ask him if he needed to visit the bathroom.

Maybe his lack of ease stemmed from the fact that he's just not sufficiently accustomed to cross-gender handshakes. Maybe, as my friend says, he's just not sophisticated enough to know how to behave yet at the close of a co-ed lunch.

Commission

Editor of The Star:

It seems appropriate after the Tuesday, Aug. 27 meeting of the Winchester Conservation Commission that they, and the town, should be congratulated on their wise decision to turn down the Notice of Intent for developing the wetlands at 273 Forest st., Winchester.

Careful analysis of the land, the wetlands regulations, and the possible impact that a development would have on this area was thoroughly studied and I feel that the right decision was made by the commission.

Very truly yours,

Will Be Missed

Letter To The Editor:
One of Winchester's long standing

(35 years) Town Meeting Members is moving to Cape Cod. This gentleman has also served on the Finance Committee, Capital Improvements Planning Committee, Committee on Names, Central Business District Study Committee, Metropolitan Area Planning Council and the Planning Board.

Otto Schaefer, you will be missed by many at Town Meeting. Now, who will ask the moderator for a "Personal Privilege"? Maybe we should retire your seat from the back right hand section of the auditorium or at least place "O.S. sat here since 49".

The Cape's gain is Winchester's loss. Mr. Schaefer, if you decide to run for Town Meeting in your new community, I will be glad to hold a sign for you at your "new town dump".

Good Luck to you and your wife in your new home and thank you for your commitment to Winchester!

Sincerely,
Noreen M. Arcari

Teenager Complains

His response was that he lived here when he was our age and there was nothing to do in Winchester and he didn't complain. That was around 25 years ago.

Everyone also thinks that the teens in Winchester have a drinking problem. What else are we supposed to spend our money on in Winchester? I'm not saying it's right, but that's what about three-quarters of the kids in Winchester spend most of their money on. There's nothing to do tonight, so why not get wasted?

Sincerely,

Mrs. Nancy M. Reid

Nancy Madden R. Peter Reid Are Married

Nancy Elizabeth Madden and R. Peter Reid Jr. were married Aug. 10 at the St. John the Evangelist Church, New Hartford, N.Y. They were married by Reverend Monsignor John Madden, in a double ring nuptial mass uncle of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Eugene Madden, Jr. and the late Nancy Strohecker Madden of New Hartford, N.Y. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Miriam A. Reid and the late Robert Reid of Winchester.

The bride was escorted down the aisle by her father, Eugene Madden. The wedding reception was held at the home of the bride in New Hartford, N.Y. in the foothills of the Adirondacks.

The best man was Mr. Douglas W. Black of Woburn and the matron of honor was Mrs. David H. Swanson, sister of the bride of Manassas, Va. The bridesmaids were Laurie A.

Albertine, of Ft. Worth Texas, Sara Dahill of Malden, Shirley Moore of Ellicott City, Maryland, and Elizabeth Paladino, of New Hartford, N.Y., all friends of the bride.

The ushers were Douglas Black of Woburn, Charles Cullinane, of Woburn, John Madden of Contooscook, of N.H., brother of the bride, Joseph Reid, of Winchester, and Mark Reid of Winchester and brothers of the groom.

The bride is a graduate of New Hartford High School, 1976, University of Vermont, 1980, B.A. Political Science, Cum Laude, Phi Beta Kappa. She is employed by New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., Burlington, as a Group Pension Underwriter.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Winchester High School, 1974, and attended Boston College, graduated from North Shore Community College, in Beverly. He is employed by the Town of Winchester Fire Dept. as a Firefighter-Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) and by National Cellular Telephone, Watertown, as a communications consultant.

The bride wore a Priscilla's gown of white silk organza, cap sleeves, bodice of ivory Alencon lace, chapel length train, chapel length veil with a border of Alencon lace with roses. The bride carried a cascade of white and pink sweetheart roses, stephanotis, and ivy.

The matron of honor wore a full length Taffeta spaghetti strap dress, covered by a Balero jacket with a high ruffled neck and short Bishop sleeves. The bridesmaids wore the same dress in pink while the matron of honor wore the dressing.

The couple spent their wedding trip in Bermuda and are now residing in Winchester.

General Computer Co. in Cambridge Mr. Grazewski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grazewski of Wakefield, graduated from Wakefield High School, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and from the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Grazewski is a management consultant at Coopers and Lybrand in Boston.

A Nov. 23 wedding is planned.

Andersen Remodeling Center
171 Summer Street, Arlington, Mass. 02174 641-0006

Andersen Remodeling concentrates on design, repair and installation.

After 12 years as a general contractor, Dick Andersen decided to specialize in one aspect of the building trade. As the owner/proprietor of Andersen Remodeling, 471 Summer St., Arlington, Andersen concentrates on the design, repair, and installation of bathrooms and kitchens.

At Andersen's Summer St. showroom you can see bathrooms and kitchens set up with the actual materials you can buy for your home. Andersen carries two lines of cabinets — Marvell and Scheirich. Scheirich is a quality stock cabinet available in specific sizes and colors. Marvell cabinets are custom-made to fit the specifications of a certain room.

"I can build a Marvell cabinet to virtually any size," explains Andersen. "If you can draw it, I can build it."

If you are building that dream house or room, you can have Andersen do it or you can do it yourself. Andersen will advise you as to a suitable design and can build your cabinets and install your entire bathroom or kitchen.

Or, you can purchase the components from Andersen and install it yourself, saving on installation and on the fixtures themselves.

For those of us less mechanically inclined, Andersen offers complete expert installation on all kitchens and bathrooms. And if you are remodeling your home and need an electrician, plumber or other professional, Andersen will obtain one to make the entire process go more smoothly and to insure quality workmanship.

In fact, Andersen can supervise and design an entire addition to your home if you so desire.

He offers free estimates and advice to anyone who contracts him. And, his prices on cabinets, vanity cabinets and installation are competitive with anyone's. His work is also always first quality.

In addition, Andersen also installs a wide variety of wood, metal and vinyl windows. "You can't beat my prices on windows and installation," Andersen explains.

For bathroom and kitchen repair, design, or installation, for the installation of windows, or for the addition of an entire room or section to your home, call Dick Andersen. Andersen Remodeling is open Monday-Friday 9-5, Saturdays, 10-2.

STAR SPORTS

School Facilities Available

Winchester residents will again be able to take advantage of the high school's gymnasium facilities this winter, as the 13th season of the "Open Gym" program opens Sept. 23.

As is tradition, the gym at the Skillings rd. school will be open Monday and Thursday nights from 7 to 10 for adults only.

The program is open to all residents who want to keep fit, to exercise for health and enjoyment and to meet new and old friends.

According to program coordinators, there has been an increased interest expressed by non-residents. For this reason, they have announced a fee schedule for the new season.

All Winchester residents with proper proof of residency will be charged $1, while non-residents will be charged $2.

The weekend schedule will go into effect on Sat., Dec. 7. From that date on, the gym will be open Saturdays and Sundays from 12:30 to 4:30, in addition to the Monday and Thursday hours.

During the weekends, the program is open to all students in the 7th grade and older, as well as to adults. The fee is $1 for students.

The program offers many features — however, the main event played is basketball. No courts are reserved and all games are offered on a first come basis.

There is a volleyball group that meets regularly on Monday evenings. For others, there is also a weight room available.

Paddle ball is another sport offered. Participants should bring their own paddle balls or tennis balls; paddles are provided.

Winter joggers also can take advantage of the gym to run laps during particularly brutal winter weather. Eleven and one-half laps is equal to one mile, according to program coordinators.

No locker rooms, showers or telephones are available, so participants should be dressed appropriately and make transportation arrangements ahead of time.

During school vacations, the gym will be open during its regularly scheduled hours only. If school is cancelled due to inclement weather or any other reason, the gym is also closed.

The only entrance to the gym will be from the Nelson st. area, where parking is provided in the rear lot.

For more information, call the school.

The Runner's Eye

By Steve Norton

Runner's Eye

Beside running 20 miles a week, I'd like to begin a swim program. What is your feelings on swimming?

T. Y. Yeun, Arlington

Dear Mr. Yeun,

Because it involves so many major muscle groups and does not have a jarring effect on the feet or legs, swimming is an excellent aerobic activity to include with running, and as an alternate sport.

Swimming provides cardiovascular fitness, while building muscle strength and endurance. The best stroke to use is the crawl because it is the most efficient and the fastest.

Dear Runner's Eye

Should a runner run with a fever?

J.K. Belmont

A fever is an indication of an infection in the body. A fever is the body's defense mechanism. A sort of alert that something is wrong.

Since a fever is a stress, as in running, the body is in a weakened state. Running should be avoided. A couple of days off will not affect your conditioning. Resting will give your body the time it needs to recover.

Good Luck

A number of inquiries have come across my desk on road races for September. I hope the following schedule of races will help.

It Looks Like A Good Year For Sachemettes

By DAVID DEMARCO

The Winchester girls soccer team has picked up right where it left off last year, as the Sachemettes are undefeated in pre-season play.

On Tues., Sept. 3, the Sachemettes played host to Dedham in their first pre-season scrimmage of the year. Winchester was victorious 6-0.

Beverly was defeated 4-1 the following day by the Sachems Thursday, Sept. 5 brought about another big win, as the Sachemettes scrimmaged against Salem High, winning 6-0.

The following Saturday morning, Sept. 7, was the annual jamboree, held in Wellesley. Each team played a 20-minute half against three other opponents.

The Sachemettes opened strong as they handled Dover/Sherborn by a score of 3 to 0. Foxboro was next in line, and is reputed to be one of the strongest teams in the state. Winchester held their own and came away with a scoreless tie.

The best came last, as Winchester scrimmaged their arch-rival Concord/Carlisle. The game was called as Winchester's left fullback Melissa Sheehan received a twisted ankle.

The two rivals will face each other on Oct. 14 at Winchester, in their only meeting of the regular season.

Team member Debbie Maida, said the Sachemettes are strong in all departments and especially support tive of each other. The team seems very together. There is a good combination of personalities and the chemistry looks right, she added.

The Sachemettes have scheduled two games this week. On Tuesday they were to face Belmont at home and tomorrow Wakefield will come to town.

Sachems '11' Stops Billerica

By DAVID DEMARCO

The Winchester Sachems completed their second pre-season game Sept. 7, defeating Billerica 27-14.

Although the score shows Winchester clearly came out on top, Billerica was the first team to make it to the score board.

Billerica took control on their first possession and marched 80 yards for a touchdown — thanks to the strong throwing arm of Dave Lyons.

The Sachems didn't let Billerica get them down, though. They got right back into motion, quickly marching the ball to Billerica's 15 yard line.

With first and 10, quarterback Mike White ran an "18 bootleg pass" that found junior tight end John Matheson open in the end zone to even the score.

Winchester was the benefactor of the first break of the day, as Billerica fumbled the football deep in the Sachems end. The Sachem offense promptly took over and drove to the Billerica four yard line.

T.J. Della Salla scored from four yards out on an unbalanced right "24 power" to push the Sachems in front 13 to 7. "The offense is great. Whitey is an ideal option quarterback," said Della Salla after the game.

Winchester received the ball to start the second half. On the first play of the offensive series, Mike White took an option right and ran the ball 70 yards for the touchdown.

The Sachems were up 21 to 7 as the Billerica passing attack began to work. Billerica's Dave Lyons to W.R. Paul Burns combination was chewing up the Winchester secondary. Billerica halfback Brian Cooley took a 20-yard pass for their second touchdown of the day.

With the score 21 to 14, both teams seized the opportunity to bring in substitution players. Quarterback John DeMarco threw a look-in pass that went for 60 yards to Vinnie Bennicassi, to bring the Sachems to Billerica's five yard line.

Winchester's Pickle Murray scored his third touchdown of the pre-season on "24 power" to put the game away for the Sachems at 27 to 14.

The Sachem offense looked strong. However, tri-captain Mike White said after the game that he felt they could have looked even better. "The weather took away a little of our offense, but we did our job," said White.

As in the previous pre-season test, the Sachems pass rush was weak. Consequently, Billerica had a lot of time to throw. Luckily for the Sachems, however, Billerica also made far too many mistakes to take advantage of the Winchester weakness.

Left safety T. J. Della Salla said after the game, "We need a little help in the defensive secondary. The rush was weak, too. We're getting better each time, though."

Winchester noseguard David Christopher noted, "We haven't played as a unit a whole lot and that does make a big difference."

In defense of the Sachems, though, they are using only a three-man rush and have yet to implement any lineback blitzes at this pre-season stage.

The absence of top player Mike "Boss" Vozzella with strained knee ligaments hasn't helped, either.

Offensively, halfback Della Salla had the most yards on the ground. Quarterback Mike White was excellent, as he had an almost flawless day at the helm.

Tomorrow — that's Fri., Sept. 13 the Sachems travel to Watertown High to participate in the annual Middlesex League Jamboree. Winchester will play Arlington beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Here are a few pointers on what to look for from each team.

Arlington was 10 to 0 last season and has graduated a lot of starters. Arlington also runs the Wing-T. On offense, Winchester can expect Arlington coach John Hanley to consult Bill McKeon, his offensive tackle, often.

The Sachems will have to shut down fullback Steve Morrison, who is sure to see most of the action for Arlington.

Offensively, the Sachems should be able to run on a very inexperienced Arlington defensive line. Arlington's defensive strength is in two secondary players, who will likely try to string out the option.

Choate-Symmes Road Race Oct. 6

The "Health Is No 1" 6.2-mile road race is being sponsored by Choate-Symmes Health Services and Converse, Inc., Sunday, Oct. 6.

The event will begin at noon at the intersection of Summer and Forest streets in Arlington.

Registration forms may be obtained by calling or visiting the Choate-Symmes Community Relations Department, located at the Symmes Hospital Division weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

A Big Tennis Tourney Winds Down

74 Entries Compete

With only one final match remaining to be played, the Winchester Junior Town Tennis Tournament is about to be wrapped up for 1985. It was a busy three days, with 74 entries competing for the eight championships. Good tennis and good sportsmanship was evident all through the tournament.

In the 15-and-under boys' singles final on Thurs. Sept. 5, Eliot Foley emerged the victor from a draw of 19. He held back the rush of Scott Herlihy to win the championship 6-3, 7-6.

In a fine match, both players displayed their awesome talents with hard, deep ground strokes and sharp volleys. Foley had defeated Paul Marshall in the semifinals, while Herlihy bested Mike McGeehan.

A small draw in the girls' 15-and-under singles didn't dampen their enthusiasm, as Laura Tozzo defeated Jennifer Bush in the finals on Sun., Sept. 8. 6-2, 6-3 after beating Meg Mullen in the semis. Bush had downed Danielle Berkhout in the other semifinal match.

In the 12-and-under singles, both the boys' and girls' finals were long, hard-fought marathons. Matt Fuller was in a real battle with Albie Keenan before holding him off in the third set of win 6-4, 1-6, 6-2.

The girls' final took almost three hours, as Sara Ciotti outlasted Carrie Tozza 6-4, 6-7, 7-6. In a match which could have gone either way, the girls showed amazing patience and good humor. Ciotti had downed Sarah Fuller had defeated Kevin Marshall in the semis and Keenan bested Mike Houllahan to get to the finals.

The girls' final took almost three hours, as Sara Ciotti outlasted Carrie Tozza 6-4, 6-7, 7-6. In a match which could have gone either way, the girls showed amazing patience and good humor. Ciotti had downed Sarah Power and Tozza had defeated Leanne Infravaina in the semifinals to advance.

In the 15-and-under boys' doubles, Eliot Foley teamed up with Scott Herlihy to win the title over Mike McGeehan and John Murray in a well-played three set match, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3. Foley and Herlihy had defeated Mark Schwitters and Jimmy McGeehan on the semifinal round and M. McGeehan-Murray had bested Vandy French and David Ducharme.

In the 15-and-under girls' doubles, there were only four teams, and singles' champion Laura Tozza paired up with Jennifer Bush to overpower all their opponents. They won the championship 6-0, 6-1 over Danielle Berkhout and Kristen Kupjian.

There were only four teams in the 12-and-under girls' doubles also, but the finals proved to be a beauty with Leanne Intravaia and Carrie Tozza outlasting Sara Ciotti and Katie Fuller 6-4, 4-6, 6-3. The match was held despite a bee sting on eyelid, but she was determined to stick it out and had a good match.

As of early Tuesday, the 12-and-under boys' doubles finals remained to be played. Singles' champion Matt Fuller and his partner Arlan Fuller (no relation) was pitted against Mike Houllahan and Albie Keenan. It promised to be a very exciting match. Fuller and Fuller had defeated Didi Chen and Steve Ferazani in the semifinals, while Houllahan and Keenan had bested Kevin Marshall and Peter French.

Sayre and Leslie French expressed their thanks to the Winchester Recreation Department for providing the 24 trophies, to the Winchester Tennis Assn. for providing some equipment, to Whit Gray for his support, and to all the players and parents for making the tournament a big success.

CLUB NOTES

Comparing notes on the subscribers and artists contributing to the scholarship fund-raising event are: Susan Vrotsos, Winchester Art Assoc. president, Elizabeth Wilder, subscription chairman and Carolyn Latanision, art acquisition chairman.

Lending Program To Resume

A continuing tradition... Twenty-two years ago, the Winchester Art Assn. was searching for a way to raise funds to help worthy art students further their educations. Mrs. Stanley Cairncross and Mrs. George Marks suggested lending artwork at parties to be held in some of Winchester's more spacious homes.

Each year since then a new collection of artwork has been gathered from regional painters, printmakers, and photographers. This year there will be many well-known artists from the greater Boston area who will be contributing art, including a number of artists who will be new to the Picture Lending Program.

During the first Picture Lending party on Sept. 22 there will be music, refreshments, and demonstrations by contributing artists.

Winchester Art Assn. has just acquired tax exempt status, so all subscription fees will be tax deductible for the first time.

During the Sunday, Sept. 22 lending program reception, residents will be able to meet the artist and select the artwork they want. Refreshments will also be served.

The Art Assoc. was able to make $2,000 of scholarship money available for worthy art students this past year. As there is no commission collected on works sold through the program, the association is able to provide a forum for the artists' work and at the

Two Local Artists To Exhibit Work

Debora J. Vandermolen and

Margaret Swan, both of Winchester, are among the artists selected by the Artists Foundation, Inc. for the 1985 Mass. Artists and Fellows and Finalists.

In the category of sculpture, Swan was awarded a fellowship grant for $7,500. Vandermolen received a $500 finalist grant for photography.

The foundation awarded 27 fellow grants and 38 finalist prizes to Mass. artists in eight categories. The winners were chosen from a field of 2,404 applicants. Selection was based solely on work submitted for review without reference to the identity of the applicant.

Funds for the Fellowship Program are provided by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Aerobic Classes Will Begin

Residents are invited to enroll in an aerobic dance exercise program for beginners to advanced students that combines fun and fitness development into choreographed routines.

A morning class is being held at the Winchester Town Hall on Wednesday and Friday mornings from 9:15 a.m. to 10:15 a.m., beginning Sept. 25. This 10-week course is $25 and babysitting is available. Contact the Winchester Recreation Dept. to register.

Afternoon classes on Monday and Thursday from 3:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. as well as evening classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. are being offered at the Winchester High School. The 10-week courses begin the week of Sept. 30 and cost $35. Call the Winchester Adult Education office to register.

Two Artists Win Lottery Grants

Carol Lee Camello and Randy Bairnsfather, both of Winchester, were awarded grants for the July 1985 funding cycle of the Mass. Arts Lottery Council.

Camello received a grant to do a series of paintings of Winchester, and one painting will be donated to the town.

Bairnsfather's grant will allow her to compile a book on the architectural heritage of Winchester.

Chamber Plans Event

The Town Hall parking lot will be the scene of much excitement and fun on Saturday, Sept. 21, as the Winchester Chamber of Commerce hosts the 17th annual town flea market. The flea market was formerly run by Winchester INTERACT.

If cleaning out the attic or garage is on your agenda for this fall, the flea market is also a way to reap some benefit from your labors. A few spaces are still available.

The hours of the flea market are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the raindate will be the next day, Sunday, Sept. 22.

To reserve a space or for more information, call 721-1084 or 729-2885.

Scholarship Group To Meet

The Winchester Scholarship Foundation will hold its annual meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 17 in the meeting room of the Winchester Public Library. All interested Winchester residents are invited to attend.

Wellesley Club

To Meet Sept. 19

Members of the Winchester Wellesley Club will meet to plan this year's activities at a wine and cheese party on Thursday, Sept. 19, at 7 p.m.

After an hour of socialization and refreshments, guest speaker Laurie Zallen, director of the Charlestown Working Theater, will discuss her acting troupe's plans to perform a series of monologues about women.

The Winchester Wellesley Club's annual benefit luncheon will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 16, at 10:30 a.m. and will benefit Wellesley College and the Winchester Scholarship Foundation.

Club president Sheila Marian encourages all Wellesley College graduates in the Winchester area to attend Thursday's meeting at the home of Grace Chase, 27 Lawson rd.

HEALTH BEAT

Classes Planned
To Aid Diabetics

"Managing Diabetes," a four-session course offered by Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford, is designed to help diabetics and their families cope with the disease.

The program, to be held on Thursday evenings, Sept. 12 to Oct. 3, from 7 to 8:30, will review the purpose of the diabetic diet, the diet exchange system, the importance of eye and foot care, and daily care for insulin and non-insulin users. The program features lectures, demonstrations, discussions and films as well as information on reading labels and eating out. Registration is required at 396-9250.

Lifeline Inventor
To Be Honored

The college professor who invented Lifeline and a subscriber who is almost 100 years old, will be two of the guests when the Choate-Symmes Lifeline Program celebrates its fourth birthday on Sept. 14.

Andrew Dibner, Ph.D., a Boston University professor of clinical psychology, invented Lifeline in 1972. Walter Chase, who has been a Lifeline subscriber for a year, turns 100 on Oct. 31.

They will join other subscribers, responders, volunteers and staff at the birthday celebration in the Symmes Hospital Division cafeteria from 2 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Lifeline, a personal emergency response system, began at Choate-Symmes with 25 subscribers. It has grown to 137 subscribers in 16 communities, including Arlington and Winchester.

give instructions for participants to perform self-examinations.

According to the American Cancer Society, approximately 119,000 American men will develop genitourinary cancer this year. This figure includes cancer of the kidney, bladder, and genital areas. Survival rates can be significantly improved by early diagnosis and prompt treatment.

The high-risk group for testicular cancer, according to the American Cancer Society's statistics, includes men between 15 and 35 years of age. Prostate cancer is the third highest cause of male cancer deaths between the ages of 50 and 74. Men between the ages of 50 and 70 are at high risk for bladder and kidney cancer.

Aid course includes chokesaving, rescue breathing, splinting, shock, eye injuries, and more. It will meet on Saturdays, Sept. 21 and 28 from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Standard Multimedia First Aid course for child care providers includes first aid with special emphasis on injuries common to young children.

Topics will include cuts, scrapes, insect bites, and fever control. This course will meet on Wednesdays, Sept. 4, 11, 18, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Mass. United Way
Begins Raising $$

The United Way of Mass. Bay served 5,683 Winchester residents this year through agencies such as the Winchester chapter of the American Red Cross and the North Metropolitan Homeless Health Aide Service.

United Way has kicked off this year's fund-raising campaign on Sept. 5 with a record $7,828,763.

General Campaign Chairman William L. Brown addressed more than 600 volunteers who gathered at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel for the kickoff event, "Breakfast of Champions." He saluted the 30 United Way Pacesetters — the local organizations that ran employee campaigns in July and August to set the pace for the annual fall campaign.

Leading the United Way to its best-ever start were organizations including the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of New England and Waltham Visiting Nurse Assoc.

The United Way campaign will run through Nov. 26. This year marks the United Way's 50th anniversary. Contributions will support 187 health and human service agencies serving more than 80 communities in eastern Mass.

These agencies provide such services as emergency food and shelter, day care, home health care, drug and alcohol counseling and disaster relief. Of every dollar contributed to the United Way, 88 cents goes to member agencies for services.

Department is offering a variety of programs during September at the Symmes Hospital Division in Arlington and the Choate Hospital Division in Woburn.

Aerobic dancing improves the cardiovascular system and is offered at the Choate on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Sept. 10 through Oct. 31 from 7:10 p.m. to 8 p.m. or 8:10 p.m. to 9 p.m. The Symmes Division also offers aerobics on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Sept. 17 through Nov. 7 from 7:10 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Dr. Richard J. Zangara will be guest speaker at the Arthritis Support Group at Choate on Tuesday, Sept. 17 from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Zangara, a Lexington rheumatologist, will speak on scleroderma and lupus. The meeting is free and open to the public. No pre-registration is required.

Residents can improve relationships and interpersonal communication by enrolling in an assertiveness training course at Choate. The course teaches how to reduce stress by learning to express yourself in an open, honest, and positive manner. The course is on Wednesdays, Sept. 11, 18, 25, from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

OBITUARIES

Charles Bacon III

Charles Newcomb Bacon III, 63, of Boston and formerly of Winchester, died Sept. 2 after a brief illness.

A Winchester native who lived in town for more than 40 years, he was the husband of Dorothy Andrea (Draut) Bacon.

He attended Winchester schools, was a 1943 graduate of Bowdoin College and attended Brown University from 1950 to 1952.

A World War II Army veteran, he was an administrative assistant for Newton and a former teacher at Colby College.

Among his survivors are two sons, Matthew Noel of Toronto, Canada, and Charles N. Bacon; two brothers, Lawrence P. Bacon and Francis D. Bacon, both of Winchester, and a sister, Jeannette Ross.

A funeral service was held Sept. 6 at Costello Funeral Home, with the Rev. Walter Davis of the First Congregational Church officiating.

Donations in Mr. Bacon's memory may be made to the American Heart Assoc., 112 Cypress St., Brookline, Mass., 02146.

Philip Morse

Philip M. Morse, 82, of Bedford and formerly of Winchester, died Sept. 5 at Emerson Hospital in Concord.

He was the widower of Annabelle (Hopkins) Morse, who died last March.

A longtime Winchester resident, he was professor emeritus of physics and former director of the Computations Center and director emeritus of the Operations Research Center at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Born in Shreveport, La., in 1903, he lived in Winchester 33 years before moving to the Carleton Village retirement community in Bedford about a month ago.

He was an originator and first director of the Atomic Energy Commission's Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island. During 1949 and 1950, he served on the board of trustees on the Emergency Commission of Atomic Scientists, the so-called "Einstein Commission."

For his contributions to the Navy's antisubmarine campaign, Mr. Morse was awarded the Presidential Medal of Merit, the nation's highest civilian award.

From 1940-45, he directed research on sound control and underwater sound for the National Defense Research Council of the Navy's Operations Research Group.

During that time, Mr. Morse took data from designers on a particular weapon's effectiveness and devised calculations predicting how it would perform in combat.

Mr. Morse received a bachelor of science degree from the Case School of Applied Science. In 1923 he received his master's from Princeton. In 1929 he received his doctorate from Princeton under the direction of Karl Compton, who later became president of MIT.

In 1930 and 1931, he was a Rockefeller International research Fellow at the University of Munich in Germany and Cambridge University in England.

He joined the MIT faculty in 1931 as an assistant professor of physics; he became a full professor in 1938.

Mr. Morse was awarded the Alfred P. Sloan Award for outstanding performance of an MIT faculty member in 1956. In 1971, he was named distinguished lecturer of the Fulbright Lecture program in Australia.

He served as director and member of various scientific committees and was author and co-author of numerous papers and books on quantum mechanics.

He served as director of Control Data Corp. and was recently named to the National Academy of Engineering.

Among his survivors are a son, C. Philip Morse of Raleigh, N.C.; a daughter, Annabelle M. Fowler of Antrim, N.H.; a sister, Betty Brown of Raleigh, N.C., and a brother, Allen Morse of LaJolla, Calif.

Memorial services will be held at a later date; arrangements are by Lane Funeral Home, 177 Main St. Memorial donations may be made to the Philip M. Morse Scholarship Fund, Physics Department, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge, Mass., 02139.

Thomas M. Lee

Funeral services were scheduled for today for Thomas M. Lee, 20, of Winchester, who died unexpectedly Sept. 8 at St. Vincent Hospital in Bridgeport, Conn.

Born in Medford, he was the son of Dr. John F. and Jane (Gallagher) Lee of Winchester.

He lived in Winchester most of his life and attended Winchester schools. He was a sophomore at Tufts University.

He was a member of the Delta Epsilon fraternity at Tufts.

Besides his parents, survivors include four brothers: John, Robert, Timothy and William, all of Winchester, and three sisters: Janet Lee, Lynda Lee and Kathryn Lee, all of Winchester.

A funeral service will be at 9 a.m. today, Sept. 12, at Gaffey-McAvoy Funeral Home, 223 Mass. Ave., Arlington. A 10 a.m. funeral mass will be held at St. Eulalia's church, with burial at Oak Grove Cemetery in Medford.

Donations in Mr. Lee's memory may be made to the Junior Diabetes Assoc., The Joslin Clinic, 1 Joslin place, Boston, Mass., 02215.

Muriel Macneill

Muriel M. Macneill, 86, of Stoneham and formerly of Winchester, died Sept. 4 at the Sunshine Nursing Home of Stoneham after a long illness.

She was born Dec. 8, 1898 in Boston and had lived in Winchester for 45 years. A homemaker, she was the widow of James Kennedy Macneill.

Among her survivors are three sons, William E. of Winchester, Donald K. of Long Island, N.Y., and Douglas of Connecticut; two daughters, Nancy Desrosiers of Leominster and Dorothy Viland of Wakefield; and 22 grandchildren.

A funeral service was held Sept. 6 from Lane Funeral Home, Main St., with the Rev. Jack Bishop of the Church of the Epiphany officiating. Burial was at Wildwood Cemetery in Winchester.

Donations in Mrs. Macneill's memory may be made to the Parish of the Epiphany, 70 Church St.

Helen B. Maguire

Services were held recently for Helen B. (Daly) Maguire, 81, of Winchester, who died Aug. 20 at Winchester Hospital after a brief illness.

She was the widow of Walter W. Maguire and lived in Winchester since their marriage in 1946.

She was born in Lowell in 1904, the daughter of the late Edward W. Daly, who was a descendant of many of the Mayflower pilgrims. She also was a cousin of Owen W. Sanborn, who built the historic Sanborn House in Winchester.

She graduated from Winchester High School in 1923 and was a secretary of the Vesper Country Club in Tyngsboro. She also had worked as a bookkeeper for the Advent Christian Publications, now of Concord, N.H.

Among her survivors are three cousins, William T. Lang of Winchester, Dorothy L. Turchick of Latham, N.Y., and Marjorie L. Simpson of Augusta, Maine.

Arrangements were by the Norris Funeral Home of Winchester. Donations in Mrs. Maguire's memory may be made to the New England Home For Little Wanderers, 161 South Huntington Ave., Brookline.

Ruth McKeering

Ruth (Morgan) McKeering, 74, formerly of Winchester, died Sept. 4 at her home in Reading.

She was the widow of Charles McKeering.

She was a Reading resident for 15 years and had been assistant editor and bookkeeper for Standard Publishers Inc. of Quincy for 44 years.

She attended local schools, including the former St. Mary's High School in Winchester.

Among her survivors are a step-daughter, Ruth Ann Stevenson of Winchester; two sisters-in-law, Mary Morgan of Winchester and Ellen McKeering of Reading; two grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews.

From Cars Museum This

By RICK MANUGIAN

American auto racing, fraternal societies and the accomplishments of Benjamin Franklin fill three on-going exhibits that mark the 10th anniversary of the Museum of Our National Heritage.

In Search of Barney Oldfield: Auto Racing In America, 1895-1985, continues through Nov. 17; Fraternally Yours: A Decade of Collecting runs through Jan. 12; and Useful Knowledge and Public Good: Dr. Franklin Considered runs through Feb. 23.

Named after track showman Berner Eli "Barney" Oldfield, who died in 1946, In Search of Barney Oldfield paints a broad glimpse of the history and color of auto racing in America.

The exhibit highlights the careers of Oldfield, who was suspended from racing nearly as often as he broke records, Ralph DePalma, Eddie Rickenbacker, Ralph Murford, Ray Haron, Sig Haughahl, Louis Chevrolet and others. They are honored in numerous paintings, many of which depict the more noteworthy events in racing history.

Included in the display are historical and contemporary cars, sculptures and other artifacts. Among the cars on display are a 1911 Simplex "speed car," a one-sixth scale miniature working model of a 1911 Simplex II Indianapolis racer and a Penske PC-9 Indy racer driven by Mario Andretti.

ti. Another Indy roadster on display was driven by Don Davis in 1961, Bob Grimm in 1962 and 1963, and Bob Wente in 1964.

The Vanderbilt Challenge Cup, a 30-pound silver trophy created by Tiffany and loaned to the exhibit from the Smithsonian Institution, represents the race organized in 1904 by socialite K. Vanderbilt Jr.

A Sunday afternoon film series on auto racing is cosponsored by the Museum of Transportation, which runs sports cars exhibit called "Fast and Fancy." Throughout the summer, automobile collectors clubs will run rallies between the two museums.

Secret societies dating from the 18th century to the present are revealed in paintings, ceramics, textiles, silver and other objects in the Fraternally Yours exhibit.

The collection of fraternal material places each group in historical context while emphasizing contributions to American social history. The exhibit is introduced by a time line that shows founders of various organizations. Each organization is described, briefly, beginning with Freemasonry in the 18th century and proceeding through the 19th with groups like the Odd Fellows and Red Men. Other groups include the Druids, Templars of Honor and Temperance, Patrons of Husbandry, United American Mechanics, Patriotic Sons of America and the Order of the Camels, and anti-prohibition society in 1920.

Displayed items include an 18th century Masonic tracing board painted on canvas, a Chippendale side chair with a carved Masonic symbol, silver lodge jewels and an 18th century cast iron fireback made in Boston. In conjunction with the exhibition, the museum will issue a catalog, Fraternally Yours: A Decade of Collecting, by Barbara Franco, the exhibit's curator.

Tours of the exhibit are available to fraternal organizations and can be booked by calling the museum's education department at (617) 861-6559.

Useful Knowledge and Public Good focuses on Franklin's accomplishments in the fields of science, communications and community improvement. It is the museum's 100th exhibit since it opened a decade ago.

Highlighted by a printing press that Franklin used during his Boston apprenticeship, the exhibit draws on books, broadsides and manuscripts borrowed from libraries and museums in Boston, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C. Also displayed are a glass "armonica," a musical instrument that Franklin invented, artifacts from his Revolutionary-era residence in France, and a model of an electrostatic machine of the type used by Franklin for electrical experiments.

A videotape starring artist-in-residence Bill Meikle introduces visitors to the personality and humor of Franklin. Patrons may also observe and practice firsthand some of Franklin's experiments in mathematics and science recreated in the gallery. Franklin's 18th-century commitment to learning by experience is further embodied by a participatory exhibit allowing visitors to play musical glasses that fascinated the inventor.

Viewed through the 18th-century perspective recreated in the exhibit, Franklin's life and endeavors reflect the fundamental ideas of his age. Reason and knowledge were used for improvement at that time, and in every discovery and scientific observation, Franklin sought a useful application.

Founded in 1975, the Museum of Our National Heritage is a museum and library of American History featuring exhibits on America's growth and development from its founding to the present. Located in historic Lexington, it was the bicentennial project of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry in the country's Northern Jurisdiction.

The museum is open seven days a week at 33 Marrett rd. (Route 2A). Admission and parking are free. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mon. through Sat. and noon to 5 p.m. Sun. through October. Winter may vary.

The museum is closed Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day.

World Of Stage Bright In Boston, New York

If you were truly enraptured with "Brighton Beach Memoirs," you're going to be ecstatic with "Biloxi Blues," the second installment of Neil Simon's autobiographical trilogy (still in the wings is "Broadway Bound"), currently playing to SRO audiences at Broadway's Neil Simon Theatre (52nd St. West of Broadway).

Seeing "Biloxi Blues" is like renewing an old and dear friendship and Simon, recalling his early army days with honesty and nostalgia, once more displays his evergrowing maturity as a writer. The play runs the gamut from humorous to hilarious to touching to sad, always inoffensively, and under Gene Saks' guiding hand, it proves a heartwarming and rewarding experience!

When we last saw our hero Eugene Morris Jerome (Simon) in "Brighton Beach Memoirs" he had finally reached a cherished goal in life: he had viewed a picture of "the golden temple of the Himalayas." In the 1985 Tony Award winner for best play, "Biloxi Blues," Eugene, doused with Aqua Velva "in every possible crevice," is, at long last, initiated into its portals.

The storyline picks up in 1943 on the coach of a troop train enroute from Fort Dix, N.J., to Biloxi, Miss., transporting a group of raw recruits to bootcamp, with Eugene (once again engagingly and infectiously portrayed by Matthew Broderick) among them. As in "Memoirs," Eugene shares his innermost thoughts with the audience and immediately he notes, "Only four days in the army and I hated everyone! No one had washed! If the Germans knew what was coming over they'd be looking forward to this invasion!"

Eugene's barrack-mates, a motley-looking crew in khaki underwear, are totally diverse. There's indecisive Don Carney (Alan Ruck), a former shoestore employee from Montclair, N.J., who sings in his sleep; introspective, good-looking James Hennessey (Geoffrey Sharp), the Irishman who runs afoul of army regulations; quiet and passive Roy Selridge (Brian Tarantina), who hails from Bridgeport, Conn.; muscular Joseph Wykowski (Malt Mulhern) of Polish extraction, a former truckdriver; and bespectacled, frail Arnold Epstein (Barry Miller), the intelligent and outspoken Jewish boy who believes that logic must be the basis for all decisions and whose chronic stomach disorders result in vile gaseous emissions, much to the consternation of the others.

Then there's tough Sgt. Merwin J. Toomey (Bill Sadler) who orders infinite push-ups, midnight hikes through swamps, KP and latrine duty. And, of course, there's Eugene, ever the diplomat, whose nimble mind is forever maneuvering for neutral ground...like Switzerland...and who keeps a daily log of his memoirs.

Along the way we encounter a $62 theft in the barracks; racial bigotry; Epstein subjected to a humiliating latrine experience and total loss of dignity; and an invasion of privacy involving Gene's memoirs.

Then, there's the group's first weekend at liberty and their initial experience with the prostitute Rowena (Randall Edwards); the next weekend when a deflated Eugene comments, "She didn't remember me!"; and, finally, Eugene's first romance, with Daisy Hannigan (Penelope Ann Miller), a student at an all-girls' school in Gulfport, Miss.

Led by Broderick's appealing portrayal of Eugene, as he stumbles into manhood, and Barry Miller's Tony Award-winning performance as Arnold, "Biloxi Blues" is a joy! You'll want to see it more than once.

As Is Serves Emotional Wallop!

Nothing could be more timely nor pack the emotional wallop of "As Is," the story of a homosexual couple, one of whom is afflicted with AIDS. Currently playing at Broadway's Lyceum Theatre (West 45th St.), "As Is" is a story of two people who truly care about each other, a story of love, devotion and loyalty.

We have compassion and understanding from one; frustration, bitterness, and final resignation from the other; and the play's message will linger long after the final curtain — the desperate need for immediate funding to research a cure for a dreaded virus whose number of victims has reached epidemic proportions! No amount of TV coverage to date can match the intensity of this drama's shattering impact!

The plot concerns the relationship of Rich (Jonathan Hogan), tall, blonde and Gentile, and Saul (Jonathan Hadary), dark, short and Jewish. Rich has returned to the apartment they once shared as lovers to divide their mutually owned property, but Saul is more concerned with Rich's swollen glands and loss of weight. Rich left Saul for young Chet (Steven Grogan), a newcomer to New York City. Then Chet walked out on Rich for a new lover. Chet, we learn later, has succumbed to AIDS.

While together, Saul was content with a sameness in routine and lifestyle. Rich was into jogging, raised a cat, and bought a wok, but it was not enough. A lover of words and a writer of poetry and short stories, Rich loved Saul but needed someone to inspire him, someone to write the poetry to.

Now, cold, aloof and vindictive, Rich bitterly blurts out that he has contracted AIDS. He has been dealt a wild card, a curve ball. With unspoken revulsion, he is treated like a leper, like one afflicted with the black plague. No one wants to go near him; his family doesn't want him; he has lost his business.

The plot reverts back four years in time to a world of sleaze — gay bars, back rooms, leather, studs and chains, S&M, T-rooms, parks, leather bars and porno theaters, the habitat of the homosexual — to the first time AIDS, "the gay plague," surfaced, and Rich's first meeting with Saul. Chet is introduced by a good friend, Lily (Lily Knight), and Rich, "looking for his youth," sets up shop with Chet. Although aware of Chet's selfishness, Rich is "on a roll," he enters a marathon and is published in The New Yorker. Then...AIDS!

Saul insists that Rich stay with him, vowing "Whatever happens, I'll take you as is!" Rich deteriorates slowly, from flu to sore throat to painful glands to lumps on his throat to skin discoloration. He sits in on therapy sessions AIDS victims while Saul mans the AIDS hot line. In on therapy sessions for AIDS victims while Saul mans the AIDS hot line.

Rich sinks into the "angry phase" ("Straights have no monopoly on pain!") and resorts to black humor: "You know the miracle of AIDS? It turns fruits into vegetables!"

In the hospital Rich contemplates suicide even as he snide-lies jokes. "Have you heard about the disease that attacks JAPS (Jewish American Princesses)? It's called MAIDS...you die if you don't get it!" As he reaches the "bargaining stage" he reflects, "It's difficult trying to convince your mother that you're Haitian!"

There's a heartbreaking reconciliation scene with his brother (Ken Kliban) who awkwardly notes, "I was dying to see you," and who, after four years, still does not know

Fall Schedule For Forbidden Broadway

"Forbidden Broadway," Gerald Alessandrini's hit musical comedy revue, continues playing in the Terrace Room at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel in an open-ended engagement. Starring Jeff Bannon, Toni DiBuono, Brad Ellis, Michael McGrath, and Karen Murphy, the satirical revue roasts and toasts Broadway's brightest stars and shows, including "Evita," "Cats," "La Cage Aux Folles," "Yul Brynner," Carol Channing, and Julie Andrews.

The Fall performance schedule is Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m., and Sunday at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.

For information, and to charge tickets by phone, call the "Forbidden Broadway" box office at (617) 357-8384, located at the Terrace Room, Boston Park Plaza Hotel, 64 Arlington St., Boston 02117.

Jazz Stars Light Rooftop

The Fall 1985 Rooftop Jazz Series kicks off the second anniversary of the opening of the Starlight Roof (located at 575 Comm. Ave. in Kenmore Square atop Howard Johnson's Hotel) with an aggressive lineup of jazz notables.

The Thursday through Saturday policy with shows at 9 and 11 p.m. continues, and advance tickets may be purchased via Concertcharge (497-1118). For more information, call 267-6059.

The schedule: Sept. 12-14, The Phil Woods Quintet featuring Tom Harrell, Hal Galper, Steve Gilmore and Bill Goodwin; Sept. 19-21, The Double Image Mallet Duo featuring David Friedman and David Samuels; Sept. 26-28, Tal Farlow with Whit Browne and D. Sharpe; Oct. 3-5, Sheila Jordan with Harvie Swartz and Gray Sargent; Oct. 10-12, The Mose Allison Trio; Oct. 17-19, Puttin' On The Ritz; Oct. 24-26, TBA; Oct. 31-Nov. 2, Lee Genesis and Wanetta Jackson with Tim Ingles, Vinnie Johnson, Frank Wilkins (Halloween Party on Oct. 31); Nov. 7-9, Ran Blake with Ricky Ford and Dominique Eade; Nov. 14-16, Charlie Byrd.

Also listed for the Starlight Pool are Jazz At Noon, Friday Sept. 26, with special guest Tal Farlow. Vance Gilbert continues from 5-8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday and Jeff Less continues from 6-11 p.m. on Tues.

Saul's name. Rich's impending fate gives him time to reflect...where am I going...what will it be like?

Direction by Marshall W. Mason is sharp and taut, making use of non-leads as a Greek chorus. William M. Hoffman's book is absorbing and frightening as it presents a vivid picture of the attitudes of the medical profession and the straight community. Strictly 'no holds barred,' "As Is" is generously sprinkled with tart, self-debasing humor focusing on this "cancer with a stigma."

Lullaby Of Swing Reopens At Bradford

Dick Feeney's "Lullaby of Swing" reopens at the Bradford Hotel Sept. 18 for an open-ended engagement and with an extended five-day schedule. Performances will be held at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Wednesday, 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. on Saturday, and 5 p.m. on Sunday.

With the opening of "Lullaby of Swing," the main ballroom of the Bradford (275 Tremont St., Boston) has become a 900-seat cabaret theatre complete with beverage service and dance floor.

The show gets everyone into the act with an unusual dance-break during intermission, featuring the original sounds of the famous big band era. A celebration of the music of the '40s, the revue spotlights 29 nostalgic hit tunes and showcases a music and dance ensemble of 20.

Tickets may be purchased in advance through Theatrecharge; 497-1118 or 800-442-1854 (good only in MA) and through Teletron; 720-3434 or 1-800-382-8080 and all Ticketron outlets, Concourse Ticket Agency at the Park Plaza, the Bradford Hotel box office, and at all other major ticket outlets. Wang Celebrity Series Offers 42 Events

Walter Pierce announces the 1985-86 season of the Wang Celebrity Series: the 48th edition of the Celebrity Series and the second under the auspices of the Wang Center for the Performing Arts.

Forty-two varied music and dance events — 56 performances — will be presented in Symphony Hall, Jordan Hall, John Hancock Hall, and the Wang Center for the Performing Arts.

The season will begin in September with a concert by world-famous tenor Luciano Pavarotti, and will conclude in May with the final concert of six scheduled by the Juilliard String Quartet.

The Celebrity Series will present six visiting symphony orchestras in Symphony Hall. They include the prestigious Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam conducted by Bernard Haitink; the return of the Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig under its music director Kurt Masur; a first visit by Poland's Cracow Philharmonic Orchestra with composer-conductor Krzysztof Penderecki conducting his Polish Requiem; the Vienna Symphony Orchestra under Wolfgang Sawallisch; the Bavarian Symphony Orchestra with music director Colin Davis on the podium; and a first visit by the Montreal Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Dutoit, with violinist Isaac Stern as soloist, performing the U.S. premiere of a violin concerto by Henri Dutilleul.

Five world-renowned pianists will give recitals in Symphony Hall. They are Rudolf Serkin, Murray Perahia, Andre Watts, Annie Fischer and, in his Boston debut, Ivo Pogorelich.

The roster of chamber music events includes six concerts devoted to the complete Beethoven string quartets performed by the Juilliard String Quartet; two concerts by the Guarneri Stirling Quartet; and the return to Jordan Hall of the Tokyo String Quartet.

Two noted chamber orchestras are listed: the Vienna Chamber Orchestra with pianist Philippe Entremont as conductor-soloist; and James Galway as conductor and flute soloist with the National Arts Centre Orchestra of Canada.

The Brandenburg Ensemble will return with Alexander Schneider conducting, and pianist Emanuel Ax as soloist performing concerti by Mozart and Bach.

The Academy of Ancient Music ensemble will give a Jordan Hall concert led by harpsichordist-director Christopher Hogwood; and the Fires of London, a music-theatre chamber ensemble conceived by composer Peter Maxwell Davies, will make its debut in the Celebrity Series.

The stellar list of vocalists includes Jessye Norman in her first Symphony Hall recital; a lieder recital by Hermann Prey devoted to Schubert's Die Winterreise; the famous tenor Luciano Pavarotti in a concert with orchestra; and Dame Joan Sutherland in a concert opera production of Donizetti's "Anna Bolena," with an international cast conducted by Richard Bonyng.

Vocal ensembles include the popular King's Singers, the Vienna Choir Boys, and a first visit by England's celebrated Westminster Cathedral Choir.

Trumpeter Maurice Andre, cellist Yo-Yo Ma, clarinetist Richard Stoltzman, British guitarist John Williams, violinist Young-Uck Kim, and flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal are listed among the world-renowned virtuosi who will give recitals in next season's Celebrity Series.

Dance events in the series include seven performances by the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater at the Wang Center and the welcome return of the Paul Taylor Dance Company in three performances at John Hancock Hall.

Among the special events listed in the 1985-86 season are the Preservation Hall Jazz Band from New Orleans; the Waverly Consort in a program of Elizabethan music; former stars of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company in an evening of Gilbert and Sullivan; the Canadian Brass; a colorful celebration of Hellenic spirit featuring folk dancers, singers and musicians, called Kalidoskopio of Greece; a rare reunion concert by the Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem; a special Christmas concert by the Chieftains with guest artists; and the Boston farewell concert by Anna Russell, the prima donna of music parody.

The Wang Celebrity Series will once again offer its entire season in a unique selective series in which subscribers choose their own seven-event or fourteen-event series, at substantial savings with priority seating.

In addition to the seven-event selective series, the Celebrity series is offering an Orchestra Series of the six visiting symphony orchestras, and the Juilliard String Quartet Beethoven Cycle in a special six-concert series.

The detailed brochure with dates, subscription information, programs and order form is now available.

Write to: Wang Celebrity Series, 31 St. James Ave., Boston 02116, or call: 482-2595.

What To Learn

No More Mind Monopoly As College Opens For Kids

College for Kids, a new program at Middlesex Community College, takes youngsters ages 9 through 13 away from the Saturday morning TV mind monopoly and brings them to campus as participants in one or more of 14 courses designed, according to Susan Capon, Coordinator of Community Development, with large doses of fun.

"I feel that there's a lot of pressure on kids in the school system today," says Capon.

The experience is stressful. The grading system and use of marks teaches them to be competitive and tells them what is right or wrong.

"College for Kids was developed to be a place where children can learn at their own pace. They are free to explore and learn. There are no grades, no comparisons, no criticisms. They're all winners!"

Two years ago, the Division of Continuing Education/Community Services began a Computer Camp for Kids. The program proved to be highly successful with 45 students enrolled in each summer session. "The kids loved it," says Capon. "The process for teaching computer use to children is the same as for adults but children learn easier. They have no fear and are more open to this adventure."

The success of the summer Computer Camp led the college to launch this fall's innovative program. Faculty were recruited from the college's continuing education faculty, local elementary schools, junior high schools and "word-of-mouth."

"We are what our name says - community. We have tremendous resources here at the college and want to offer them to the community. Kids are part of our community."

The philosophy of College for Kids dovetails with that of the college as an open access institution. People bring to the college different educational experiences and abilities and "give themselves a chance to be successful," says Capon. "And lots of people do very well here."

"For kids, the same thing happens. Their self-confidence increases. They've learned something different and had fun doing it."

The spillover from this experience to the youngsters' personal lives is impressive. According to Capon, youngsters can trust themselves more. "They've tried something new and nothing terrible happened. In fact, they gain feelings of success and enjoyment."

Students also learn from the experience of meeting new friends. To date, College for Kids has enrolled youngsters from over 20 towns in the area, including Lowell, Bedford, Lexington, Winchester, Arlington, and Boxboro.

Classes meet for six consecutive Saturdays from 9 to 11:30 a.m. at the Burlington Campus, Terrace Hall ave.

A Health Service representative will be in attendance. Transportation is not provided but assistance is given in setting up car pools.

Deadline for registration is Tuesday, Sept. 17. For further information or registration, call the Division of Continuing Education/Community Services at 275-8910, ext. 297.

KIDS AND COMPUTERS: Enter the exciting world of computers. Learn the languages of BASIC and LOGO. Each student will be assigned his own APPLE computer. The emphasis is on "Hands-on" learning and includes work with graphics. Note: This course has been filled.

BEGINNING TYPING: The fundamentals of typing are a very useful skill and enable students to do schoolwork more quickly and neatly and to use computers more effectively.

SPEED READING: This skill proves that "reading can be fun". Learn how to double — even triple — reading speed and still remember what you read. The skills to be learned include reading comprehension, skimming, note-taking, studying and concentrating.

LET'S BE BEAUTIFUL! LET'S FEEL BEAUTIFUL! This course allows students to learn about themselves through proper health and beauty care. Items to be covered include proper eating habits, good nutrition, exercise, fitness, proper manners and etiquette, and basic self-improvement. Guest speakers may include representatives from Revlon Cosmetics and Barbizon School of Modeling.

BOOST YOUR MEMORY FOR FASTER LEARNING: Remember lessons, facts, formulas, poems, and other learning tasks more easily and quickly. How to study more effectively, make homework more fun and make final exams a cinch. How to speed up your memory for faster learning will be covered as will games to stimulate memory and short-cuts to memorizing.

CALLIGRAPHY: Children will learn the art of hand-lettering with a traditional dipping pen as well as with a felt lettering pen. A brief history will be taught for background. Students will learn foundational strokes of each letter, borders, designs and effective ways to present the lettering for gifts, cards and invitations.

EXPLORE AND ENCOUNTER THE WORLDS OF SCIENCE THROUGH THE MEDIUM OF CRAFTS: Each week students will learn of the treasures of flora and botany, gems and minerals, shells of the seas as they create artifacts using these natural treasures. From specimens of gems and minerals, students will learn how they were formed, collected and polished into a "begger's bead necklace". Using weeds and seed pods, a wreath of floral arrangement will be created. Become a potter and create, fire and paint plastic clay into Christmas tree ornaments.

FRENCH WITHOUT TEARS: How do you say it in French? Students will learn how to ask directions, tell time, and count. They will master enough vocabulary to make simple sentences on their own. Students will also be exposed to aspects of French culture such as cuisine and popular music.

BASIC 35MM PHOTOGRAPHY: A course designed for beginners who want to go from taking pictures to taking photographs. Offers individual instruction in parts and function of a 35 mm camera, lenses and filters, composition of photographs, flash and existing light photography and camera potential.

FUN WITH FOLK MUSIC: For kids who wish to explore American folk music, this relaxed class offers an opportunity to sing contemporary and traditional folk songs and to experiment with an Appalachian dulcimer, guitar and other folk instruments. Discover local folk performers and where they perform.

MAKE A SLIDE SHOW: Everybody likes to look at slides. Learn how to use your camera, develop color slide film, and mount your own slides.

DEVELOPMENT OF LIFE ON EARTH: An introduction to paleontology. Learn how life developed what lived on earth, and how early man looked. Accompanied by slides, pictures and real fossils to touch.

TWICE TOLD TALES: A non-threatening course designed to build confidence in yourself as a storyteller. Come and share stories, riddles, or dreams with us and discover new tales in the wonderful world of folklore and fantasy.

MIXED MEDIA FOR YOUNG ARTISTS: Explore problem-solving techniques through the use of different art media: two- and three-dimensional collage, needlepoint, clay, montage. Students will keep logs analyzing process, problems and successes throughout the experience.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — You could discover some surprising information about a mate or partner and be the wiser for it. Good time to make future travel plans and shop for bargains. Your past efforts pay off now and you get some welcome recognition.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Finish up a project and clear the decks for future action. Work to improve your communication skills and personal relationships. Discuss some new terms or ground rules with a mate or partner and settle your problems.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — A romance may be blossoming and now's the time to let him/her know how you feel. Trust yourself in another matter and make plans to expand your efforts. You have the support of a lot of people who have confidence in you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Get the entire family into the act if domestic moves or changes are on your mind. Keep your sensitive feelings under control and don't be drawn into an emotional battle. Broaden your view about a creative project.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — It may be time to break with tradition or the past and free yourself to progress into the future. Get a creative project off the ground now and take the driver's seat with confidence. Your intuition is reliable — follow it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Opportunities are around you and the future looks bright — be optimistic. A romantic involvement could become more exciting and you can make lots of new friends now. Enjoy the social whirl but don't neglect the family.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — You're looking and feeling great, your popularity is high and by all means, accept an exciting invitation that comes along. You'll be in the spotlight so dress to the nines and enjoy but don't neglect important duties.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Knuckle down and take a cold, hard look at budgeting and finances. Try to plug up leaks and unnecessary expense. You can solve an emotional problem with someone of the opposite sex now. Be practical and realistic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Go out of your way to keep any promises you've made and you'll feel far less guilty. Give the time, attention and money to making needed home improvements. An emotional relationship is deepening — is that what you want?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — A romantic dream could come true for you now. Accept the leadership role in a project and try to overcome feelings of self-doubt. Don't get involved in intrigue, secrets or behind-the-scenes activities at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Confide your ambitions to family members and you'll get their total support. Now may be the time for a personal make-over to build your own self-esteem. Demonstrate faith in yourself and others have confidence in you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — It's OK to splurge a bit now, but don't go overboard. Reassess your goals, make plans and talk them over with others. Accept competitive challenges — you can win! Associate with daring, innovative people.

A Weekend Away

It's The Berries In New England

By GERARD J. GAGNON
ALA Auto & Travel Club

A cranberry festival, many fairs, big and small, and a large antiques show are among New England's top attractions during the weekend of Sept. 20-22.

The Massachusetts Cranberry Festival and Fair will be held at South Carver, on two consecutive weekends, Sept. 21-22 and Sept. 28-29.

The event, held at Edaville Railroad, will have an old-time country atmosphere with loggers' and woodmen's contests, a cranberry cooking competition, a 4-H Fair, a juried craft show, puppets, juggling and music.

A highlight will include a narrow gauge steam train ride through 1,800 acres of woods, ponds and cranberry bogs.

Admissions, which include a train ride: $6 for adults; $3 for children 3-12; $5 for seniors. Hours: 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Tel. (617) 866-4526.

Other Bay State Sept. 20-22 weekend events scheduled include the big Eastern States Exposition at West Springfield and the Barrington Fair at Great Barrington, both of which end their annual runs on Sunday. The Old Deerfield Fall Craft Fair on Saturday and Sunday at Deerfield, the Charles Street Fair in Boston on Sunday and Oktoberfests on Sunday at Ipswich and Sterling.

Harvest Days

Traditional colonial games, such as pumpkin seed spitting and hay bale tossing, will be among many features at The Coggeshall Farm Museum Harvest Fair, Sept. 21-22, from noon to 5 p.m.

The fair, at Colt State Park, Bristol, R.I., will offer a variety of colonial and contemporary crafts, plus demonstrations of candle dipping, wool dyeing, weaving, spinning, quilting and wood working. There'll also be hayrides, country music by old-time fiddlers and cow milking. Foods available will include Rhode Island Jonnycakes and cider.

Admissions: $2; children under 16, $1; seniors, $1. Tel. (401) 253-9062.

Also on tap are a family-style Jonnycake Breakfast at Chestnut Hill Baptist Church, Exeter, and a craft show at the Governor Sprague Mansion, Cranston, both on Saturday.

Antiques Abound

About $15 million worth of rare antiques and collectibles will be featured at the 48th Annual Antiques Show at the New Haven Coliseum, New Haven, Conn., Sept. 20-22.

The show, said to be the largest of its kind in New England, will be open Friday and Saturday, noon-10 p.m.; Sunday, noon-7 p.m. Admission: $3.50. Tel. (203) 387-7006.

Other weekend events scheduled in Connecticut include an Antiques Show and Sale at Brooklyn on Saturday and Sunday, a Schooner Race at Mystic Seaport, Mystic, on Saturday and the Dozynki — Polish Harvest Festival in New Britain on Saturday and Sunday.

Fair Days

In Rochester, N.H., the big 110th Rochester Fair will wind up an 11-day run Sept. 22, with a variety of activities and events. The schedule includes a Little Miss Rochester Fair Contest, a 4-H woodmen's contest, a horse pulling contest and a Country Jamboree. Sept. 21, the fair will end its parimutuel harness racing program with races starting at 1:30 and 7:45 p.m.

Gates will open at 10 a.m., Saturday and Sunday. Tickets: $4; children 12-18, $2; children under 12, free. Tel. (603) 332-6585.

Among other events scheduled in New Hampshire during the weekend are the 9th Annual Autumn Leaves Square Dancing Festival at Franconia Notch State Park, Franconia, on Friday and Saturday, the 20th Annual Arts & Crafts Show at Amherst on Saturday and Jefferson Street Day at historic Strawberry Banke, Portsmouth, also on Saturday.

Maine Times

In Maine, the 113th Annual Cumberland Fair in Cumberland will begin a week-long run Sept. 22.

Sponsored by the Cumberland Farmers' Club, the fair's gates will open at 8 a.m. The midway will be open noon-10 p.m.

Tickets: $3; children 12 and under, $1.50; seniors, $1.50. Tel. (207) 797-5079.

Also during the weekend in Maine, the Common Ground Country Fair will be held Friday-Sunday in Windsor, the New Portland Fair will be held Saturday and Sunday at North New Portland and the Franklin County Agricultural Fair will end its week-long run in Farmington on Saturday night.

Very Vermont

In Vermont, Shelburne Farms, Shelburne, will hold its 5th Annual Harvest Fest Sept. 21, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., rain or shine.

Featured will be a variety of agricultural exhibits and demonstrations, hayrides and continuous musical entertainment. Foods available will include roasted corn, maple syrup products and cheeses.

Admission: $3 donation per carload. Tel. (802) 985-3222.

What Do You Say?

What Three Things Do You Like About The Fall In New England?

By LINDA RAUCH

Douglas Buchanan, 40
Elementary School Teacher
Belmont

I like the crisp, cool weather. The foliage is nice when I drive on the Kancamagus Highway. I like Halloween the most in the fall because I teach elementary school kids and they enjoy dressing up for Halloween. I like to dress up, too.

Fran Burstein-Perez, 28
Interpreter-Tutor
Belmont

The air smells cleaner and fresher. The starting of the new year with the students coming back. To me, it feels like a new beginning. I also like the change of seasons.

Michael Manzo, 65
Owner of the Mission Trophy Co., Arlington
Arlington

Obviously, the weather is vibrating and motivating. I love the trees that are turning and the football season because I am a Notre Dame graduate and former player, so I watch the team play.

Michelle White, 18
Student, Arlington H.S.
Arlington

I like the scenic views of Boston; the boating club and the parks. I like the country because it's not really lived in. It's more land and much more scenic.

Louis Frate, 16
Winchester H.S.
Winchester

The weather change is nice, it's not too hot and not too cold. There's more things to do because you're in touch with other people because you go back to school. Also, there's one less year of school.

Hajj Delajain, 16
Student, Belmont Hill
Winchester

It's really nice because the leaves change colors. You don't know what's going to happen. You don't know if it's going to be an Indian summer. The White Mountains are also nice.

If you grew up in the Fifties, you remember what basements were like back then.

You probably called yours a "rec room" or a "playroom" and that's just what it was: a place where the kids could play without endangering Mom's good furniture. The walls were cheap plywood paneling, the ceiling had tacky-looking perforated tiles. (At least they hid the rafters and wiring.) A flickering fluorescent light cast an uncertain, bluish glow on a toy box overflowing with outgrown and broken toys, a ping-pong table with a droopy net and shaky legs, and an old console radio-phonograph banished from the upstairs to make room for the new television set.

The playroom was a great place for Cub Scout meetings, but the family's grownups never spent much time down there.

Gradually, things started to change. When the TV was moved downstairs, the playroom became the "TV room" and then, as the family followed the TV, the "family room." This evolution became a revolution as manufacturers answered the demand for ways to make basements drier, easier to clean and more attractive.

Better fluorescent fixtures drove away the dark. Sump pumps and water seal paint took care of some of the dampness, while modern heating and air conditioning systems took care of the rest of it. Bigger garages housed the tools, toys, sleds and bikes, and new ready-to-assemble furniture replaced the living room discards.

Do It Yourself

Thanks to do-it-yourself products, the livable basement is here to stay. The accompanying before and after photographs show a basement in its unfinished state and following a remodeling almost entirely with the capabilities of the average do-it-yourselfer.

Indirect lighting highlights stucco-finish walls. TV, reading materials and everything else for family entertainment reside in modern wall units.

Comfortable furniture on a no-wax tile floor forms a conversation grouping around the free-standing fireplace. Boxed-in support posts anchor rows of shelves used for storage and display. And, the room's decor is, literally, "topped off" with the natural look of an oak-grain plank ceiling.

You say you couldn't do it, that it looks too difficult? Well, it isn't. Do-it-yourself tools and techniques have come a long way. Take the ceiling, for example. The oak-grain planks from Armstrong's Chandelier line are a cinch to install with the company's Easy Up installation system.

Everything you need comes in a compact, economical kit: lightweight (but sturdy) metal tracks, metal clips and nails. You simply nail up the track, position the plank, clip it in place. That's it! No cementing. No stapling. Tongue-and-groove construction provides stable, seamless beauty from wall to wall.

That's just one illustration that remodeling your basement is easier now than ever before. With new techniques and materials plus a variety of choices in decor, there's no reason why your basement (like the rest of your home) shouldn't be as livable as your upstairs. †

During National Kitchen/Bath Week, we'll show you many exciting new products and accessories. This special event happens only once a year — September 7 to 15 — so don't miss it. If you're ready to remodel, or create additions to your kitchen or bath, come see the latest in styles and value that will really spruce up your home. You'll be repaid many times just for the ideas we'll pass along. Plan now on visiting us during our National Kitchen/Bath Week celebration.

Beware Of Back Position Country Kitchens Appealing

Sleeping on your side on a firm mattress set, with your knees bent in a semifetal position, can give your back a lot of comfort and rest. But be sure you use a thin pillow to support your head. Otherwise, your head will tilt too far backwards and cause your spine to bend improperly, cautions Robert G. Addison, M.D., orthopedic surgeon and director of scientific research at Sealy, Inc.

Dr. Addison also advises:

- Sleeping on your back either flat or with too many pillows under your head may induce swayback and strain your neck, arms and shoulders over a period of time. If you prefer sleeping on your back, place a pillow or folded blanket under your knees. This relieves the physical stress on your spine by relieving the normal sway of your back.

- Sleeping on your stomach is not the best position for your back, even on a firm mattress. On a soft mattress, it's an especially poor position for the spine. It promotes swayback and strains your back muscles excessively. However, if you customarily sleep on your abdomen, you can reduce the strain by placing a thin pillow under it.

- If you have back problems, it's particularly important to get in and out of bed properly. Don't do either with any sudden movements. This can cause excessive twisting of the spine and aggravate the existing back problem. As you lie down and get up, your back is vulnerable to injury. Bolting up into the sitting position from lying on your back can be disastrous!

To lie down: First sit on the edge of the bed. Then, with your knees and hips still bent in that position, put both your hands on the mattress to bear the weight of your trunk as your body eases down. When you are down on the mattress, bring your legs up and assume a semifetal position on your side. If you like, you can then roll over onto your back.

To get up: Roll over or otherwise get into the semifetal position. Place your lower legs over the edge of the bed and push up with your arms into a seated position. If you do this smoothly and successfully, you'll find yourself sitting on the edge of the bed. To stand up, move forward slightly to balance yourself, keeping the small of your back straight. Then lift yourself up, mainly using your thigh muscles. †

The appeal of country kitchens never fades. They're an American staple, connoting warmth, the tempting scent of apple pie and family gatherings. Their signature — tiny prints, dark wood, personal treasures. But, the look is being reinterpreted now with patterns on shiny white and a wonderful blend of old and new.

Today's country kitchen is seen in a bright, new light. Dark rooms are cheered by painting all details white — cabinets, shelves, window trim and ceiling. This adds sparkle and provides a clean background for accent colors. Shelves painted crisp white are home to spice jars, ceramic cups and saucers and greenery. A white wood cabinet holds cooking utensils and provides extra space for food preparation. The window alcove doubles as a seating area and storage space is hidden under a lift-up top. White blinds on an uncurtained window give an uncluttered appearance and allow for natural light — an added lift. Wood floors are left uncovered. An antique oak table adds a sense of history.

Flowers Say Country

Springtime freshness fills the kitchen when the walls are patterned with tulips and tiny buds. The flowers say country, but what's new is the background — glistening "wet look" from the Wall-Tex Contemporary Kitchen and Bath collection. Goodbye dull ecru, hello bright white!

The designs are fresh, yet soft, using watercolor pastels. There's special charm in the combination of wallcovering patterns. A climbing tulip vine under the chair rail anchors an airy trio of pastel buds above. The tulip border underscores the country charm. A grid pattern softened with tiny flowers sets the alcove area apart and serves as an accent on the white cupboard. The coordinating grid fabric on valance, pillow, seat cover and linens completes today's brighter, whiter country look! †

Goodbye ecru, hello bright white! Today's country kitchen features watercolor flowers on glistening white wet lok wallcoverings.

Problem Windows Can Be Helped With Trick

Have a "no-view" window or one that faces an unsightly view or doesn't let in enough light? A little imagination can help transform that problem into a plus for your home!

With a window that faces a brick wall or some other unattractive setting, install a frosted, translucent plexiglass cut to fit the length of your window and wedge it into place. You can buy plexiglass panels at plastics supply stores listed in your phone book.

For a window that is recessed, try the romantic screen treatment, stretching semi-sheer fabric over wood canvas stretchers slightly smaller than window size.

HORNE ROAD....Mary Barnard Horne was one of five children of Samuel and Sarah Barnard. Samuel was an illustrious farmer who sent the first cultivated strawberries to the Boston market. He had other interests, one of which was an ice business. Once when Boston Harbor was frozen over he was credited with having cut the channel for the boats to pass out with his ox team. Mary married George Williston Horne of Watertown in 1870. In 1877 he died and Mary returned home to live with her father. It was in 1923 that Mary Barnard Horne petitioned for the sixty lot subdivision. Horne Road became one of the new streets, named after her late husband.

LET OUR GROWTH EXPAND YOUR HORIZONS

It's an exciting time to join New England's largest bank. Due to the expansion of our Northern Regional Financial Center, we are now forming a dynamic team of sales and banking professionals for our regional branches in Middlesex and Essex Counties.

If you have a strong sales-oriented background and the desire to further your career in a stimulating professional environment, consider one of these opportunities at Bank of Boston.

BRANCH SALES MANAGER

We are seeking an experienced sales professional to develop branch market share through the sale and servicing of retail and commercial bank products and to introduce other bank products to both existing and prospective customers.

Reporting to the District Sales Manager, you will develop, implement and monitor branch sales objectives. Your responsibilities will also include targeting, developing and maintaining retail and commercial account relationships, managing all aspects of branch operations, and conducting regular meetings with operational and sales staff.

CUSTOMER SALES REPRESENTATIVE

This career position involves the promotion of various banking services. The selected candidate will explain the detailed aspects of the bank's policies and procedures, approve loan applications within established limits, oversee the execution of productivity planning procedures and coordinate branch staff.

TELLERS

Excellent opportunities are now available for motivated individuals. Previous teller or cashiering experience would be a plus, but we will train the right candidate. These positions involve evaluating transactions, opening and closing accounts, balancing and proving transactions, compiling and maintaining various control records, as well as other related duties.

SENIOR ADMINISTRATIVE SECRETARY

We are seeking a highly organized individual for this diversified position. The successful candidate will become thoroughly familiar with operational/officer's responsibilities, priorities and contacts. Responsibilities will include generating correspondence and reports, coordinating meetings, luncheons and business trips, and performing other secretarial duties including transcription.

KNOW THE COST OF A LOAN

When we are negotiating to purchase real estate, one of the prime considerations is the price you will pay the bank to borrow the money for the purchase.

Not all lending institutions, even though they may be in the same locale, charge the same rate of interest.

Blackpowder Shooter

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest-clashed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 58 caliber rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 12 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backdrop at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Dan Burgess at 1-835-5102 for further information. 11/3/TF

Old Rifles Wanted

'We've opened up a bottomless pit of money called the town treasury.'

How Much Will It Hurt Taxpayers?

Suing The Town

By AARON ZITNER

The weather was clear and the road was dry the day Richard Bosworth and Maria Micalizzi died. Bosworth was driving his Harley Davidson on Main St. through Winchester with Micalizzi sitting behind him. They were being chased from Arlington by Arlington Police Officer Michael Kanelos.

At Main St. and Mystic Valley parkway, Bosworth smashed into a station wagon driven by Marlene Bonasera of Winchester. "I turned around and saw two bodies fly in the air. One body hit the Edison light pole and then fell to the sidewalk. The other body landed right on the sidewalk," said Winchester Police Officer Frank Vozella in a statement at the time.

It was April 22, 1979. Micalizzi was pronounced dead on the scene at 6:20 p.m. Bosworth was pronounced dead 30 minutes later at Winchester Hospital. Both were 23 years old.

Micalizzi and Bosworth were from Reading. But six years after the deaths, their case may affect taxpayers in the town of Arlington. In a 1983 deposition, Officer Kanelos said he gave chase after the motorcycle sped past him on Mystic Valley — heading north in the right-hand lane.

Registry of Motor Vehicles information concluded that Bosworth fault for failing to stop at a red light at the scene of the crash. A state medical laboratory found Richard Bosworth's blood contained 15 percent alcohol when he was arrested. It is illegal to drive at .10 percent alcohol.

But in December, counsel for the Micalizzi family is expected to charge in Middlesex Superior Court that Officer Kanelos caused the accident and Micalizzi's death by chasing the motorcycle.

Kanelos drove "at a high rate of speed and in a dangerous and negligent fashion in total disregard of (Micalizzi's) safety, and the safety of other persons on and near the public byways of Arlington and Winchester," said the Micalizzi attorney in court papers filed four years ago.

The Micalizzis want $1 million from Kanelos and $1 million from the town of Arlington on grounds of negligence. Right now, the $2 million claim is a somewhat distant threat to Arlington (though it pans out to $40 for every man, woman and child in town).

By law, Kanelos cannot be held liable for possible negligence. Only his employer, the town, may hold responsibility. Also, in negligence suits the state places a cap on damages at $100,000.

Still, there are attorneys and court fees to pay. And for a town claiming it may face a $4 million shortfall next year, that's money down the drain.

Town Meeting Is Where The Voters Reign

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Winchester's annual town meeting begins Nov. 4. In order to place an article on the warrant, the agenda for the town meeting, it must be submitted to the Board of Selectmen.

According to the town charter, any 10 or more voters, any town officer or member of an elected town board consisting of two or more persons, any appointed member of a board acting by a majority of its members, or any other person or agency authorized by the town bylaw, may submit a request.

All residents of Winchester can attend a fall or spring town meeting and participate in the proceedings, but only elected town meeting members from each precinct are eligible to vote.

If a resident wants to participate in the voting, he or she can run for the position of representative town meeting member.

If a resident wants to participate in the voting, he or she can run for the position of representative town meeting member.

Winchester, 192 town meeting representatives come from the eight district areas. They are granted the power according to the town charter to act and vote on articles.

Any registered voter is eligible to be a candidate, according to the town charter.

A candidate must be nominated by at least 10 voters from the district where the candidate resides. Nomination papers must be filed 28 days before the town election, and any elected representative can be re-elected. Representatives serve without a salary. If a member wishes to resign, his resignation is effective immediately.

The bylaws state that "it is the duty of every citizen of the town seeking recognition to speak at a town meeting to have informed himself of the warrant article he wants to talk about."

There is a 10 minute time limit for individual speakers speaking on a main proposal and additional speakers are granted 5 minutes by Town Meeting Moderator to speak.

The bylaws require selectmen to post the copies of the warrant for each town meeting to be posted on the town bulletin board.

Ten days before the meeting, copies of the warrant must also be distributed to all town meeting members, to the head of each agency and to all residents in the town.

According to the bylaws, the Town Meeting is held even if some residents do not receive a copy of the warrant.

Winchester has been doing to keep its agreement with EOD, he argued. Saraco suggested that the town call to task such groups as the Democratic Town Committee, which earlier sent a memo to the board demanding action on the fair housing issue.

"Let's let all these do-gooders in Winchester that have had the pleasure of throwing stones at us for so long — let them go to the Nov. 4 Town Meeting and thrash it out there."

The town engineering department conducted a survey of all properties in town, which the Planning Board, Selectmen and Housing Authority will use as a guide to develop a viable list of housing sites.

Boards Scurry To Meet State Housing Deadline

By JILL M. HUGHINS

Selectmen, the Housing Authority and the Planning Board will meet next Thursday to decide just how the town will come up with a list of possible sites for low-to-moderate income housing.

The town must present the list to the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) by at least Sept. 30 to comply with a February agreement between Winchester officials and the EOCD. On Monday, members of each board, all of whom signed the February pact, met to discuss an inventory prepared by the town engineering department. Selectmen Chairman Michael Saraco warned members of the three boards, "Winchester's time is running out. He said the town must 'bite the bullet' on the controversy of low-to-moderate income housing."

"We've had people in here asking about what we've been doing about fair housing," complained Saraco. "They want to know what Winchester has been doing to keep its agreement with EOD," he argued. Saraco suggested that the town call to task such groups as the Democratic Town Committee, which earlier sent a memo to the board demanding action on the fair housing issue.

POLICE LOG

Chelsea Man Faces Van Theft Charges

Richard Williams, 21, of Chelsea, faces arraignment on Sept. 25 at Woburn District Court on four charges of larceny and breaking and entering, according to Sgt. Lt. Joseph Perritano.

Police said a group of men from Chelsea are suspected of being involved in several breaks and thefts in the Winchester area.

According to police, someone broke into two vans owned by Winchester residents, one on Columbus rd. and the other on Cross st., on Aug. 28.

That night, police said, two men also stole two cars — a Firebird and a Toyota — that were later recovered.

Police said they are continuing to investigate the matter.

bumper of the other car. Both cars were driven from the scene, according to police. No injuries were reported.

At 9:01 a.m., the police and fire department responded to a Wendell st. residence for a reported drug overdose. The victim was transported by the fire department ambulance to Choate Hospital in Stoneham.

Sunday, Sept. 15

At 8:12 a.m., a George rd. resident reported his 1975 Ford van was broken into sometime between 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. The resident said $40 worth of speakers and cassette tapes were taken. The car was not locked, according to the police report.

At 10:30 a.m., police reported two broken windows near the boiler room of the Ambrose School, 27 High st.

At 7:59 p.m., police reported a minor car accident on Spruce st. One of the drivers, a 14-year-old youth, was issued a complaint by police for driving without a license.

Saturday, Sept. 14

At 12:43 a.m., a Cross st. resident reported his car had been broken into. Reported stolen were a $140 cassette player and a duffle bag. The assailant left a trail of clothes from the bag on Cross st., according to the report.

At 9:13 a.m., police reported a car was broken into on Valley rd. Stolen were a radar detector, an AM/FM stereo and graphic equalizer, and a phone. Value of items is unknown. The resident found in her car, items that did not belong to her; three cassette tapes, a pair of sunglasses and a clock.

At 9:35 a.m., a Cross st. resident reported his 1984 Oldsmobile Omega car broken into. Stolen was a $75 graphic equalizer. An AM/FM radio was damaged but not removed. Entry appeared to be gained by a slim jim bar, according to the police report.

At 9:50 a.m., a Charles rd. resident reported her 1982 Toyota Corolla was broken into and a $400 stereo stolen. Entry appeared to be gained by a slim jim bar, according to the police report.

At 10:08 a.m., a Charles rd. resident reported his Volvo wagon was vandalized between 6 p.m., Sept. 3 and 9 a.m. Sept. 4. Police reported entry was gained with a slim jim bar. The resident reported a speaker cover and knobs from a radio were missing.

At 10:11 a.m., a Clematis st. resident reported stolen two bicycles with a total value of $200, said police.

At 11:03 a.m., police reported vandals spray-painted a 1973 Vega on George rd. According to the report, the owner of the car said youths have caused trouble in the area before.

At 2:20 p.m., police reported a thieves broke into a car on Valley rd. The owner, a Billerica resident, told police a citizens band radio and several tapes were stolen. Value of items was unknown.

Friday, Sept. 13

At 9:06 p.m., police dispersed a large group of youths on Prince ave.

At 10:49 p.m., a Lebanon st. resident reported $500 in tools were stolen from his 1985 Chevy van, parked on Prince st. Three drills were missing according to police.

At 10:57 p.m., police dispersed a group of youths at the Winchester Savings Bank parking lot.

Thursday, Sept. 12

At 6:40 a.m., police reported a car theft. According to the report, a 1984 Camaro was driven into the yards of two Prince ave. homes and was found stuck in one of the yards. The Camaro was reported stolen from an East st. resident on the night of Sept. 11.

At 7:19 a.m., vandals attempted to steal a car from Nathaniel rd. According to the police report, vandals punched in the ignition of the car. Police said a dome light in the car was destroyed, and a $70 suede jacket was stolen. According to the police report, police are investigating a possible connection between the Prince ave. incident and this one.

At 9:25 a.m., a Herrick st. resident said her 1977 Mercury Cougar was stolen from in front of her house.

Police report a minor accident occurred at 3:24 p.m. at the corner of Church and Wedgemere sts. The two cars were owned by Malden residents. No injuries were reported and both vehicles were driven from the scene.

At 4:02 p.m., police reported a 12-speed maroon bicycle was stolen from a Churchill rd. residence.

PRAYER THROUGH APPLICATION TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goal. You who give me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you, even in spite of all material illusion. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine.

(The person must say this prayer three consecutive days. After three days, the favor requested will be granted even if it may appear difficult. This prayer must be published immediately after the favor is granted without mentioning the favor. Only initials should appear at the bottom.)

Winchester Youths Chosen For Merit Semifinalists

Some 15,000 high school seniors, representing outstanding young men and women in all 50 states, were recently named as semi-finalists in the 31st annual National Merit Scholarship Program.

Among the students were four Winchester youths. They are: Virginia L. Askew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Askew of 38 Rangeley rd.; Robert N. Driscoll, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Driscoll of 65 Thornberry rd.; Charles J. Marquardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Marquardt of 98 Johnson rd.; and Derek P. Rutherford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Rutherford of 11 Sanborn st.

National Merit Scholarship Corp. (NMSC), which conducts the competition, publicly recognizes this select group of students in order to honor their academic talents and broaden their higher education opportunities. Semifinalists have completed the first step in the competition for about 5,800 merit scholarships, worth nearly $21 million, to be awarded next spring.

More than one million juniors attending some 19,000 secondary schools entered the competition by taking a qualifying test, the PSAT/NMSQT, in October 1984. The top scorers in each state, or less than half of one percent of each state's high school senior class, are included in the nationwide group of semi-finalists.

To advance in the merit scholarship competition, a semi-finalist must qualify as a finalist by documenting high academic performance, being recommended by the high school principal, confirming qualifying test performance on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, and submitting information about school and community activities, personal interests, and goals.

Over 90 percent, or 13,500, of the semifinalists in this year's merit program are expected to meet the rigorous standards required to become finalists, and over 40 percent of the distinguished finalists will be awarded merit scholarships of three different types.

Every finalist will be considered for one of 1,800 single-payment National Merit $2000 Scholarships that are allocated on a state representation basis, in proportion to the state's total of graduating seniors.

Winners will be chosen by a selection committee for college admissions counselors who will judge which of the finalists have the strongest combination of academic and extracurricular accomplishments.

The "national" awards are supported by grants to the Merit Program from sponsors in the business community, and by NMSC's own funds.

Only finalists who meet preterential criteria specified by sponsors will compete for renewable Merit Scholarships of two types. Over 400 corporate and business organizations will underwrite nearly 1,500 awards for finalists who are children of employees, residents of areas a company serves, or finalists with career goals a sponsor wishes to encourage. A corporate-sponsored four-year Merit Scholarship can range in value from $500 to $1,000 for each college undergraduate year.

Approximately 2,500 other renewable merit scholarships will be sponsored by some 200 colleges and universities. Only finalists who will attend a sponsor institution can win one of these awards, which provide between $250 and $2,000 annually for up to four years of study at the sponsoring college.

NMSC is a nonprofit organization devoted solely to scholarship activities that are supported by more than 600 independent sponsors, without federal or state funds.

The merit scholar class to be announced in the spring of 1986 will join over 90,000 other academic champions who have received merit scholarships worth about $265 million between 1956 and 1985.

Selecting the proper college or university often seems like a confusing and complicated process, both for the high school seniors and their parents.

The questions are many and the answers vary from college to college. What is the right college or university for me? What major should I study for a particular career? How important are my SAT's with reference to my high school courses and class rank?

The Guidance Dept. at Winchester High School has arranged to have these and other questions about college admissions and selection answered on Thursday, September 26 on the Bentley College campus in Waltham.

The 1985 N.E.A.C.A.C. College Fair, sponsored jointly for the eighth consecutive year by the New England

Association of College Admissions Counselors and Bentley College, will feature admissions officers from over 200 New England public and private colleges and universities. The College Fair will be held in the Charles A. Dana Athletic Center on Thursday, Sept. 26 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The N.E.A.C.A.C. College Fair will afford high school seniors and their parents an excellent opportunity early in the school year to discuss their future educational and career plans with many New England college and university admissions officers.

Students will also be able to learn about the variety of academic programs these institutions offer, admissions requirements and procedures, and financial aid programs.

Learning Program Opens New Paths To Success

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Winchester is the only community in the country to have a federally funded program aimed at teaching people to learn.

The program, taught by specialist Ellen Racioppi, gives numerous local adults the confidence to re-enter the job market, or go back to school after years of inactivity.

After all, said Racioppi, even those who have been involved in schooling sometimes forget the importance of keeping an open mind to learning. In other words, she said, you needn't be a college drop-out to have put learning on the back burner.

The key, said Racioppi, is to stimulate interest in learning and contributing to the community. It is that same interest, she says, that youngsters have about the world around them.

Lola Schwab, a Winchester resident, has enrolled in the course for several reasons. "You lose the technique of learning as you get older, you forget how to listen, I'd like to recapture those skills."

She also expects the course will help her better understand her children and their approach to learning — as well as her own.

Donna Landry, also of Winchester looks forward to the workshop. "People are different and approach the world through different eyes. We can "You lose the technique of learning as you get older, you forget how to listen. I'd like to recapture those skills."

Lola Schwab

learn from other people. I already see the value in her course," she said.

According to Racioppi, "It is important to understand how children process information." Parents and teachers are better equipped to understand children and set realistic goals when they recognize how their children approach learning.

"People are extremely interested in the educational system," Racioppi said, adding that the workshop has already received support from the community.

Racioppi plans to use the Kolb-McCarthy Learning Styles Inventory throughout her workshop. She will begin by determining each student's learning style.

She breaks down learners into four categories — innovative learners, analytical learners, experimenters and those dynamic.

Innovative learners, she said, gain through reflecting, observing and experiencing. They excel in viewing concrete situations from many perspectives.

Analytical learners are thorough and industrious, learning by thinking through ideas.

Racioppi describes experimenters as those who like to "tinker" with objects. They need to know how things work and learn best through hands-on experience.

Dynamic learners like to experience and experiment. They seek hidden possibilities and need to know what can be done with things. They favor variety and flexibility, and learn by a trial and error or self-discovery process. Racioppi describes this type as "entrepreneurial."

All four learning styles are equally valuable and each has its own strengths and weaknesses, according to Racioppi.

She said identifying with one group is a self-discovery process. When a person begins to understand his personal learning style, then he is better equipped to understand how other people think and learn.

"The importance of learning styles stretches beyond school — there are so many applications," said

Racioppi. She said communication is integral in all aspects of life, business, education, social and family.

Those who are considering further education can especially benefit from developing the successful strategies used by good learners.

Racioppi worked at Wilmington High School teaching students with learning disabilities and also worked as a learning specialist at Middlesex Community College, where she taught adults to learn.

"I guess for me the program is a natural progression," said Racioppi, who added that she used to be concerned with why people do not learn.

Now, said Racioppi, she is concerned with how people can learn.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John J. Spezzaferri of Burlington and Mrs. Carol Peluso of Winchester.

Dr. Erin Daugherty and Dr. Bill Ellis

Dr. Daugherty Weds Dr. Bill Ellis

Dr. Erin Daugherty and Dr. Bill Ellis were married in a double ring ceremony at the Old North Church in Boston. The Rev. Dr. Robert Gollidge officiated at the May 11 wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Daugherty of Winchester. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Bill Ellis Sr. of Bend, Ore.

The bride wore a Priscilla gown of ivory silk satin. The corseted bodice, appliqued with Alencon lace and pearls, was fashioned with a wedding band neckline and long tapered bonnet sleeves.

The molded skirt was edged in lace and swept into a scalloped chapel train. The veil of ivory illusion was appliqued with Alencon lace and was held by a crown of lace flowerettes and pearls.

The bride carried a cascade of Alba lilies, roses and orchids.

Sherri D. Moda of N. Reading, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mary Ann Ellis, Susan Ellis and Martha Ellis, all sisters of the groom and Debra Daugherty, sister of the bride.

The bridesmaids wore Priscilla gowns in oriental blue moire taffeta with large puffed sleeves, with sweetheart necklines and full skirts. They carried cascades of spring flowers.

Bob Ellis of Oregon was his brother's best man. Ushers were Mark Agness, Dave Zintek, Craig Sonde and Tom Ellis, the groom's brother.

The reception was at the Lenox Hotel and the couple took a wedding trip to London, England and Greece. They are currently residing in Chicago, Ill., where they are both doing their internships and residences.

Karen Treadwell Weds Alan Eugley

Karen Ann Treadwell and Alan Eugley were married Sept. 7 in the Versailles Room at the St. Regis-Sheraton Hotel in Manhattan. The Rev. Nadine Hundertmark, a Presbyterian minister, performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth M. Treadwell of Pittsburgh, Pa. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessup P. Eugley of Winchester and Lincolnville, Me.

The bride is a graduate of Colgate University and is an assistant vice president of the Banque Paribas in New York City.

The groom is a graduate of Winchester High School, and is a graduate of Lehigh University where he received a master's degree in economics. He is a senior vice president and director of corporate development for the Marine Midland Banks in New York.

Christina Citrano Will Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Citrano of Verona, N.J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Christina Mary, to Thomas Edward Waite, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Waite, Jr. of Winchester.

Miss Citrano is a graduate of Verona High School and Moravian College in Bethlehem, Pa., where she received a B.A. degree in 1980. She is employed as vice president of marketing at Financial Clearing and Service Corporation in New York City.

Mr. Waite was graduated from Winchester High School and from Springfield College in Springfield, Ma.

with a B.S. degree in 1980. He is a teacher of physical education at Paul VI Regional High School in Glen Rock, N.J. and an adjunct professor at Montclair State College, Montclair, N.J. where he is studying for his master's degree in physical education.

A July 1986 wedding is planned.

Carolyn J. Lacey

Carolyn J. Lacey Will Be Wed

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lacey of Winchester announce the engagement of their daughter, Carolyn J. Lacey, to Joseph M. MacLellan of Waltham, son of Mrs. Catherine MacLellan.

Miss Lacey graduated from Winchester High School and Regis College in Boston, where she received a B.A. degree in 1980. She is employed by the Bank of Boston in Boston.

Mr. MacLellan graduated from Waltham High School and Wentworth Institute of Technology. He is employed by RCA Automated Systems Division, in Burlington.

The couple has set an Oct. 27 wedding date.

Resident Joins Plans For Group

A multi-event "Tribute to NAASR" celebration weekend, commemorating the 30th anniversary of the National Assoc. for Armenian Studies and Research, is being planned for Nov. 1-3 in Cambridge.

Winchesterite Dr. Nishan Goudsoukian is on the 30th Anniversary Celebration Committee from the Greater Boston area.

The tribute will open with a lecture on Friday, Nov. 1, at the Harvard University Divinity School and will be followed by the Annual Assembly of Members and luncheon Saturday, Nov. 2.

On Sunday, Nov. 3, a catered banquet will be held in Harvard's historical Memorial Hall, followed by a gala extravaganza at nearby Sanders Theater.

Halpin Graduates

Jennifer Halpin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Halpin of Vinson circ., recently graduated from Regis College with a bachelor of arts degree in economics. Halpin, a dean's list student, is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, international social science honor society.

Mazzarella Is Graduate

William H. Mazzarella Jr., grandson of Mrs. Mary Mazzarella, 49 Vine st., graduated second in his class from Radioman Class "A" School, at the Naval Training Center San Diego. THE SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on the only important roll call from September 9-13.

SURTAX (H 6510). Senate, 29-10, refused to discharge the Senate Ways and Means Committee from further consideration of the bill phasing out the 7.5 percent surtax over three years and raising the no tax status from $5000 to $6000 for an individual and from $8300 to $10,300 for couples. The discharge motion would force the bill onto the Senate floor for consideration.

Supporters said the revenue surplus can easily fund the repeal and argued taxpayers are entitled to relief. Some opponents said the state cannot afford the revenue loss while others said the surtax repeal would only help the wealthy. Several opponents said the Ways and Means Committee should study all figures and options before acting on any tax cut proposals.

A "Yea" vote is for discharge. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Sen. Richard Kraus no.

THE HOUSE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 7 key roll calls from the week of September 9-13.

PRESUMPTIVE SENTENCING (H 6630). House 134-10, have near final approval and sent to the Senate a lengthy and complicated bill overhauling the state's criminal sentencing system.

Under the bill, judges would be required to give sentences within certain ranges for specific crimes or explain, in writing, his or her reasons for deviating from the range. Another key provision gives prosecutors the right to appeal a sentence.

Supporters said the bill will truly reform and toughen the criminal justice system, send more people to jail and curtail the wide discretion judges currently use. Opponents said the bill takes too much discretion away from judges, discriminates against the poor and will increase lawyers' fees and cause a logjam in the courts.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

21 TO 18 (H 6630). House 106-37, rejected an amendment changing one of the mitigating circumstances a judge can cite for giving out a sentence below the ranges set in the presumptive sentencing bill. The bill allows the judge to consider whether the offender is under 21.

The amendment would change the age to 18. Amendment supporters said offenders who are 19, 20 and 21 are among the most hardened and dangerous criminals and are not youthful offenders entitled to lesser sentences.

Amendment opponents said the under 21 provision was fair and noted it is only one of several mitigating factors a judge can consider. They pointed out that a judge must find that the mitigating factors outweigh the aggravating factors.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment for 18 and under. A "Nay" vote is for 21 and under.

Saltmarsh voted no.

ETHICS (H 6529). House 143-1, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a bill restoring the State Ethics Commission's enforcement policy in conflict of interest cases and extending that authority to cases involving municipal officials.

Supporters, noting the bill was in response to a recent Supreme Judicial Court ruling, said the bill makes it clear that the Ethics Commission is the primary enforcement agency for conflict of interest and financial disclosure laws. Opponents offered no arguments against the bill.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

AFFILIATION (H 6529). House 129-19, defeated an ethics bill amendment eliminating a section of the bill requiring a person who wishes to obtain financial disclosure forms on any public officials to give his or her affiliation.

Amendment supporters said it is sufficient that a person sign a written request and claimed it was intimidating to require him or her to list any organization to which he or she belongs. Opponents said officials have a right to know what organization, if any, is examining their files.

A "Yea" vote is against including affiliation. A "Nay" vote is for including affiliation.

Saltmarsh voted no.

COPIES (H 6529). House 131-11, rejected an ethics bill amendment eliminating a section of the bill requiring that a copy of a person's request for a public official's file be sent to that public official after the person examines the file.

Amendment supporters said this was another example of intimidation. Opponents said openness is a two way street and said officials have a right to know who is looking at their files.

A "Yea" vote is against sending the copy. A "Nay" vote is for sending the copy.

Saltmarsh voted no.

AUTO INSURANCE (H 6464). House 117-24, rejected a bill raising from $500 to $1500 the amount of medical bills an automobile accident victim must have before being allowed to sue for pain and suffering.

The measure also raises from $10,000/$20,000 to $20,000/$40,000 the compulsory amount of insurance for "bodily injury to others" that each policy must carry.

Supporters, claiming the bill will save millions in insurance costs, said the $500 figure, adopted in 1970, was designed to discourage frivolous claims and noted that rising medical costs dictate a hike to $1500 to continue discouraging claims. Opponents said the hike to $1500 will prevent legitimate victims from filing claims. They said the bill is a pro-insurance industry and anti-consumer measure.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

SCHOOL BUDGETS (H 2355). House 88-49, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a local option bill which, except in Boston, if approved by a city, would require the school committee's version of the budget, accompanied only by non-binding recommendations of the mayor, to go to the City Council for action.

Currently, the school committee's budget goes to the mayor who can then formally amend it before sending it to the City Council. Present law also only allows city councils to approve the mayor's version or reduce it and prohibits them from increasing it.

Supporters, noting the bill is a local option one effective only in cities where voters approve it, said it would prevent mayors from drastically reducing school budgets before the budget even reaches the city council. They noted the mayor still retains veto power over the final budget.

Opponents said the bill violates Proposition 2½ by partially restoring fiscal autonomy. They argued the bill takes too much power away from mayors and would also open the door to other departments seeking the same system.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Library Trustee Explains Junior Library Hours

To The Editor:

As chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Winchester Public Library, I would like to thank the many working parents who expressed by petition and letter their need for extended open hours in the summer months at the Junior Library. This will certainly provide an additional support document for the trustees and director in seeking future funding.

Although the problem is alleviated now with the return to our fall schedule which includes full services on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and will be further improved when once October 21, I would like to share the recent history of our efforts and progress on this issue.

For the past two years, the library has included in its budget request to the Town Manager and the Finance Committee funding that would allow the Junior Library to be open the same evenings during the summer as the Adult Department. Both years these funds have been eliminated from the Town Manager's and the Finance Committee's recommendations, with the argument that this request represents expanded service.

Reallocating then of our present level of funding deserves examination. Over the past 10 years, the number of cardholders for the Junior Library as a percentage of the total cardholders has been dramatically cyclical.

In 1976, children represented 26 percent of the card holders. By 1980 that percentage fell to 12 percent, reflecting the dramatic decline in school enrollment of the same period. In the last two years, that percentage has climbed back up so that children represent now 18 percent of the cardholders.

Absolute numbers ranged from approximately 4,100 to a low of 1,800 and a current level around 2,900.

The proportion of our total budget allocations for juvenile materials never reflected that decline in numbers of users. It would have been hard, however, at any time prior to this, without hard evidence to support need, for the trustees to have allocated existing funds away from adult services to children's services given the statistics.

Reallocating funds within our children's services budget is the final option. This has been designated the priority issue for our new head of children's services and her staff. It cannot be accomplished, however, without giving up something currently available. Your suggestions and support will be welcomed in the decision making process over the coming months.

In the summer of 1984, we received four formal requests for evening hours for children's services: in 1985 that number jumped to 44 with the receipt of the petition the week before Labor Day. We are keenly aware of the current need, and we would like to assure you we will respond with a program to maintain the high quality of service for all of our children.

Sincerely,
Alice K. Mirak

Health Clubs Can Be Hazardous To Your Mind

By TERRY MAROTTA

Just when we have it nice and easy with indoor plumbing and blow-dryers and all, someone comes along and invents the health club.

People go to health clubs, you understand, to torture themselves. Life isn't tough enough otherwise.

Think about it: we don't need to slaughter anything anymore if we want to eat; we don't need to do any plucking or skinning; we don't even have to go out into the fields and bend over.

We've gotten to missing all this effort, is the thing. Hence the invention of the health club.

I go to one of these places myself; I'll admit it. At six in the morning, when z's rise like woodsmoke from the neighbor's chimneys and all sensible folk are yet abed, I crawl out from under the sighing warmth of the covers, pull on some gym shorts and walk on bare and screaming legs to the icy cavern of my car.

In five minutes I'm at the club. It's still dark out. The milkmen are asleep. And the place is jammed

With whom, you may wonder? Beautiful people: those lucky enough to look good at that hour; youngsters in their 20s who've heard that health clubs were the singles joints of the 80s; yuppies.

They come bearing hangers, most of them, with Brooks Brothers duds at the ready. They come in T-shirts advertising rock groups and retreats in the Caribbean; they come looking, for the most part, like a million dollars.

And then the workout begins. In five minutes blooming braless girls with alabaster thighs become pinched and slaving crones. Young men resembling astronauts, Galahads, Eagle Scouts even, turn into sweating psychopaths.

It's the workout that does it to them; it's simply the torture that brings about the change.

They have machines there, see, that Torquemada would've admired; they're Inquisition. Some just elevate your heartbeat and clear the mothballs out of your lungs.

Others stretch you like a pelt nailed up on the side of the barn, demand more of your little muscles than you could have thought it possible to ask.

There are the contraptions devoted to cycling, of course, where the workouts are meant to commence. You can hop on one of these and pedal away into nowhere.

It's a sad commentary on our nappy-pammy lives that we have to hire people to work us like galley slaves. I don't understand it myself.

But I do confess I kind of like it. I have cute little muscles in a sundress now. My calves look like dancers' calves. If anybody asked me to, I could pick up a seventh-grader using my thighs alone.

I like it best, though, 'cause I get to spin back home again when the workout is over, as humid in the sweat-soaked summer on the Green Line. I squish my way into the kitchen. The family snoozes on in their beds.

And if I care to, I can crawl back in beside them for a while, secure in the knowledge that before the day is three-quarters dawned, I have labored mightily, and even prevailed.

Council Chief Discusses Oil

By Frank Tivnan
Special To The Star

The "environmental issue of the 80's, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, is the threat of groundwater contamination from leaking underground tanks that store petroleum products. Groundwater accounts for 96 percent of all the fresh water in the U.S. and supplies more than half our drinking water and the potential threat posed by aging steel tanks has alarmed regulators at all government levels.

"Groundwater, without question, is the emergency problem of this decade and likely the decade to come," said Michael Deland, regional administrator of the EPA.

Service stations are only one of the targets of a growing body of regulations since they account for only 20 to 30 percent of the estimated four and one-half million underground storage tanks in the nation. The remainder are owned by government agencies, by commercial trucking and automobile fleets, hospitals, industry, schools, utilities and by many other institutions.

Dozens of Massachusetts communities have passed tank ordinances and Newton's discovery last April of gasoline and diesel fuel in the groundwater beneath its closed Auburndale Public Works Yard illustrates the problem facing municipalities.

The petroleum products had leaked from four decayed steel tanks at the yard and consequently, the city lost nearly $2 million in federal funds for the construction of elderly housing on the site. The city now has contracted with a private firm to test all 72 tanks on municipal properties.

To prevent leaks of this type Congress last November passed a strict tank regulation law and empowered the Environmental Protection Agency to write a regulation operative by May, 1987 governing the design, installation and monitoring of all underground tanks.

Given the threat to water supplies, however, states, localities and the oil industry are not waiting for the federal pieces to fall into place. Every New England state except Massachusetts either has adopted or is close to finalizing its own tank regulation.

Cities and towns would use the federal or state regulations as a guideline in drafting their own ordinances, but would retain the authority to exceed these requirements if they wished.

A local ordinance that does not distinguish between various tank sites can impose hardship on all owners of underground tanks in the community even though most may pose no threat to water supplies and be located in soil with minimal corrosivity.

As with any regulation, the goal should be to balance the need with the risk but many Massachusetts communities have considered tank regulations that are unduly expensive, technologically outdated or even dangerous.

The need for mandatory regulations to protect water supplies is indisputable. Less clear to the contending parties—industry, city and town officials, fire chiefs, environmentalists and regulators—is how to do it.

Last spring, a local Board of Health in Western Massachusetts demanded that an oil company install its underground tanks in concrete vaults without any for the normal backfill used to bury the tanks. The incident illustrates the danger and confusion that can result when regulators more concerned with the environment mandate engineering practices for which they are untrained.

The board assumed that unobstructed tanks within the vaults would facilitate visual inspection when checking for a leak but was unaware of the extreme danger involved. The oil company argued that gasoline vapors would collect in the vault's airspaces rendering it a virtual time-bomb.

Only after insistent appeals from the oil company and the intervention of the fire chief did the Board relent and agree to the company's plan to install double-walled steel tanks with bonded fiberglass coating.

Other state-of-the-art installations highly resistant to corrosion include cathodically protected steel tanks or tanks made entirely of non-corrosive materials such as fiberglass.

The numbers involved at this location illustrate the high costs confronting all gasoline marketers upgrading their tanks. Conventional installations in vogue just a few years ago—unprotected, single-walled steel tanks—would cost $65,000 at a typical service station with four tanks.

The double-walled fiberglass installation, with observation wells to constantly monitor for any leaks, cost $80,000. The concrete vaults initially demanded by the town would have cost $120,000, and even if properly installed, would not have improved environmental protection.

Oil companies have often found vaults counter-productive. If a leak occurs, gasoline, lighter than the groundwater around the tanks, will float to the top and out of the enclosure, thus escaping detection from observation wells that monitor groundwater for hydrocarbons. The vaults also are prone to cracking and are difficult to seal against seepage.

While federal and state regulatory machinery slowly grinds toward a finished product, the oil industry is racing along a fast track of tank replacement.

In Massachusetts, the majors have replaced or upgraded 1,600 underground tanks since 1980 at a cost of $24 million so that today less than one-quarter of their tanks are more than 20 years old, and that remainder is being rapidly phased out.

Last year, the majors invested $142 million in new tanks across the country and three and a half times that amount in the last decade.

The American Petroleum Institute's manual for underground tanks has been adopted as the industry standard. They include replacing or upgrading all of the tanks at a site even though only one may be leaking, strict inventory control by operators, state-of-the-art tank design and installation, and the insertion of observation wells in new installations to provide continuous surveillance of the soil around the tanks.

The drafting of any regulation demands a Solomon balancing between the needs of the environment, flexibility for the technology to evolve within the regulation and a sensitivity to costs that small marketers can afford.

The most severe requirements, such as mandatory tank replacement or annual testing, should be reserved for tank owners who fail to follow sound engineering practices or to keep strict inventory control records of their product.

(Frank Tivnan is associate director of the Massachusetts Petroleum Council.)

Saltmarsh: Bill Meets Governmental Need

Representative Whip Saltmarsh recently praised House passage of legislation empowering the State Ethics Commission to fine public officials who violate the State Conflict of Interest Law.

"The bill passed by the House is an important guarantee that the State Ethics Commission has the power and the authority to enforce the Conflict of Interest Law," Saltmarsh said.

Since its creation in 1978, the Ethics Commission assumed it had the power to fine violators of the law. But in a decision two months ago, the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court ruled the Commission lacked the specific statutory authority to do so.

Legislation giving the Commission those powers was developed and filed by House Speaker George Keverian (D-Everett) and the House Leadership in cooperation with Rep. Roger Tougas (D-Dartmouth), Chairman of the House Ethics Committee, and members of that committee. The measure was filed by the speaker on July 19.

"I'm pleased at the way the House responded to this problem," said Whip. "The public needs an Ethics Commission with the clear legal right to punish violators of the Conflict of Interest Law. This legislation meets that important need."

Saltmarsh noted that the House-passed bill will apply retroactively to all cases pending before the Ethics Commission at the time of the Supreme Court ruling. It also contains an emergency preamble making it effective upon signing by the Governor.

HEALTH BEAT

Visiting Nurses
To Meet Sept. 23

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors and members of Visiting Nurse and Community Health Inc. will be at 7 p.m. on Sept. 23 at The Hancock United Church of Christ, Lexington.

Visiting Nurse and Community Health Inc. has served Winchester for 85 years.

The annual meeting is open to the public. It will feature a presentation of a program to monitor the health of frail elders and the election of new officers of the board for the upcoming season.

Winchester officers of Visiting Nurse and Community Health Inc. are: Marta Frank, Gertrude Rooney, Peggy Keefe and Helen Dame.

Boat Builders Are A Prize-Winning Crew

Chris Hare is all business as he vacuums a Van Dusen boat.

Paul Drake Photos

Ted Van Dusen stands in his Main st. boat building shop, where the fastest racing boats are made and designed by expert builders.

Main St. Company Boasts Of Olympians

By Jon Haber

Special To The Star

Ted Van Dusen is a lifelong boating fanatic.

As a youth Van Dusen built boats in his family's garage.

Now Van Dusen, 40, owns a top-notch boat building firm — Composite Engineering Inc. of Main st.

The company, well known in the boat racing world, has made crew shells that have captured gold and silver medals in the 1976 and 1984 Olympic games.

"We make the fastest one-and-two-person crew racing shells in the world," said Van Dusen, president of CEI. "Since 1976, our boats have won most all of the important races in the country."

The wins include six first-place victories in last year's men's United States Rowing Assn. Nationals, four first places in the National Women's Rowing Assn. Nationals, clean sweeps in all Olympic trial races since 1976, and gold and silver medals in the 1976 and 1984 Olympics.

Van Dusen grew up in Lexington and earned a bachelor's degree in naval architecture from Webb Institute in Glen Cove, Long Island in 1967. He holds a master's degree in naval architecture and a professional engineering degree in marine mechanical engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1971. He also earned his PhD in ocean engineering from UMass in 1978.

Mark Piper brushes epoxy on the framework of the boats. Van Dusen's crew shells have won gold and silver medals in the 1976 and 1984 olympics.

As an undergraduate, he started the sailing program at the Winchester Boat Club in 1964, and instructed sailing there for four years.

Though he began building boats in his parents' garage in 1968, his company officially began while he was working on his doctorate in 1976.

"I made boats for myself and my friends for a while, using engineering concepts to continually improve the design," he says.

"It was important to keep my hands-on construction as well as the design process, so I decided to get into manufacturing. We incorporated the business in 1976, built our first boats in the BU boathouse, then later moved to Watertown.

"We finally ended up in Winchester three years ago. Winchester is a nice suburban environment, with easy access to the Charles River and Boston which has a major rowing tradition."

"It was also important to have a location close to the highway, since our boats are sold all over North America," he said.

"We feel our boats do so well because of our attention to little details," added Van Dusen. "The oarlocks, the outriggers, the rower's seat and built-in shoes are all crafted for maximum comfort for the rower, so that he can perform to his maximum."

"Our boats are also the lightest you will find anywhere due to our use of fiberglass and fiberglass-like aerospace materials. These materials are strong, stiff, and kept the boat from flexing too much in the water, thus cutting down on drag."

Glass in its familiar plate form is very fragile, he explained, but pulled into thin threads, glass forms very tough strands. It is this toughness which gives fiberglass its strength and durability.

Other materials such as graphite found in ordinary pencil lead also forms super tough threads. Materials made from glass, graphite or other such fibers are called "composites," and are, on the whole, lighter, stiffer and stronger than steel.

Van Dusen's claim to fame in the boating world include six first place wins in last year's U.S. Rowing Association nationals, four first places in the National Women's Association Nationals, clean sweeps in the Olympic trial races since 1976 and gold and silver medals in the 1976 and 1984 Olympics.

Composites are used in many new jets and spacecraft. They make up over 20 percent of the weight of the F-16 fighter jet and the space shuttle.

CEI's boats are almost completely composite. This minimizes flexing, vibration and, thus, water resistance, making Van Dusen racing boats the lightest and fastest in the world.

CEI's major product is the one and two person racing shell. They produce about 75 of those boats a year.

In addition, they also build custom-ordered ships. This year they built a sailboat for Australian professional racers, a Class C catamaran, to represent America in the Little America's Cup competition against the Australians. Another special order was the light-weight hydrofoil sailboat.

We've made composite masts for sailboats, which are lighter and stiffer than metal masts, added Van Dusen. "We have also produced composite windmill blades using our people's expertise in making unusual composite products."

Most of CEI's employees have been with the company for many years, and most have experience with engineering and with rowing or sailing.

Van Dusen and his partner, vice president Peter Billings, are both active crew racers. Both competed on the national team in the past. Billings is now involved in masters racing, and Van Dusen competed in the trials for the 1984 Olympic team.

Although he didn't make the team, his boats certainly did, and won great distinction for CEI craftsmanship.

With orders for boats stacked up for more than six months, and with the years catching up, Van Dusen does not expect to be trying out for the 1988 Olympic team, although he expects to be rowing for some time to come.

"It's a life that's hard to get away from," he said.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Children's Drama Workshop Opens

Winchester Drama Workshop is offering drama classes for local youngsters.

A new series for grades 4 to 6, co-sponsored by the Recreation Department, opens at 3 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 25, in the social studies area at Winchester High School. Third graders may participate if there are openings.

Youngsters will participate in yoga exercises, mime and theater games to develop their senses.

Small groups will improvise scenes to be shown at an open evening demonstration in early December.

Registration for fall programs opens at 10 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 21 at the Recreation Department office at McCall Junior High School, 458 Main st. For more information, contact Paulette Taggart of Ridgefield rd.

Guild Holds Annual Coffee

The Studio Guild will hold its annual membership coffee at 9:30 a.m., Thursday, Sept. 26 at the home of Ruth Kenerson, Brooks st.

The Studio Guild offers classes and studio space for Winchester area artists. Beginners are welcome. Classes in painting and drawing are on Thursday mornings and/or Tuesday evenings.

They are taught by Rhoda Rosenberg, a Boston area artist who has studied at the Philadelphia School of Fine Art, Temple University, Tufts University, and the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Rosenberg also teaches at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts.

For more information, contact Bob Gallant of Laurel Hill ln.

Local Artists

Exhibit At Banks

Frances Bronzo and Frank Barnes, members of the Winchester Art Association, are exhibiting original works in local banks through October.

Frances Bronzo's photographs are on display in the Cambridgeport Bank in Winchester. Among photographs are early morning scenes of Rockport Harbor, seagulls in Ogonquit, Me., and purple loose strife at the edge of Wedge Pond.

Frank Barnes' oil paintings are on display at the Winchester Cooperative Bank. Working in a semi-impressionistic style, Barnes often paints on location near his summer home in Rockport. Barnes is a long-term association member, former president and member at large and now serves as art gallery treasurer.

The Winchester Art Gallery at 585A Main st. will feature an all members' show, "This Land of Ours" Sept. 29 through October. The gallery is open Tuesday through Saturday from noon to 4 p.m.

Historical Society Offers Lectures

The Winchester Historical Society is sponsoring a lecture series in cooperation with the Winchester Schools Adult Education Program.

The course, Victorian Visions, will meet on five Tuesday evenings beginning Oct. 1.

On Oct. 1, William O'Connor, Director of Social Studies in the Winchester Schools will discuss the Victorian Age.

On Oct. 15, Marcia Wood will lecture about costumes. She is a dealer in antique lace and linens.

On Oct. 22, Jennifer Skeele, a literature instructor will discuss literature of the era.

On Nov. 12, Nancy Schrock, a specialist in 19th century American Art, will discuss Victorian arts.

On Nov. 26, Ellie Reichlin presents the final lecture on antique furnishings. She is librarian of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities.

For further information, contact the Winchester School Department or the Archival Center of Winchester.

Poetry Contest

The first Redding Poetry Club contest is offering three cash prizes, $100 for first place, $50 for second place, and $25 for third place. "We are especially looking for new talent," said Contest Chairman David Letterby. For free information, write: Redding Poetry Club, 3305 Sunset dr., Redding, Calif. 96001.

From left, Katie Kelly, Allegra Ford and Dawn Grimes practice an original scene for a Drama Workshop presentation. The recreation Department will open a new series for students in the 4th through 6th grades next Wednesday, Sept. 25. The session will begin at 3 p.m. in the social studies department at the High School on Skillings rd.

Boards To Meet On Housing

town owned vacant property, and property occupied and/or under the control of various town departments. Private land and land owned by the state or the Metropolitan District Commission, as well as religious property, is also included in the inventory.

Also working on the issue is a Citizens Advisory Committee which consists of residents who are working as a group to compile a list of sites from which the Housing Authority can choose to suggest to the other two boards.

Sally Kincaid, a member of the advisory group, said her group has been meeting twice weekly to compile such a list.

"We have been working hard. We have been narrowing down the list and we have already progressed far beyond what other board have," said Kincaid.

Housing Authority member William McCarthy said one family has already been placed in a housing unit.

McCarthy suggested that the town buy or take by eminent domain property at 1034 Main st. that has been condemned by the Winchester Board of Health.

McCarthy also suggested the town consider buying the former Girl Scout property off South Border rd. as a possible site for low-to-moderate income housing.

Meanwhile, Planning Board Chairman Daniel Kenney said his board feels strongly about preserving recreational land, such as parks and fields.

Kenney declined to detail which sites his board has specifically in mind.

Planning Board member Harry Lindmark added, "What it really comes down to is if the town does not comply, it will lose out on discretionary funding. It going to cost us dollars, whether it's in taxes or for buying land."

Meanwhile, Selectman Mark Lombardi, who serves on the Citizens Advisory Committee, said that group would come up with full list of criteria for housing possibilities by next Monday.

"We will have site suggestions for next Monday night," vowed Lombardi. "The only problem is the (other) boards involved don't seem to know which way to go."

WITH COUPONS APPEARING HERE IN TWO WEEKS

A trip to the new Boston Five in Arlington could win you a trip to Montreal.

To celebrate the official opening of the brand new Boston Five branch in Arlington we're throwing a week long party starting Monday, September 16. We'll have free treats, surprises and prizes, including balloons for the kids, a caricature artist, and a daily drawing for $100.*

And at the end of Grand Opening Week, we'll draw the name of the lucky winner of a vacation for two in Montreal.

And if you make a deposit any-time before December 24, we'll give you a beautiful thermos, blanket and/or picnic basket, free, or at a nominal charge, depending upon amount of deposit.

So stop by. And while you're here, ask our friendly Boston Five people about the wide range of services we offer.

Including Money Market Fund Accounts, CDs, IRAs, NOW accounts, 24-Hour Tellers, Consumer Loans and Mortgages. What's more, our mortgage office is conveniently located next door. Let us introduce you to a world of services at The Boston Five.

Muraco Plans Coffee Hour

Parents of Muraco School students are invited to a coffee hour, Sept. 19 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Muraco principal Dick Young and representatives from the Parents' Assn. will discuss school activities. A tour of the building will be offered from 11 to 11:30. Babysitting will be provided at the school.

An open house will be at Muraco School Thursday evening, Sept. 26. Parents will meet their children's teachers and hear an overview of the school program. Times are: K-2, 7-7:30 p.m.; 3-4, 7:30-8; 5-6 8-8:30.

Lincoln School Plans Sept. Visit

Lincoln School teachers and the Lincoln School Assn. are holding three Curriculum Nights for all parents of Lincoln School students.

A school association room parent will introduce each teacher, and the school association is providing refreshments after the classroom visits. On each night, Susan Villani, the school's new principal, will visit throughout the school to greet parents briefly.

The schedule is as follows: Thursday, Sept. 19, Grades K, 1, 2, 3-4, 5-6, 7-8, 9-10, 11-12, 13-14, 15-16, 17-18, 19-20, 21-22, 23-24, 25-26, 27-28, 29-30, 31-32, 33-34, 35-36, 37-38, 39-40, 41-42, SENIOR SCENE

Seniors Plan Oct. 4-5 Fiesta Fair

Donations of household articles and jewelry are needed for the Fall Fiesta Fair, October 4-5, to be held at the Jenks Senior Center. This annual event is an important fund-raiser for providing the services and activities now available at the Jenks Center.

Tickets are now available at the Jenks Center for the catered Italian dinner to be held October 4 from 5-7 p.m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Mt. Vernon st. Since seating is limited, tickets should be obtained soon.

Social Security Workshop

Between 10:30 a.m. and noon tomorrow, Sept. 20, Jenks Center seniors will have a convenient opportunity to discuss with a Social Security representative any matters relating to their retirement benefits. The workshop will be held at the Jenks Center.

Monthly Movie

After resolving Social Security questions at the Jenks Center, seniors will be treated to a 1 p.m. showing of the 1935 musical treat, "Naughty Marietta". With the music of Dublin-born Victor Herbert and the singing of Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy. Refreshments will be served.

Monthly Luncheon

The noontime monthly luncheon at Jenks Center will be held Wednesday, Sept. 25. The lunch will be prepared and served by volunteers led by Helen Hodgdon and will feature roast beef sandwiches.

Winchester's Director of Veterans Services, Howard E. Chase Jr. will speak briefly on fair housing and related issues.

Jerry Nason, former sports editor of The Boston Globe, will talk about his reporting experiences. In addition to covering five Olympic games and the sporting scene for nearly half a century, Nason has become skillful in other fields.

After mastering the art of water coloring and receiving prizes for his paintings, Nason has become a skillful wood carver.

Residents should make reservations as soon as possible.

Antique Classes

A series of classes on antiques will be taught in Winchester this fall by George Michael, host of public television's Antiques and Americana.

Michael is well known from coast to coast for his lectures and seminars on antiques and has taught for many years at museums and universities.

Seven sessions covering collecting, identification and valuing antiques will be held Wednesday evenings at 7:30 beginning Oct. 9 at the Jenks Senior Center, 109 Skillings rd.

Further information to enroll may be obtained by contacting the Jenks Center.

Flea Market

The Skillings rd. parking lot will be converted to a gigantic outdoor shopping market this Saturday, when the Chamber of Commerce conducts a flea market from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

OBITUARIES

Warren T. Igoe

Funeral services were held Sept. 16, for Warren T. Igoe, 61, of Cross st., who died unexpectedly Sept. 13 at Halifax Hospital in Daytona, Fla.

Born in Malden, Mr. Igoe was the son of the late John and Charlotte Igoe. He was a Malden resident until moving to Winchester two years ago. He was a 1942 Malden High graduate and an Army veteran who had served in the European Theatre during World War II. He had received a Purple Heart and had served under General George Patton.

Mr. Igoe was a self-employed mover and had formerly worked for Lindstrom Movers of Melrose for 35 years.

Among his survivors are his brother, Harold of Southbridge; two sisters, Claire M. Spadafora of Melrose and Phyllis L. Diapella of Winchester; and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral was held Sept. 16 from the Lane Funeral Home, followed by a funeral mass at St. Mary's Church celebrated by the Rev. Dennis Twomey. Burial was at Forestdale Cemetery in Malden.

Memorial donations may be made to charity of the donor's choice.

Agnes Aiken

A memorial service will be held Sept. 22 at the Unitarian Church on Church st. for Agnes (Montgomery) Aiken, 76, who died Sept. 15 at the Aberjona Nursing Home.

A Winchester resident for 40 years, she most recently lived at 183 Highland ave.

She was a 1931 graduate of Wheaton College and received her master's degree from Harvard University.

She taught Latin at Winchester Junior High for seven years, after which she taught French at the N. Andover High School for five years.

She was a life member and former president of the Winchester League of Women Voters; an active member of the Unitarian Church of Winchester and the Winchester Seniors Assoc.; and a member of the council for Winchester's A Better Chance program.

She also was secretary of the Winchester Council on Aging; publicity director for the Winchester school system; a director of local adult education for many years; a member of the French Club of Winchester and a member of the Harvard Faculty Wives Assoc.

Among her survivors are her daughter, Elizabeth A. Chandler of Norton; her granddaughter, Rebecca Chandler of Norton and a niece, Marcia Wentworth of Watertown.

Memorial services will be at 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 22 at the Unitarian Church on Church st. Burial was private.

Memorial donations may be made to the Winchester Scholarship Foundation, care of Robert Ingraham, Ardley pl., Winchester, or to the Unitarian Church Music Fund.

Delia A. Walsh

Services were held Sept. 12 for Delia Agnes (Murphy) Walsh, 99, who died Sept. 10 at Winchester Nursing Home after a long illness.

Born in Galway, Ireland, Mrs. Walsh had lived in Medford and in Woburn for 30 years. She was the widow of John J. Walsh.

Among her survivors are her son, John M. Walsh of Medford; three daughters, Margaret Leader and Mary Roache, both of Winchester, and Ann Driscoll of Woburn. Also surviving are two sisters, Anne Quinn of Tewksbury and Mary Murphy of Galway, Ireland; nine grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

A funeral was held from Costello Funeral Home, followed by a mass of Christian burial at St. Mary's Church, celebrated by the Rev. Benjamin McMahon. Burial was at Oak Grove Cemetery in Medford; with arrangements by Costello Funeral Home, 177 Washington st.

Guild Opens Season With Mass

The Winchester Chapter of the Guild of the Infant Saviour opened its 1985-86 season with a mass for deceased members Sept. 17, at St. Eulalia's Church.

Mrs. Richard Keating welcomed the guild members. Mass was celebrated by Monsignor Eugene McNamara, M.S.W. spiritual director of the guild. He is head of the Catholic Charitable Bureau of Boston.

James Moritz, music director for St. Mary's Parish, soloed, accompanied by Mrs. James Daschbach, organist.

Co-chairing the event were Mrs. Edward Connors and Mrs. J. Raymond. Also participating were Mrs. William Wadden, lector; Mrs. James Marchant, Mrs. Jeremiah McCarron, and Mrs. Frederick Connor, ushers.

A luncheon was served at the Winchester Country Club following the mass.

Lawsuits Against Towns Are Increasing

Also in Winchester, a developer is suing all five members of the 1982 Planning Board over their decision to deny a subdivision. It is unclear whether $1 million is being asked of each board member or of the entire board, Randall says.

In Arlington, the father of a minor has served the town a claim for $100,000, stating his son was injured in December, 1984 when an Arlington officer arrested him. The suit alleges that because of the officer's "negligence and carelessness," the boy was able to open the door of the cruiser. "As he fell out, the cruiser started to move and ran over his left ankle," the claim states.

Arlington also faces three suits related to schools: a Gibbs student seeks $25,000 for alleged injuries after a shower stall wall fell over; a Stratton School student seeks $100,000 from the town for injuries caused by another student during recess; and a Hardy School student seeks $100,000 after he broke a leg, allegedly on a playground slide.

Belmont Counsel Robert Morrissey says the effect of the suits on his town is moderate.

"We see two or three of these kinds of cases a year. The town has not been severely impacted at all to date," he says. "But a big case could happen at any time."

And when it does, it's the taxpayers who will get hurt. Even if towns escape a damages ruling, taxpayers foot the bill for defense fees and insurance premiums—which are skyrocketing (see related story).

"In 16 years working for Quincy, the largest tort we lost was $6,600. That was from 1950 to 1966," says Winchester's Randall. "If you go into Norfolk Superior Court now, you're likely to have a jury give away $1 million of your money."

"It's the megabucks mania. Everybody thinks money starts at a million."

One explanation for the increased suits against towns is that society is now different, more litigious.

Bar owners, doctors and news reporters all are charged more frequently with making injurious mistakes, along with boards of selectmen, housing authorities, parole boards and town employees.

There were always cases where someone trips on the sidewalk, falls and sues a town. Under state law, claims on sidewalk falls are capped at $5,000.

Arlington spends about $15,000 a year on sidewalk cases, says Maher. Belmont spends less than $5,000, says Morrissey. In 1982, Winchester used less than $350 of the $2,000 it set aside for judgments and claims.

But the Micalizzi-type cases are different, and this is why there are more of them.

In the beginning was the King of England, and you could not sue the king, unless, of course, he allowed you to.

By extension, you could not sue towns, because they were part of the king's kingdom. Lawyers call this the doctrine of municipal immunity, and it held solidly in America for a century and a half.

When citizens felt themselves injured, they would sue employees of a town because they could not sue the town itself. But over the years, courts began finding ad hoc exceptions to town immunity—in cases concerning such things as faulty sidewalks and negligence of the water department.

By the 1970s, the Mass. Supreme Judicial Court pressured the legislature to pass a law to handle negligence cases against towns in an orderly fashion.

The legislature's response is called the Tort Claims Act of 1978, and it caps a municipality's liability at $100,000.

More threatening to towns, however, were a series of decisions in the U.S. Supreme Court exposing municipalities to cases charging violation of civil rights.

Civil rights cases date back to the Civil War, Randall says, but they were only filed against people. Before 1978, towns were not considered people.

Now that has changed. And unlike negligence cases, there is no limit on damages a jury can award in a civil rights case.

The Belmont School Committee faces a civil rights case from a former teacher concerning a vote to deny tenure, but the damages claimed are unclear.

The million-dollar Winchester case against Planning Board members is a civil rights case. Though the town is not named as a party, Randall says, it may choose to indemnify the board members.

After all, he says, "We want our officers to do their jobs. We want planning boards to execute their best judgment and not be cowed by lawsuits."

Randall calls the current state of the law "ridiculous."

"We've opened up a bottomless pit of money called the city or town treasury."

"If two drunks get into an accident, under the present law it's silly for them to sue each other. It's better for them to get together and say the police officer was not schooled properly in traffic control and didn't give the proper hand signals," Randall says.

"Isn't that an absurd state of affairs. But that's the way the current law reacts."

Leaving an expensive lawsuit can damage the budget of any town.

Torrington, Conn., this summer lost a suit against the town and 29 police officers. The jury said the officers did not do enough to protect an abused wife from her husband. The woman was partially paralyzed in one of her husband's attacks. The award: $2.3 million, plus $300,000 to her son.

And Ware, Mass., a town of 9,000, paid $237,500 to settle a claim by a widow that police negligence led to the deaths of her husband and infant daughter. The two were victims of a car crash caused by an alleged drunk driver who police had stopped before the accident—then let go. An earlier ruling awarded $873,690 to the woman, but it was overturned.

For taxpayers in this neck of the woods, the good news is that so far, plaintiffs haven't won large settlements—although they've tried in Arlington.

Arlington Officer Edward Daley was found not negligent in September, 1984 by a Superior Court jury after a high-speed chase for a stolen car resulted in an accident.

A $1.1 million suit against three Arlington officers and the town was dropped in June without reaching trial. The suit alleged the policemen's actions during a resident's arrest caused him to have a heart attack.

The town, however, has had its share of legal costs. It settled out of court for $5,000 in a suit that claimed Dept. of Public Works employees were negligent in inspecting a swing which subsequently broke, allegedly injuring a resident.

Costlier have been the fees to pay outside defense counsel. Arlington paid about $30,000 to outside attorneys to defend the heart attack claim.

Counsel for the Micalizzi case could bill his time at $30,000 as well, Maher estimates.

The cases keep coming. Arlington was threatened with 20 tort claims in 1978, the year the Tort Claims Act went into effect.

In 1983, 83 claims were lodged against the town, though not all evolved into court cases.

In 1984, the figure climbed to 97. "Only part of the reason for this is the doing away of immunity, and also the fact that immunity has had much notoriety in the papers," says counsel Maher.

"Another consideration is we spend a little less money on keeping up the sidewalks than we did before Prop. 2½."

But the overwhelming factor is that Americans are more litigious now," he says.

Last year, tort claims against Arlington dropped from 97 to 58.

"I have no explanation for that," Maher says. "I just don't know. I don't know how to read that sign."

Now that has changed. And unlike negligence cases, there is no limit on

Insurance Gets Costly And Rare

Town Counsel John Maher

Next year, the price tag on insurance to protect Belmont officials and police from liability damages will triple.

The town now pays about $20,000 for public official liability policies, according to Town Accountant Edwin Sparrow Jr. The cost will jump to $65,000.

Complicating matters, the town is finding that fewer companies offer municipal insurance. "Two years ago, we had eight bidders for all our policies," Sparrow says. "Now we've got three."

It's the same in Arlington. Protection for public officials cost $5,900 in 1984, according to Assistant Town Manager Mel Kleckner. This time around it cost $9,000—a 53 percent increase.

Winchester only wanted to know its options. The Insurance Committee decided to ask for bids on comprehensive coverage.

But when the town went to open the envelopes this month, it saw that no company had bid on a complete package.

"The companies didn't want to cover everything," says Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer. "We had to extend the deadline on bids for two weeks, until Oct. 1. . . . Insurance companies are getting reluctant."

It's a story repeated across the country. Premiums are up, bidders are down.

One reason stems from the more frequent lawsuits and higher damage awards.

Another is that insurance companies cannot count on investing

Arlington might need a group plan soon. The town this month learned that it lost the liability policy on its skating rink. The policy runs out Oct. 12.

claim, you have to take it out of next year's budget or out of free cash, if you have it. Or you ask the Finance Committee to make a transfer from the reserve fund."

Marquis says that many large cities across the country are turning to self-insurance because premiums for most policies are prohibitive.

"But to self-insure you have to be pretty large. Arlington is not," Marquis says. "Perhaps it will work if we join with some other communities."

—A.Z.

It's a story repeated across the country. Premiums are up; bidders are down.

premiums at good interest rates for high return. They must rely more heavily on premiums themselves to bring in money.

When towns can't get coverage, they sometimes stop a service rather than face lawsuits. In some towns, public officials become more cautious in exercising their duties of office.

"Why anybody in his right mind would serve in public office today is debatable," says Randall, citing the suit against Winchester Planning Board members.

Arlington Town Manager Donald Marquis offers a possible salvo to the insurance problem. "I've asked the MMA (Mass. Municipal Assn.) to look into pooling the coverage of several towns. Maybe then we could find a company willing to give us protection."

"I think we're going to have a lot of trouble finding a new company," says counsel Maher. "Companies are getting out of that area. Municipal risks are just too heavy now."

Marquis has asked the town's broker to look for insurers for the rink. "I'm looking into the same thing for Town Hall. More and more people are renting Town Hall for functions, and we should be protected."

If nothing surfaces, "we'll have no other choice but to become self-insured," the manager says. "It means that in case of a successful

Maher blames the jump in suits on the dissolving of town immunity and on cuts in sidewalk care under Prop. 2½. But the overwhelming factor is the litigious nature of society, he says.

HELPING A FRIEND ADJUST

Do you know anyone who bought a hearing aid and then gave up wearing it? Perhaps he needed more help and encouragement during the period of adjustment. Remember: if a person has had impaired hearing for a long time, it will take time, patience, and understanding to adjust, to learn how to achieve the best use of the hearing aid. A lot can depend on the reaction of other people. Here are a few hints:

1. Be patient with mistakes. They are bound to happen at first. If something you say is not understood, face the listener and rephrase it.
2. When you go out to restaurants or parties, try to select small, quieter places at first. It takes a great deal of practice to learn to screen out loud noises.
3. Speak slowly and distinctly and give your friend the full attention.

New clients are always welcome and appreciated!

tion he or she may need. Most hearing impaired people need more attention to understand what is being said.

4. Relax! Tension makes everything, including hearing, more difficult.

Biking Cyclists As Fall

Bike Bonanza: Big In Boston

Story by Linda Brickley

Bicycling is getting big in Boston.

Last weekend's American Bicycle Festival boasted 4,000 bicyclists touring Boston in the largest bicycling event in the city's history, sponsored locally by American Youth Hostels (AYH) and Boston Area Bicycle Coalition (BABC).

Many other local organizations cater to cyclists and plan special events for the fall foliage season. (Membership in the groups is not required.)

If you're searching for a hobby — something physically stimulating, easy to learn, and fun — hopping back on a bike could be worth a try.

At least, that's what a member of the Charles River Wheelmen suggests.

"Come on one ride with us and see," says Jacek Rudowski. The group rides every Sunday, rain or shine, year-round, and riders go at their own pace.

Someone new to the sport should find out what kind of biking is most appealing, says Wheelmen President Dave Brahmer of Arlington.

"This club caters to recreational riding," he says. "The first thing to do is visit a reputable bicycle shop, where you'll get pointers on technique and safety equipment."

One expert on that subject is former Olympic bikeracer John Allis of Belmont, part owner of Wheel Works.

Allis says bicycles have become more than just a plaything or toy. "In the initial bike boom in 1971 people were buying 10-speeds that they didn't understand, but now a lot of our customers are committed to their bikes," he says.

"In this area, people are buying the mountain bike as an urban commuting vehicle. It's very durable for riding through Boston potholes, and more comfortable because it has a fatter wheel."

Why do people commute to work on bicycles?

Another former state champion ship bicycle racer, Rob Butler of Cambridge, retired from racing at the age of 30.

He vows that "instead of battling the traffic in a car, you feel terrific when you get to work on a bike; it's less of a headache than driving, and it's always quicker."

One of the most important things, when first starting out, is to be "properly fitted" on a bike of proper size, Allis says.

If the seat is too high, or there's a subtle mistake in distance between the seat and handlebars, "it's impossible to ride properly."

Allis teaches general bikeriding techniques, and coaches riders who want to learn about racing. He says price ranges for the different categories of bikes — racing, commuting, and touring — start around $200-300.

But the price for some weekend jaunts and day trips sponsored by local groups is minimal, and there even recreational riders appear dedicated. From November to March, the Charles River Wheelmen go on "frostbite rides" — if only from one hot chocolate shop to another.

Benefit Rides Will Tour Scenic Country

The mood for bicycling is just fantastic, say cycling enthusiasts.

And now, riders not only pedal for pleasure, but can help a worthy cause at the same time.

This weekend features two benefit rides.

One is a 140-mile Autumn Escape Bike Trek Sept. 21-23 on Cape Cod, a fundraiser for the American Lung Association. For information, call Rick Riley at 426-8330.

Another is the Twin Touring Classic Sept. 22, sponsored by the Mass. Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Riders can choose a route in Worcester County or Western Mass.

Call Terry Herzog at the MS office, 890-4990. Its minimum pledge is $1 per mile.

Pleasure rides also are coming up.

American Youth Hostel rides will be:

© Saturday, Sept. 21: "Just Around Golfin'" meets 10 a.m. at Needham Center on the green for a 30-mile tour of more than 100 holes of golf courses. Bring a lunch. For more information, call Albert Lester, 1769-1429.

© Sunday, Sept. 22: "South Shore Coastal Ride," meets 10 a.m. at Hingham Beach parking lot for a 278-mile tour stopping for lunch at a local restaurant, then to Wompatuck State Park. Call Barbara Shane at 749-6230.

© Fall foliage Columbus Day weekend trip, "Autumn in Amherst," Oct. 12-14. To sign up call Lenny Gervais at 723-1967. Approximate cost for hotel and meals is $105.

© Sunday, Oct. 20: "Scenic Bedford," meets 10 a.m. at Bedford Commons for a colorful, leisurely 30-35 mile ride. Call Dick Norcross at 893-0632 for more information.

Also Sept. 22, the Charles River Wheelmen plan a "National Century" ride, which clubs all over the country host once a year.

Riders meet at the Pillar House Restaurant in Newton, at routes 16 and 128, 7:30 a.m. for those riding the 100-kilometer (a metric century); and 9:30 a.m. for those riding 25 and 50 miles. There is a fee.

For more information call Jacek Rudowski after 7 p.m. at 361-5273. He says there is no need to sign up — just show up. The group rides every Sunday.

Sept. 29, the Wheelmen sponsor an "Annual Steamers and Beer" ride, starting at Wakefield Center, Main and Church sts., 8 a.m. for 100-mile riders, 10:15 a.m. for 55-mile riders, and for those who like a slower pace, meet at Topsfield at the intersection of route 97 and Washington st. at 11:30 a.m. All meet at a common lunch stop in Essex.

The Wheelmen's fall foliage trips are tentatively scheduled late in October.

The club is at "Charles River Wheelmen, 19 Chase ave., W. Newton, MA 02465," or call Rudowski after 7 p.m. at 361-5273.

The information coordinator also says to bring adjustment tools such as a pump, patch kit, spare tube, and two tire irons.

"There are people with us who have just started their first organized ride, and people who have been riding with us for 15 years. We're a very diverse group, and everyone is welcome," he says.

What To Do

Boom? Seek Greener Pastures Weather Sparks Show East Coast, West Coast Vie In The Early Days Of Bicycling

The four-city American Bike Festival being sponsored by GRAPE-NUTS Cereal and BICYCLING Magazine may be the biggest program of its kind ever attempted, and yet the concept of recreational cycling dates back to the earliest days of the bicycle in this country.

In the 1890's, Sunday afternoon mass cycling rides "for pleasure and health" were being held in New York City (along Riverside Drive), in Chicago (down Michigan Avenue) and in Boston (around The Commons). An article in an 1897 Brooklyn newspaper reported: "In several blocks, there were an estimated 25,000 cyclists on a Sunday afternoon."

Although the east was the center of most cycling activity of that era, California was not to be outdone. In 1890, 70-odd members of the Pasadena Bike Club, led by a Captain Lancaster and perched precariously atop 54-inch and 60-inch-high velocipedes, undertook a mass ride through neighboring villages and towns, prompting one local gazette to observe: "They astonished the natives of Monrovia by gliding through at a 15-mile-per-hour gait, and left them gazing at this fast-retreating spectacle." (Incidentally, this historic ride was recreated by 700 members of the present-day Pasadena Bike Club in 1974.)

The modern Southern California freeway system may have had its origins in a nine-mile-long elevated wooden bridge built for recreational cyclists in 1900. Connecting Los Angeles and Pasadena, it had bike lanes on both sides and included lights for nighttime cycling, repair shops at either end and even rent a bike service. One day an automobile accidentally made its way onto the elevated bridge and cruised over to Pasadena — and thus the concept of the freeway took hold, although it would be more than half a century before the idea became a reality (or a nightmare, depending on how often one is stranded in a typical Los Angeles traffic jam).

Sunday afternoons seemed to be the time for mass cycling rides, even though many ministers denounced this "heathen" activity from the pulpit. Said one, "When indulged in on Sunday, cycling is a sure road to Hell."

Hell was a little far for Brooklyn riders but they did manage to build a five-and-one-half-mile road alongside Coney Island Boulevard. It was called the Coney Island Bike Path, and the idea was to pedal down the course in the morning, enjoy a basket lunch and cooling beverages in a small park, and then ride uptown again in the afternoon.

It was a historic time in the evolution of cycling. In 1892, in Dayton, Ohio, two brothers opened their first bike shop. Orville and Wilbur Wright also tinkered with another idea in the yard behind the bike shop and, in 1903, introduced the world to modern air travel. By 1892, 312 factories were turning out 1,900 different brands of bicycles across the U.S. But the rest of the country wasn't keeping abreast.

By 1904, there were 2 million miles of dirt roads in the country, and only 141 miles of roads paved with asphalt or brick. This made

Sunday afternoon cycling something of a hazard and prompted a program called "Good Roads for Good Rides," led by the League of American Wheelmen and its 50,000 members.

The unstable high-wheelers of the day could not navigate the rocky, rutted roads and so many cyclists took to pedalling along the sidewalks among crowds of pedestrians. This, of course, was not an ideal situation — and cycling soon cultivated many detractors who felt the activity should have been ended then and there.

Although the great majority of early cyclists indulged in the sport merely for its recreational and esthetic values, there were of course the daredevils seeking sheer speed on their cumbersome machines as well as the stunt riders seeking headlines and, perhaps, a special niche in bike history.

Among these was a Hartford, Conn., man named George B. Thayer who one morning mounted the seat of his 46-inch wheel Columbia Expert model and started pedalling for California. He eventually made it — 11,000 miles through 23 states — but not before enduring all sorts of indignities, like repeatedly being hauled off muddy roads by horse and carriage, being rescued by a freight train on the Great Plains and otherwise being pulled over mountains, across fields, rivers and over fences by farmers, school children and other curious passers-by who wondered how anyone could hope to conquer the nation astride such an ungainly — and, many thought, impractical — machine.

In 1891, a group of daring cyclists organized an around-the-world tour, completing it three years later, far short of any kind of speed record but certainly worth an "A" for endurance and perseverance.

Today, with the emphasis on physical fitness, good health and outdoor activities, recreational cycling continues to hold wide appeal. The Five-Boro mass recreational ride through Brooklyn, Queens, Manhattan, the Bronx and Staten Island in New York City attracts 25,000 riders. Turnouts of 2,000-plus cyclists have taken part in recreational 35-milers in San Diego and Boston. Weekend touring groups are active all over the country.

Hell was a little far for Brooklyn riders but they did manage to build a five-and-one-half mile road alongside Coney Island Boulevard.

The spectacle of hundreds — often thousands — of recreational cyclists pedalling along on leisure rides is no longer considered unusual.

There is, it would appear, a renewed appreciation of what the trusty and time tested bicycle can mean to one's lifestyle. Not everyone can compete in the famed Tour de France. Few are qualified to reach speeds of 40 miles per hour on the steep banks of a velodrome. Rarely does a cyclist win an Olympic gold medal. But everyone can ride down quiet city streets on a Sunday morning, through scenic parks, alongside flowing rivers and into the summer countryside. This is a privilege reserved for all of us, just as it has been since the beginning.

Photographer Paul Drake captures Lorenzo Williams doing his stuff on a bicycle.

The History of Cycling

1790 — In France, Chevalier de Sivrac creates the Celefire, the first "bicycle." Two structural shortcomings led to the Celefire's quick demise: it had neither brakes nor steering capability.

1816 — Baron Von Drais, a German, improves on the Celefire design and invents the Walk Along or Draisine. The machine was moved by pushing it along the ground and had a tiller that turned the front wheel.

1818 — The Baron's invention, capable of 8 mph, is being ridden in England where it is called a pedestrian currier, patent accelerator, Dandy horse, velocipede and hobby horse. A handle bar replaces the steering tiller but at 60 pounds, the Draisine is too heavy to propel by foot.

1820 — Monsieur Julian receives a patent from the French government for the first foot-pedal bicycle. The bicycle had one enormous wheel with a gear, one small wheel above which the rider sat and a third wheel suspended above the ground that was kicked with the feet to supply the power.

1838 — Scottish blacksmith Kirkpatrick MacMillan takes an old metal hobby horse cycle and attaches cranks to the rear axle, suspends swinging pedals and joins the cranks to the pedals.

1842 — MacMillan's bicycle outruns the local stagecoach riding a "fast" 14 mph.

1855 — Ernest Michaux joins the list of inventors and creates a bicycle that was propelled by moving cranks with the feet.

1863 — A student of Michaux, Pierre Lallemont, develops a superior model of the crank propelled machine but the Michaux version remains popular.

1869 — The Phantom, a bicycle with a diamond-shaped frame and history's first rubber tires, appears but is so difficult to ride that it soon disappears.

1870 — While the Michaux factory is turning out 400 cycles a year, James Starley of the Coventry Sewing Machine Co. builds the Ariel. This machine, based on the design of two earlier bicycles, the Ordinary and the Penny Farthing, has a large front wheel balanced by a smaller rear wheel and it is faster than anything up to that time.

1879 — Over 300 kinds of bicycles are being produced by 60 different British firms. The Bion, cycling's first magazine, appears.

1880 — Two improved and safer versions of the unpredictable Ordinary make their debut: one is the Facile and the other the Extraordinary.

1885 — John Ken Starley, a nephew of the original James Starley, introduces his Starley's Rover. It boasts direct steering, coasters and brakes. (Most experts feel this machine evolved into the modern bicycle.)

1890 — The Broncho Light Roadster provides another breakthrough — it has two wheels the same size. By this year, most bicycles were equipped with rear wheel safety drive devices, rubber tires, brakes, handle-bar steering and pedals.

Top: American Repertory Theatre presents a fall festival, including scenes from King Stag featuring the queen, Diane D'Aquila embracing the true King Deramo; bottom: Private Lives is playing at the Nickerson Theatre through Oct. 12 as the opening production for Norwell's professional theatre company.

Coward's Leaves

There's a caste system in theatre. With the passage of time certain works are elevated to the status of "classics."

Such a play is Noel Coward's mannered comedy "Private Lives" through Oct. 12, opening the curtain on Nickerson Theatre's second season as an equity house in Norwood.

But "Private Lives" is not an icon and, after 55 years, tastes do change. Director David MacKay has snipped the verbose script here and there, but not enough. While the first and third acts work reasonably well, the second act, interminable and insufferable, is little more than a big yawn.

The play enjoyed three very successful runs on Broadway with such stars as Coward himself, Lawrence Olivier, Tallulah Bankhead, Gertrude Lawrence and Tammy Grimes and having exceptional personnel (not present here) is obviously imperative to its success as a revival.

Avid theatre-goers are as familiar with the names of Amanda and Elyot as they are with the more contemporary George and Martha. Here we have the tale of two people who can't live with each other, nor without. As Amanda reflects (and from whence the title is derived), most people are not normal... "deep down in their private lives."

Impetuous Amanda (Linda Cameron) and good-looking Elyot (Bob Riley) had a turbulent romance, married, and an equally turbulent divorce.

Five years later, on a summer's eve in a hotel in southern France, they meet on their adjacent terraces. Both are "on honeymoon." Amanda married to proper Victor Prynne (John Adair) and Elyot knotted to winnie young Sibyl (Paris Klopp).

The old spark of love brazes anew and the pair run off to Amanda's flat in Paris. After a few days, however, they again find their fiery romance alternating between passions of love and anger. Both revert to their old shenanigans, bicker constantly, air dirty lines, and a wild fight ensues (notable staging).

Into this situation come their aggrieved spouses. There is a roundelay of affiliations as the women first stick together, then apart, and new partnerships form. Eventually Sibyl and Victor go at it hammer and tongs, opening the eyes of Elyot and Amanda, who steal off together once more.

Costumes by Craig Sonnenberg are appropriate to the period and handsome. James Hoff's first act set is terribly cramped, restricting the action of the actors, but his design for Amanda's flat is delightful.

Producer J. Arnold Nickerson has slated six shows, 43 performances for each, for the new season. To follow are: Tennessee Williams' drama "The Glass Menagerie" (Oct. 18-Nov. 23); the Tom Jones-Harvey Schmidt musical "The Fantasticks" (Jan. 3-Feb. 8); Bernard Slade's "Tribute" (Feb. 14-Mar. 22); Ira Levin's thriller

"Deathtrap" (Mar. 28-May 3); and N. Richard Nash's romantic comedy "The Rainmaker" (May 9-June 14). For the holiday season, Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" will be presented Dec. 3-22 (not included in the regular six-play subscriber series).

For reservations call 871-2400. A detailed brochure is available by calling or writing The Nickerson Theatre, P.O. Box 272, 30 Accord Park Drive, Accord, MA 02018.

Fiorello! The Season Best

The best musical of the 1985 season is not Broadway's Tony Award-winning "Big River," but the fabulous revival of "Fiorello!" at the Goodspeed Opera House.

In what must be considered the coup of the decade, Goodspeed reunited the original creators of the hit musical of 26 years ago in East Haddam, CT! Composer Jerry Bock and lyricist Sheldon Harnick collaborated in rehearsals with Tony Award-winning choreographer Peter Gennaro, who created the original dances, and with a brilliant cast of 23 actors under the direction of Gerald Gutierrez and the musical direction of Lynn Crigler, they have mounted a revival (through Sept. 27) that is actually better than the original Pulitzer Prize winner!

The weak spots have been blue-pencilled (LaGuardia reading the funny papers, etc.) and the show tightened up immeasurably, so that the story, which captures the tough, joyous flavor of New York City through the flamboyant, dynamic, provocative personality of "The Little Flower," rolls merrily along!

The musical traces the formative years of an honest-to-goodness modern-day hero, a short, dumpy, gravel-voiced Prince Valiant who championed the cause of the poor, the oppressed, the needy, and fought tooth and nail to rid his city of greedy and dishonest politicians, corruption and graft.

The story picks up in 1914 when LaGuardia (Jack Hallett), a struggling lawyer in Greenwich Village, decides to run for Congress.

He wins the backing of the Republican leader of the 14th district, Ben Marino (Raymond Thorne), who has been seeking a sacrificial goat, since no Republican from his district has ever been victorious. Fiorello takes up the cudgel for the workers of the Nifty Shirt Waist, who are on strike because of sweatshop conditions, and also arranges for the release from jail one of its leaders, Thea (Lynne Wintersteller), booked on a bogus charge of soliciting.

Pursuing a vigorous campaign and appealing to the different ethnic groups, Fiorello wins the election, and, against all odds, becomes a staunch proponent of the unpopular World War I draft act. Once the draft is enacted, Fiorello enlists in the Army. In a series of clever motion-picture montages

What's On The Boards By Dann Kosow

Private Lives Much To Be Desired

Fiorello's war years are reviewed and, upon his discharge, he and Thea are married.

Ten years pass. Thea is very ill. Fiorello is running for mayor against Jimmy Walker. His opponents contrive to have him killed, but while he escapes injury, disaster strikes in the death of Thea and his loss of the election.

But Fiorello never gives up. He becomes a prime mover in having Tammany Hall investigated and finally does win the mayor's office on a fusion ticket. He also finds personal happiness in his marriage to his secretary Marie (Randy Graff), who has loved him all these many years.

Best tunes in the somewhat unmelodic score are three hilarious satirical numbers by Ben and his cronies, "The Bum Won," "Politics and Poker," and "Little Tin Box" (a song and dance show-stopper), two ballads beautifully interpreted by Thea, "When Did I Fall in Love" and the nostalgic "Till Tomorrow" (exquisitely staged), and Gennaro's choreographic wizardry in "The Name's LaGuardia," "I Love a Cop," engagingly sung and danced by Kiel Junius.

Douglas Stein's set of smoked mirror and the New York skyline in miniature is ingenious.

The orchestra is sensational! Jack Hallett is great as the man of many hats, Randy Graff's portrayal of Maria is heartbreakingly sympathetic, and interaction between cast members is phenomenal! Truly, this mounting is "On the Side of the Angels!" (203-873-8668).

Extra matinee performances have been scheduled for the final week at 2:30 p.m. Sept. 23, 24, 25 and 27. In addition, "Fiorello" has been optioned by Broadway producer Zev Buffman for a tour of his Florida theatres prior to its engagement on Broadway!

Art Presents Fall Festival

The American Repertory Theatre is presenting a Fall Festival of two productions from its repertory — Carlo Gozzi's "The King Stag," directed by Andrei Serban, and Luigi Pirandello's "Six Characters In Search Of An Author," adapted and directed by AET's artistic director Robert Brustein through Oct. 2.

Also joining the program will be the Music Theatre Group/Lenox Arts Center production of "The Garden of Earthly Delights," a 75-minute music/theatre/dance offering, which opens at 7 p.m. on Wed., Sept. 25 and performs nightly (generally following a 7 p.m. showing of "The King Stag") through Sept. 30.

One of the highlights of the 1984/85 season, "The King Stag" is a festive celebration brimming with joyful exuberance, a fairy tale for all ages, a tale of love and betrayal, intrigue and mirth, replete with pageantry, larger-than-life puppets, magical creatures of the forest, music, and some of the most beautiful imagery ever conjured up for the stage.

All the ART actors who collaborated with director Serban to discover the magical, mystical kingdom of Sorendipio — John Bottoms, Diane D'Aquila, Thomas Derrah, Jeremy Geidt, Rodney Hudson, Harry S. Murphy, and Priscilla Smith — will recreate their roles, to be joined by Ben Halley, Jr. as the Prime Minister Tartaglia, Jack Stehlin as Truffaldino and returning actress Elizabeth Norment as Clarice.

Also returning to ART is the stunning 90-minute adaptation of Pirandello's 20th century classic, "Six Characters In Search Of An Author." From the first shattering moment when the "Six Characters" crossed the ART stage, audiences have been thrilled and haunted by these spectral beings.

Who were they? Where did they come from? They're that strange story, with its poignant longing and bitter scorn, true, or was it an illusion?

What mystery lies behind the magic of the mirror and the lake? This spell-binding production has become one of the most popular and most travelled productions in ART's repertory, having enjoyed successful runs at the 1984 Olympic Arts Festival, one previous revival in Cambridge, a national tour, and a six-week engagement at the Goodman Theatre in Chicago.

Student matinees for "The King Stag" are Sept. 19th to 21st at 11:00 a.m. and for "Six Characters" on Oct. 1st and 2nd at 11 a.m. Due to special funding from the Mass. Council, tickets are $5 each. For further information on matinees, call Ruth Davidson at 547-8300.

ART will also present "The Garden of Earthly Delights," one of the most heralded theatrical creations of the decade, due in part by a grant from the Arts Exchange Program of the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Conceived and directed by noted dancer/choreographer Martha Clarke, with original music by Richard Peaslee, "Garden" uses movement, aerial acrobatics, extraordinary visual effects and music to dramatize Hieronymus Bosch's great painting.

To this 500-year old vision of sensuous pleasure and sensual horrors, Clarke has, with her seven actors/dancers and three musicians, created a performance piece where all the performers fly and fall overhead on wire and trapezes, while transforming themselves from trees to serpents to Adam and Eve, from bawdy Flemish peasants to demons colliding in mid-air.

For a performance schedule and reservations call 547-8300. Student group, theatre party, senior citizen, and series discounts are available. Public transportation (red line to Harvard Square) is available to the Loeb Drama Center, 64 Brattle St., Cambridge.

Arts Center Presents Gray

The Portland Performing Arts Center will present the unique monologist, Spalding Gray, in a mini-series of three evenings of his most provocative work. The series will open with Gray's "Swimming to Cambodia, Part I" on Sept. 27, followed by "Swimming to Cambodia, Part II" on Sept. 28, and "Sex and Death to the Age 14" on Sept. 29. Curtain for all performances is 8 p.m.

"Swimming to Cambodia" is based upon Spalding Gray's first "Hollywood experience" — the making of the Academy Award winner, "The Killing Fields." Though in two parts, each stands on its own and can be viewed as a separate piece of work or as one unified whole. "Sex and Death to the Age 14" is based upon Gray's childhood in Rhode Island.

As a result of his seemingly spontaneous delivery, Gray's monologues at once establish a direct, intimate relationship with the audience. He subtly (he at times quite brazenly) weaves tales, digressions, jokes and commentaries into a performance piece which is fascinating, insightful, political, occasionally profound and always entertaining. Gray's ease and his candid personal style very simply invites the audience into his world, whether it be his childhood or on location in Thailand making a movie about Cambodia.

His appearance in Portland will take place during a hiatus from filming David Byrne's new film, "True Stories," which Gray describes as being a cross between "Our Town" and "The Music Man."

The performances, sponsored by Union Mutual Charitable Foundation in association with WMGX, will take place at the Arts Center, 25A Forest Ave., Portland, ME, 04101. For reservations call the box office at (207) 774-0465.

Concertgebouw To Perform

The world-renowned Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, under the baton of Bernard Haitink, will give a Symphony Hall concert Sept. 30 at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Wang Celebrity Series.

Founded in 1888, the Concertgebouw Orchestra is one of the truly great ensembles of the world. The special sound of the ensemble has inspired composers to dedicate compositions to it and its conductors — Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" being one of the most significant.

Under the present Music Director Bernard Haitink, the Concertgebouw Orchestra has made several triumphant tours of the United States and played to audiences in the Far East, Great Britain, Switzerland and West Germany. Haitink continues the long line of work-class conductors who have guided the orchestra throughout the years. Maestro Haitink will be succeeded by Riccardo Chailly as chief conductor in September 1988.

The Concertgebouw Orchestra's program for the Symphony Hall concert follows:

Haydn, Symphony No. 88
Mahler, Symphony No. 5
Tickets for the Concertgebouw Orchestra's concert will go on sale at the Symphony Hall box office Sept. 9. The box office is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; for information, call 266-1492. Tickets may be charged by calling Concertcharge at 497-1118.

Leave It Under Rehearsal

Rehearsals are underway for Leave It To Jane, The Jerome Kern musical beginning performances October 2 at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, Connecticut.

In honor of the 100th anniversary of the legendary composer's birth, Leave It To Jane is the final show of the Goodspeed Opera House 1985 season. Book and lyrics are by Guy Bolton and P.G. Wodehouse, who collaborated with Kern on the musical classics Oh, Lady! Lady!, Very Good Eddie and Oh, Boy!, all of which have been produced at Goodspeed.

Directing Leave It To Jane is Thomas Gruenewald, who directed Oh, Boy! at Goodspeed as well as Take Me Along last season at Goodspeed, at the Kennedy Center and in New York.

The choreographer is Walter Painter, who was nominated three times for an Emmy Award for his choreography of the Academy Award Shows. He won an Emmy Award for a Lynda Carter television special.

Musical Director is Lynn Crigler. Sets are designed by James Leonard Joy, lighting by Craig Miller and costumes by John Sullivan.

Featured in principal roles are Tom Batten, Nick Corley, Jack Doyle, Gary Gage, Rebecca Luker, Patrick McCord, Robert Nichols, Dale O'Brien, Michael O'Steen, Faith Prince, Iris Revson, David Staller and Michael Waldron.

Paul Ciria, Patricia Forestier, Marc Hunter, Mercedes Perez, Lisa Pompa, Donna M. Pompei and Keith Savage comprise the ensemble.

For tickets to Leave It To Jane the Goodspeed Box Office, (203) 873-8668, daily 9:00 - 9:00, Sunday 10:00 - 5:00.

Lyric Opera Launches New Season

The Boston Lyric Opera Company will stage three productions for the 1985-86 season, opening with the East Coast premiere of Handel's "Agrippina," with performances on Friday, Oct. 4, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 6, at 3 p.m.

Thomas Dunn, Artistic Director of Boston's Handel and Haydn Society, conducts an orchestra of original instruments, and Anne Ewers, the Boston Lyric Opera Company's General Director, stages the piece which proved Handel's first great dramatic triumph.

Janice Felty, who trained in New England and has won critical acclaim in San Francisco, performs Agrippina. Valerie Walters, one of Boston's finest mezzo-sopranos, and Nancy Armstrong, who earned outstanding praise at the Boston Early Music Festival, will also be featured.

Skipping from the 17th to the 20th century, the company will mount two strikingly modernist works for one night only, Friday, Oct. 25, at 8 p.m. In 1958 Poulenc set Jean Cocteau's searing melodrama "La Voix Humaine" as a concerto for soprano and orchestra. Staged by Sergei Tschernich, Northeastern University's Division of Fine Arts Director, the Poulenc opera will feature Anna Gabrieli in the solo role.

Between the World Wars, England's cultural lions Edith Sitwell and William Walton joined forces to produce the masterpiece for narrator and orchestra — "Facade." William Cavness, who presents "Chamber Works" and "Reading Aloud" on WGBH, will perform this virtuosic and witty piece. John Balme returns to the company as Guest Conductor for this exciting double bill.

Rossini's delightful farce, "The Barber of Seville," will round off the varied season with performances of Friday, March 7, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 9, at 3 p.m.

Michael Chaffy, a Boston University faculty member and the conductor of the school's orchestra and opera, conducts, joining forces with stage director Dirk Hillyer, a new arrival to the Boston scene, Robert Honeysucker, one of the area's most gifted baritones, will play the role of Figaro, supported by James Broussard, Gale Fuller, and Marion Dry.

The Boston Lyric Opera Company also announced that the first two productions are completely underwritten, and support for the third is being solicited. The company also hopes to cover operational expenses for the fiscal year through grants and donations so that all ticket income can be used toward reduction of the debt incurred producing the Ring cycle in 1983. The debt retirement has now exceeded $280,000 over a short 18-month period.

All opera will be performed in English at Northeastern University's Alumni Auditorium, Ell Building, 360 Huntington Ave., Boston. For more information contact the Boston Lyric Opera Company, 102 The Fenway, Boston, MA 02115 — (617) 267-1512.

ARIES: (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Don't let the unexpected throw you off balance — follow your intuition. If you'll speak up and share your ideas others will listen gratefully. A romantic wish or long-held hope is on the verge of coming true.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Be objective, fair and resolve a family argument. Accept a social invitation from friends and enjoy — you'll make a good impression. Rewards will be great if you'll give of yourself to others in a compassionate way.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Keep your eyes on your goal, take care of important matters and don't be distracted. Don't be taken in by big talk — see some action before you make a decision. A disagreement solved can make a relationship even stronger.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Be realistic about money and don't make any promises you can't keep. You can find some real bargains now that benefit everyone around you. Personal contacts prove profitable and some could make a long-term romantic commitment.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Let loved ones on the home scene know how much you care. Get everyone involved in a family project. The other person in a close relationship may reach a decision which upsets you but avoid a confrontation and use diplomacy.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Romance could put you on cloud nine, but be realistic and don't imagine things are more perfect than they are! Don't neglect career matters — be sure you meet your responsibilities. Finish up current projects.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — New ideas about career changes or future goals can mean a cycle is closing and fresh beginnings are just around the corner. Be straightforward and determined — others are impressed. Take some wise investment advice.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Not the time for impulsive actions or extravagance — be very objective. Take care of business details yourself and don't delegate authority now. Your popularity is high and a new romance could burst onto the scene!

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Opportunities for success are all around you so be alert! Your positive attitude is contagious to your more paranoid associates and you can speak your mind without hesitation. Carefully scrutinize all written material.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — You can't buy love so don't deplete your bank account in the attempt — use the light touch instead. You can resolve a financial obstacle with some personal effort. Adopt a new domestic schedule for greater harmony.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — A previous obstacle may suddenly turn in your favor. Dare to take a bold step in a somewhat risky new direction and others will back you. Someone could profess love for you and it makes you feel good all over!

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — If someone lets you in on a secret plan, keep the information strictly confidential. Discuss a possible change of residence or domestic rearrangements — be flexible. Trust your intuition in all things at this time.

A Weekend Away Fallin' Fun In New England

By GERARD J. GAGNON
ALA Auto & Travel Club

A special state exposition and a number of country fairs and harvest festivals are among New England's top attractions during the weekend of Sept. 27-29.

Connecticut and its capital, Hartford, are celebrating their 350th anniversaries this year with a variety of events. Among them will be the big Connecticut Yankee Expo at Hartford's Civic Center, Sept. 26-29.

About 200 organizations from throughout the state will salute Connecticut's past, present and future with many special exhibits, displays and demonstrations. Music and other entertainment will be presented by various Connecticut performers.

The Expo will be open Thursday, noon-10 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m.-10 p.m.; Sunday, noon-6 p.m. Admission: $4; children 6-16, $2; children under 6, free. (203) 278-7150.

Other weekend events scheduled in Connecticut include the Durham Fair on Friday-Sunday at Durham, A Farmers Market Day and Best-Dressed Sheep Contest on Sunday at New Preston and the Chrysanthemum Festival, Sept. 27-Oct. 13, at Bristol.

Fair Days

The largest country fair in Maine will be held in Fryeburg, Sept. 29, through Oct. 6. Sponsored by The West Oxford Agricultural Society, the Fryeburg Fair's attractions include its beautiful setting in prime fall foliage viewing time.

Fair visitors may also enjoy a farm museum, a working milk parlor, a big midway, a Woodmen's Day, four-wheel-drive pulling, country night shows and pari-mutuel harness racing. The racing program will be held Oct. 1-6, with stake races Oct. 2-4. Post times will be 1:30 p.m.

The fair will be open 7 a.m.-9 p.m. Admission: $3, except $4 on Saturday; children under 12, free.

Tel. (207) 935-3268.

Also scheduled in Maine during the weekend are a Fall Foliage Festival on Saturday at Phillips, the 16th Annual Fly-In on Saturday and Sunday at Gaddis Airport, Bingham, and the 2nd Annual Blue Mountain Arts & Crafts Festival on Saturday and Sunday at Sunday River Ski Area, Bethel.

Harvest High

A Harvest Festival will be held at Cranston City Hall grounds, Cranston, R.I., on Sept. 27-29.

Featured will be more than 100 artists and craftsmen, a midway, a road race, ethnic foods and entertainment. Among musical groups performing will be Caribou, B. Willie Smith, Rhyme & Reason, Heart of Gold and the Rhode Island Symphonic Band.

The festival will be open on Friday, 6-9 p.m.; Saturday, noon-9 p.m.; Sunday, noon-6 p.m. Free admission. Tel. (401) 461-1000.

Other weekend events scheduled in Rhode Island include the Great Swamp Memorial Pilgrimage on Sunday at West Kingston and the Rhode Island Pro Bass Tournament on Sunday at Echo Lake, Burrillville.

Pressing Date

An old cider mill, the newest exhibit at Old Sturbridge Village, Sturbridge, Mass., will begin crushing and pressing apples Sept. 28. The early 19th-century horse-powered mill was moved to the village from Brookfield, N.H.

During weekends through November, visitors can see the mill in operation producing traditional New England cider. Officials at the recreated 1830's museum village note that fermented cider of 4-8 percent alcohol content was the most popular beverage among rural New Englanders in the early 19th century.

Old Sturbridge Village is open year-round. Summer hours through Oct. 27 are 9 a.m.-5 p.m., daily. Admission: $8.50; children ages 6-15, $4; children under 6, free. (617) 347-3362.

Among other weekend events on tap in Massachusetts are the Massachusetts Cranberry Festival and Fair on Saturday and Sunday at Edaville Railroad, South Carver, the beginning of Fall Foliage Festival Week at North Adams on Saturday and a Harvest Festival & Craft Fair on Saturday at Essex Institute, Salem.

Country Time

The 109th Deerfield Fair will be held in Deerfield, N.H., Sept. 26-29. A typical country fair, it will feature a variety of agricultural and livestock exhibits and competitions, a midway and entertainment.

The fair will be open 8 a.m.-midnight, daily, except on Sunday, 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Admission: $4; children under 12, free. Tel. (603) 463-7421.

Other weekend events scheduled in New Hampshire include a Fall Muster in the Mountains on Friday-Sunday at Glen, the 8th Annual Quilt Show on Sunday at Franconia and the annual Fall Foliage Antiques Show & Sale on Saturday and Sunday at Sugar Hill.

Crafty

In Stowe, Vt., the 2nd Annual Foliage Craft Fair will be held under a big tent at Topnotch Field, Sept. 27-29. Featured will be 100 craft designers, plus craft demonstrations, food, music and other entertainment.

The fair will be open, rain or shine, Friday, noon-6 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m.; Sunday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Admission: $3; youngsters 16 and under, free. Tel. (802) 253-8585.

Among other Vermont events scheduled during the weekend is "Holiday in The Hills" on Saturday and Sunday at Victory and Granby. Featured will be a variety of activities, including demonstrations, horse pulling, a blacksmith shop, canoe rides and entertainment. Free admission. Tel. (802) 892-5983.

on Sat. and noon to 5 p.m. on Sun. Call 262-9490.

Peace in a Nuclear Age

Concord — Sept. 21. A conference on "Moral Dilemmas of Peace in a Nuclear Age" features Dr. Robert Coles and begins at 2:15 p.m. at the First Parish Church, Lex. rd. Following the theme session is panel discussion by noted experts, including U.S. Ambassador (ret.) Eugene McAuliffe. A variety of workshops complete the program. Call Janet Beyer, 369-4828, or Polly Attwood, 369-6365.

What Do You Say?

What Three Things Would You Do To Improve Public Schools?

By LINDA RAUCH

Judy Cotton, 43
Homemaker
Belmont

I think that especially in Belmont, education can be improved by increased parental involvement on the volunteer level. Increased respect for teachers should be made. No parents are concerned with public schools because they send them to private schools.

Jennifer Terry, 14
Student
Arlington

It's boring and a waste of time. They keep putting me in advanced courses so I don't do well. Some teachers help you out and some of them don't. I would like to see the curriculum improved by making it more interesting.

Ann Berndt, 42
Homemaker
Belmont

I think that there is a low esteem in the teacher's profession. There's no relationship on the value we put on teachers than on doctors or lawyers. I say as a former teacher, that teachers aren't given the respect they need. When I grew up, a strong emphasis was placed on public schools. A general priority should be made to fund education.

Joyce Margi, 24
Advertising Assistant
Arlington

One of the things I would do is improve the context of classes by making the classes more interesting. They should deal with the issues that have to do with high school kids. In regard to teachers, they should have excellent communication skills in order to be able to teach better. They should be able to see through a child's eyes.

Andy Hunter, 15
Student
Winchester

I think students should have more of a say in student government. Students don't have a legal say in anything. I think they should have an open campus. You have to have a pass to go anywhere and they want to eliminate an open campus all together. I think that would be stupid. They should also do something about the ventilation system. It's very uncomfortable in the school.

Lauren Murray, 15
Student
Winchester

I like it. I think all the departments are well organized and if you want to apply yourself, you can do well. The teachers should try to make the subjects more interesting. I don't think they should give you so much homework, either. When you take six courses then you don't have time for anything else.

What's Free Spare Time Tips

By Terry Bisbee

You may have a bit more spare time now near the end of summer than you will have in a month or so. If you're looking for a new hobby, these interesting freebies should encourage you to get involved. Take a shot at photography or candle making.

Or, if you're the "mad scientist" type and already spend hours hunched over your worktable dreaming up new things, send for the first freebie and learn what to do with "that thing-a-ma-bob" you've invented that you're sure is worth millions.

Invention Information

How many times have you said to yourself about some new product on the market, "I already thought of that!"

If you have a creative mind that's prone to thinking up new ideas but you just don't know how to follow through on them, this nudge is exactly what you need to get you going. It's in the form of an Inventors Information Kit offered by the Affiliated Inventors Foundation, a national non-profit organization that exists to "encourage and assist independent inventors."

Services the foundation offers include evaluations, patent searches, patent applications preparation, technical drawings and a wide range of marketing assistance services.

There's a form in the kit called the "Record of Invention." You begin by mailing in this completed form and within two weeks of receipt, they'll mail you a free preliminary appraisal of your invention. If your invention passes their initial screening, they'll suggest steps you may want to take to further pursue its development.

Next time you get a "crazy" idea about a better way to do something, or conjure up a completely new item — don't just forget about it — you may be on the verge of discovering the world's greatest invention!

Directions: Send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ask For: Inventors Information Kit

Mail To: Affiliated Inventors Foundation, 501-W. Iowa Ave., Colorado Springs, CO 80909.

"Freebies" is compiled by Freebies Magazine, a national publication that features free (or postage-and-handling-only) offers you can request through the mail. To receive information about Freebies, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Freebies Magazine, P.O. Box 20283-CP, Santa Barbara, CA 93120.

WHY CONDO FEES VARY

When prospective condominium buyers come to us for help, they all seem to have the same perplexing dilemma. They wonder why the monthly condominium charges vary so much from complex to complex within the same price range. How can such a buyer determine what is a fair amount and what isn't?

There are many reasons why monthly condo fees vary widely. Some fees include insurance and property taxes and others don't. Some fee schedules are prepared by professionals and contain adequate reserves for maintenance, improvements and replacement. Unfortunately, other fee schedules are sometimes drafted by optimistic individuals who are more interested in selling unsold inventory than in managing accurately and efficiently.

If your purchase is handled by a full-time residential agent, you will be gaining a larger degree of buyer protection. Be safe. When you look over the budget and the fee schedule, have a professional at your side to protect your interests.

Prayer To Obtain A Special Favor

REMEMBER, O glorious and Good Saint Anne, that never was it known that anyone who fled to thy protection, implored thy help and sought thy intercession was left unaided. Inspired by this confidence, behold, I cast myself at thy feet, and beseech thee, by thy great prerogative of being the Mother of the Queen of Heaven and the Grandmother of Jesus, come to my aid with thy powerful intercession and obtain from Almighty God through the ever Blessed Virgin Mary, this special favor which I beg of thee: Cease not to intercede for me until, through Divine Mercy, my request may be granted. Above all, obtain for me the grace one day to behold my God face to face and with thee and Mary and all the Saints praise and bless Him through all eternity. Amen. 9/19/10/3

THANK YOU Saint Jude for prayers answered. S.F. 9/19/10/3

Board To Vote On Liquor License

By JILL M. HIGGINS
Winchester Selectmen are expected to pull out all the stops tonight to choose the winner of the town's first liquor store license.

However, the board is so far keeping its decision tightly curled until the 7:30 meeting at Town Hall, even though two of the four finalists have already gotten the votes of some board members.

Winchester resident Nicholas Buonopane received two votes of confidence on Monday night, while Medford liquor store owner Sean Galvin snagged one vote.

The other two applicants, William Caci and Stuart Bowen, failed to garner a single selectman's vote.

Technically, all four applicants still have equal shots at the license, since the board's vote is expected to take place tonight. The board has promised to make its decision by Sept. 30, less than a week from now.

Chairman Michael Saraco has declined to vote, citing a possible conflict of interest because he is a member of the local Sons of Italy club.

Selectman Wade Welch was thrust into the decision-making hot seat, after Selectman Alan Macdonald voted for Galvin and Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Judith Muggia voted for Buonopane.

However, Welch eventually declined to vote, saying he is concerned because vote leader Buonopane had not produced a floor plan of his proposed shop at 600 Main St.

Each of the four applicants have said they will set up shop at the Main St. site, under construction by local developer Anthony Albani.

The votes on Monday came after half-hour hearings on each finalist's proposal, during which all four applicants served up their best presentations in the hopes of swaying the board.

There was some confusion in the midst of the voting, as Town Council Douglas Randall was called upon to rule on whether or not the board had ever formally accepted for consideration the four finalists' latest applications.

Each of the applicants had changed initial plans when the space available at Albani's property turned out to be at the back left of the building instead of the front right.

Upon Randall's advice, the board formally accepted for consideration each of the proposals and the amendments through a blanket vote of acceptance.

With the exception of William Caci's, all of the hearings took about a half hour each, beginning with Stuart Bowen at 7:45 p.m. Caci's lasted 45 minutes.

Bowen told the board he would call his shop Winchester Wine and Spirits. He said he would sell fine wines and (Please See L1010R, Page 19)

Food Permit Ignites Feud

By JILL M. HIGGINS

It was a battle of some longtime Winchester residents against "the newcomers," who want to protect their new-found home.

It was also a feud between neighbors — those far and those against allowing 12-year town resident William Sabatino to cook at his new Sabatino's Gourmet Foods at 338 Washington St.

Sabatino's backers say he has been something of a godsend to the neighborhood. He has cleaned up the former Lynch's meat market, they said, and funneled hundreds of dollars into building and sidewalk repairs.

His opponents, however, charged that he represents the commercialization of Washington St. and that traffic and parking at the site are a hazard to schoolchildren.

Principals On Board

Dr. Suzanne McGee is the new principal at the Vinson-Owen School in Winchester.

V-O School Welcomes Dr. McGee

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Vinson-Owen's new principal, Dr. Suzanne McGee, hopes to have at least one dance with President Ronald Reagan next month in Washington.

She won't be going as a class chaperone — nor as a tourist.

McGee will be there as one of 50 select principals from throughout the country who were chosen as "Principals of the Year."

The honor came last March, when she was principal simultaneously at two Maine elementary schools. Her obvious stellar quality is what brought her the honor, and it also helped the Winchester School Committee choose her for Vinson Owen.

McGee is the first woman in Maine to receive this award.

Susan Villani Joins Lincoln

Lincoln School recently welcomed Susan Villani.

By JILL M. HIGGINS
Her dark eyes flashing, she looked like a youngster as she chatted eagerly about returning to school after summer vacation.

Susan Villani isn't a student, however. She's the new Lincoln School principal. And she has some very definite ideas about making educational inroads.

As principal of Hazard Elementary School in South Kingstown, R.I., for seven years, Villani says she learned that the key to good education is to highlight the bond between schools and communities.

"Our schools are a reflection of our communities," she says. "The way we are as schools has a direct link to the way we are as a town."

She says Winchester schools are no exception, and that making her "home" at Lincoln School will help her become familiar with the town — and more importantly, the people.

She plans to take her time getting to know the staff and students at Lincoln, all of whom she says have "incredibly helpful" by making her feel comfortable as the new principal.

"Everyone has been helpful. They've even gone so far as to offer to babysit any children when I was moving into the area," she recalls smiling.

In just a short time, she says, Winchester parents and students have "taken an interest in me as a person, not just as the principal."

"It's a difficult issue to deal with," says Villani. "I was not here at the time, of course, but I know that losing anyone that you are close to is very, very difficult."

She says that her main concern is to keep the communication lines open between the school and the community.

Police, Schools Join Hands To Keep Students In Line

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

A letter of agreement between the Winchester Police Department and the town's public schools aimed at reducing delinquent behavior in the town is "the first of its kind" to have this agreement in writing.

McGee has been named the town's youth officer to be a liaison between police and the schools.

According to McGee, Gov. Michael Dukakis has requested all communities draw up a formal plan to reduce delinquent behavior in schools throughout the Commonwealth.

"It's preventive maintenance," said School Committee Chairman Ed Ward F. O'Connell.

Superintendent Charles Mitsakos said, "It is an attempt for us to say publicly that we are concerned. It formalizes our relationship to the police department and makes a state ment to the community."

However, student representatives at the meeting weren't so sure.

One student said he isn't aware that Winchester High needed this kind of memorandum, especially since he had never seen any violence or carrying of dangerous weapons.

The measure follows the state more last spring that allows authorized school personnel to conduct searches of students and/or their lockers when there is reasonable suspicion that the student has or may be hiding drugs or other illegal items.

That action brought some strong criticism from students throughout the Commonwealth, but in such incidents have been reported so far at Winchester schools.

According to the memo accepted by the board on Tuesday, "Law enforcement personnel must work closely with school officials in developing an understanding of the process to be used when drugs or alcohol are discovered in the schools or when a criminally chargeable offense occurs."

When a student is observed committing an arrestable offense on school property he will first be brought to the principal's office, his parents will be notified, and if warranted, police will be notified, according to the memo.

O'Connell stressed the schools should deal with behavioral problems, but when criminal action is open involved, police must step in. He added that educational programs on drugs and alcohol will continue throughout the school system this year.

Tom Walsh, a director of the schools' substance abuse program, reported about 150 juniors and seniors have signed up for his course on drugs and alcohol.

From this course, Walsh will choose a group to act as "peer teachers." These students will visit sixth grade and eighth grade classes for one week to talk about the effects of drugs and alcohol.

Last year, several activities were cancelled after alcohol-related incidents marred the junior class prom as well as several school dances. The senior prom made history when it was cancelled at a Boston hotel and brought to the MacDonald Field.

On a somewhat related topic, students on Tuesday spoke against a proposed ban on student smoking the high school.

At a school committee meeting last June, it was suggested to prohibit smoking on all school grounds. Currently, students are only allowed to smoke in the courtyard.

"We can not support any ban on smoking," complained high schooler Bobby Driscoll. After surveying 320 students, he said he found that 80 percent of the high school students do not smoke anyway, while 11 percent are smokers.

Driscoll said smoking is "not that great a problem" at the school and does not, therefore, warrant a smoking ban.

He said 73 percent of the students said they would be against a ban on smoking.

Driscoll added that if a ban was enforced, smokers would probably only smoke in the lavatories. "The High School (spirit) is at a high point — this (smoking ban) would foster student resentment," he added.

School Committee member Steve Powers said he felt that it would be tough for the administration to enforce. Instead, he favored limiting smoking to only the courtyard area.

O'Connell, however, disagreed. "I would feel very comfortable supporting a ban on smoking," he said.

Member Dr. Michael Ronayne saw it as a counterproductive move.

Member Catherine Gatto said, "You can't come into it as a dictator. However, she said, the front of the school is not the ideal location for smokers."

Catherine Alexander added that the cigarette butts left by smokers on campus grounds might be a problem. She said if the litter continues, school committee should re-evaluate the situation.

O'Connell tabled the discussion (telling Driscoll to work with students to police the smoking problem).

In other school board action, the committee:

• LEARNED THAT Winchester High School students scored considerably higher in 1985 on the College Board Examinations. The math score on the S.A.T. climbed from 513 in 1984 to 533 in 1985. On the verbal section, since 1983, the score increased from 459 to 485. Superintendent Charles Mitsakos said the class of 1985 is the first class in over 15 years to exceed 1,000 points.

• RELEASED the executive session minutes of Sept. 19 for public record.

• HEARD THAT the average elementary school size in Winchester has dropped from 23.5 children in the 1983-1984 school year to 21.5 for the 1985-86 school year.

• WAS TOLD that the health program to control head lice has been successful so far. Nurses conducted head checks the first week of school and found only three cases. Mitsakos said they plan to repeat the procedure immediately following the Christmas break.

• UNANIMOUSLY APPROVED the High School exams pilot program. The program says students will attend school for mid-term exams and final exams and be allowed to leave school after the exam. Three half-days at the end of the first semester and again at the end of the year have been designated as test days. They have no effect on the 180 school days required by the state.

• UNANIMOUSLY APPROVED a trip planned by McCall Junior High to Washington, D.C. A total of 90 eighth grade students will be eligible to go on the trip. The cost is $345 up from $285 last year. The trip is scheduled for March 7, 8, 9, or the 14, 15, 16. Students will miss two days of school. (Please See SCHOOLS, Page 20)

POLICE LOG

Monday, Sept. 23

At 7:26 p.m., a Pond St. resident reported a male in his early 20's had been harassing her daughter at the Bed and Bath on Cambridge St., where she works. According to police, the man drove an old yellow car and has asked the girl to take a ride with him for the past three days.

At 10:16 p.m., police arrested a Lynn man on outstanding warrants in the Dairy Barn parking lot, Main St. Police report they found a man allegedly drinking a beer while sitting on his car.

When police checked his record, they found he was wanted for three other warrants, a default warrant for possession of dangerous drugs, a traffic warrant from the state police in Peabody and a default warrant in Lynn for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. He was handcuffed and transported to the Lynch station and was expected to be arraigned at Chelsea District Court.

Saturday, Sept. 21

At 10:50 a.m., an Arlington St. resident reported vandalism to his 1984 Mercedes. Both sides of his car were scratched.

At 9:33 p.m., police responded to a hit-and-run car accident at the corner of Wildwood St. and Palmer St. A resident stopped at a stop sign and another car rolled back into her 1979 Oldsmobile causing minor damage to the grill of her car. The other car did not stop.

At 5:44 p.m., police responded to a car accident on Wildwood St. A Valleywood circle resident lost control of her 1985 Cadillac Fleetwood and caused $400 of damage to the lawn, bushes and fence of a Wildwood St. home.

At 10 p.m., police arrested a youth, 16, for illegal possession of alcohol. Police stopped a Chevrolet Impala speeding by Muraco School on Tufts Rd. The passenger of the car, a Lowell resident, said the alcohol was his. The driver of the car is a Washington St. resident.

At 10:28 p.m., police responded to a loud group of youths on Bates Rd. Police brought a Main St. resident to the Lynch station. She was released in the custody of her mother.

At 11:07 p.m., a manhole cover was tossed at the front door of an Oak St. residence, denting the storm door and main door and the fence, causing $300 damage.

Friday, Sept. 20

At 6:43 p.m., police responded to a car accident at the corner of Cambridge St. and Wildwood St. Police said a Honda Prelude hit the curb, damaging its steering linkage. The driver of the second car injured his hip, nose and hand after he swerved to avoid the Honda. He refused medical aid. The driver of the first car was issued a citation for not yielding to traffic when making a left turn, police said.

At 8:57 p.m., police stopped a Chevrolet Camaro for speeding on Cambridge St. The driver, 19, of Pond St., had four warrants for his arrest in Malden, Burlington, Wilmington and the state police in Andover. Winchester police handcuffed and booked him and he later posted bail. Police also issued him a warrant for speeding.

Water Authority Meets Tonight At Cambridge

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority which oversees sewer and water services to 43 Massachusetts communities including Winchester will sponsor a public meeting on Thursday, Sept. 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the Department of Transportation Building, Kendall Square, Cambridge. The meeting will focus on the Residuals Management Facilities Plan.

This study is part of the Authority's overall goal to eliminate wastewater discharges to Boston Harbor. A comprehensive engineering study will recommend management and disposal practices for the handling of residuals including sludge, grit, screenings and scum.

The plan will also recommend sites for facilities to handle and dispose of sludge and other wastewater residuals.

Currently, sludge is released to Boston Harbor on the outgoing tide from both the Deer Island and Nut Island wastewater treatment plants. It has been determined that these discharges are a major source of harbor pollution, and alternative solutions to this problem are the key focus of the Facilities Plan Study.

Siting of facilities for residuals management are expected to be a key issue of public concern. The study is expected to evaluate inland sites as well as those in and around Boston Harbor.

Town Hall Openings

Several public service positions are open to Winchester residents.

To apply for any of the following positions, please submit qualifications in writing to Board of Selectmen, Town Hall, Winchester, 01890.

Posting of vacancies is made possible by the Selectmen's Office in cooperation with the League of Women Voters.

Board of Appeals - Associate Member

The Board of Selectmen are seeking two (2) associate members to fill an unexpired term to end March 31, 1988.

The Board of Appeals hears and decides administrative appeals from the orders and decisions of the Building Commission; hears and decides applications for Special Permits upon which the Board of Appeals is empowered to act under the Zoning Bylaw; and hears and decides petitions for variances from the provisions of the Zoning Bylaw. Forum Zeroes In On Town Finances

By Elizabeth Thompson

"Since Prop. 2½ began, town finance has been a delicate balance of needs and services. For many towns, the elastic band is about to snap."

These words set the theme for the officials speaking at the Sept. 18 debate in Arlington's Town Hall. The public forum on the future of local finance was sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Arlington, Belmont, Lexington, and Winchester and was moderated by Winchester Selectman Judith P. Muggia.

In welcoming remarks, the chairman of the Arlington Board of Selectmen, Robert Havern, noted that many towns are fighting for survival. This situation puts a twin responsibility on town officials: to work hard to obtain state aid for their town and to explain to local voters their own obligations to ensure adequate funding for town services.

Local Aid Commission The first panelist to speak was Sen. Richard A. Kraus, the co-chairman of the legislature's new Joint Commission on Local Aid. The Commission is examining the present formulae for distributing local aid and will propose changes if needed.

Sen. Kraus said that it is important to recognize that the present system "has been the fairest and best up to now," but that it no longer is adequate.

Ideally, local aid should help towns balance their needs against their own ability to pay out of local resources. The present distribution formulae, Kraus explained, "have the effect of pretending that Prop. 2½ doesn't exist."

The Local Aid Commission will look closely at three areas under severe stress: very small towns, regional school districts, and the fully developed suburbs.

Arlington Selectman Charles Lyons added that people "must realize that the distribution of local aid is not exactly logical. Perhaps one way to handle the problem might be to take some cities, such as Boston, completely out of the local aid formula."

Kraus said the Local Aid Commission will "change the way the state distributes local aid or to change what the legislature expects towns to do on their own." He invited citizens to comment at the Local Aid Commission's public hearing scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Oct. 10, in Arlington Town Hall.

Ideas for More Local Flexibility Assistant Majority Whip Mary Jane Gibson explored ideas for legislative approaches to give cities and towns more financial flexibility. She said that a number of local option revenue raising ideas have been suggested, such as a condo conversion fee, a real estate transfer tax, an increase in the motor vehicle excise tax, local sales tax, cable television taxes.

Of these, the idea that is most likely to win broad support in the legislature would be the real estate transfer tax, she said. Proposition 2½ might also be amended further to allow, for example, more specific language to let local voters to override 2½ for specific capital expenditures; to exclude from the calculation of the tax levy the money allocated to the pension reserve fund; or to increase the tax levy by up to 2½% in one year by a simple majority vote (instead of the present 3/4 vote).

Other amendments might "permit special local levies to pay off certain debts, improve funding of entitlement programs, increase funding to offset local tax losses because of abatements and exemptions, or allow abatements and exemptions to be excluded from the levy."

Pension Costs Provisions for pension fund costs absorb increasingly large amounts of local budgets. B. J. Rudman, assistant secretary for management in the state office for Administration and Finance, described the proposed pension fund legislation.

The bill addresses the problem created by the state's and towns' combined unfunded pension liability, already totalling about $11 billion and increasing by 7 to 9 percent annually. The state must address this problem if it wants to protect its AAA bond rating.

"If pension costs are not dealt with now," Rudman warned, "by the 1990's, towns that have not set aside enough for future pension costs will also face a crisis. The idea behind the proposed legislation is that it is cheaper to deal with the problem now than to wait until future local crises require costly bail-outs by the state."

Rudman acknowledged that the legislation is controversial but said that much of the disagreement is based on misinformation. Under this bill, the state would not "take over" local pension plans. Rather, it offers towns the option to transfer local assets (but not local pension reserves) to a state fund.

Moderated by Winchester Selectman Judith Muggia, the League of Women Voters-sponsored forum tackled such issues as Proposition 2½ and local aid.

Panel members spoke on creative solutions to town financial problems at the League of Women Voters forum last Wednesday night.

By pooling this money, the towns would get better return on investment than they might enjoy by investing on their own.

"The decision to join the state system," Rudman stressed, "would be made by local officials at their discretion."

Local Belt-Tightening Techniques Arlington's Town Manager Donald Marquis indicated less optimism about the legislature's ability to devise effective tools to help towns, stating that "voters may still have to resort to a statewide referendum to force state action to increase local aid."

He gave examples of approaches that Arlington has used to cope with its fiscal problems: raising user fees, making water and sewer charges reflect true costs of those services, renovate town buildings and rent them out to bring in more tax revenues, permit non-school groups to occupy some school buildings jointly with school classes, and make recreational services self-supporting.

His comments appeared to justify the Kraus Commission's emphasis examining the severe fiscal stress that the fully-developed inner-suburbs are experiencing.

Marquis said that "the state needs to acknowledge that towns can't solve all their problems by belt tightening. He expressed his hope that the state will give more help to towns with real need."

Outlook for Federal Aid Arlington's Selectman Charles Lyons distributed comparative budget figures for Arlington, Belmont, Lexington, and Winchester, noting that the numbers emphasize the gloomy outlook for local finance.

Lyons said he fears a number of proposals for tax reform at the federal level that will have a strong, potentially negative, impact on town budgets.

Under one change, taxpayers could no longer deduct their local property taxes from their federal returns. Another proposal would end the tax-exempt status of municipal bonds. Lyons said "this would have a major impact on the local bond market, the primary way towns finance major capital expenditures."

market, the primary way towns finance major capital expenditures.

Further negative effects would come from the end of federal assistance to towns. Massachusetts towns alone now receive about $100 million from various federal revenue sharing programs. Lyons feels that such reductions will "force towns to turn to the state for still more help."

State Spending The panelists disagreed about whether state spending is excessive. Sen. Kraus stated that "a common, but inaccurate, perception is that there is a lot of extra state money floating around and that state spending is uncontrolled."

In fact, he noted, "Massachusetts has reduced its spending by a much greater percentage than have the other northeast industrial states. He pointed out that much state spending goes to help municipalities and compensates for cutbacks in federal aid."

Town Manager Marquis expressed his opinion that the state is nonetheless spending too much. He also believes that despite towns and cities, the state has only returned about 30 percent.

Assist. Secretary Rudman pointed out that although the state's growth revenues have increased about 14 percent annually in the last few years, it would be unrealistic to expect this rate of growth to continue. The historical average is closer to 8 percent annually. To allow for this, the administration is attempting to maintain a prudent fiscal program, stressing the stabilization fund to help cities and towns.

Rep. Gibson said that "proposals to cap state spending would hurt all citizens." The future of the state as a whole depends, for example, on a healthy infrastructure, good transportation, a clean harbor, and on good educational and health care systems, none of which can be efficiently financed by individual towns.

Elizabeth Thompson is the vice president for action in the Arlington League of Women Voters.

Winchester Public Library News

What's up at the library? Plenty! The library planners are taking off in several new directions, with long range plans for some exciting changes. This column, which will run weekly, will let Winchester residents know where the library is headed. This week's focus is on what is new — new staff, new materials and new programs.

Zeibig Named Children's Librarian

Heidi Zeibig, who has been assistant children's librarian for four years, has been promoted to children's librarian, filling the position Jean Twitchell held for 13 years, before her retirement earlier this month.

Zeibig is planning a series of events and programs for preschool and elementary children, including field trips by school classes to the library for tours and stories, a series of drop-in story hours for preschoolers, and special holiday celebrations. For more information on happenings at the junior library, call 721-7140.

Three Join Library Staff

Three new librarians have joined the Winchester Library staff this month: Sandhya Bagavan, Philip McNulty and Chris Rust.

Bagavan, a reference librarian, is a native of Madras, India, where she worked in the library of the British Consulate. She received her master's in library science from Simmons College in June. While a student, she worked in the social work library as assistant librarian, responsible for reserves and circulation.

"Working in a public library is very different from the academic setting, but I am learning a lot — the patrons ask such challenging questions," said Bagavan. "The town is really pretty. I love the stained glass windows in the reference room, and the staff and patrons have been helpful and friendly."

McNulty is head of technical services, responsible for cataloging and processing materials for the library collections. He is also overseeing the bibliographic conversion project in preparation for automating the circulation, ordering and acquisitions functions of the library.

McNulty received his master's from Simmons College in 1981, and comes to Winchester from the Somerville Public Library, where he was head of circulation and system coordinator.

Commented McNulty, "I'm looking forward to seeing the library through this period of change as it automates, and to helping bring some new and exciting services to Winchester, such as computerized access to the collection."

Rust, a resident of Winchester, joins the staff as community services librarian, responsible for library programs, publicity, and publications. She received her library degree from the University of Illinois in 1976.

"While I've had my degree for nine years, this is my first position as a librarian. It is especially exciting to be working in my own town, with friends and neighbors."

New Books, Records Offered

Just as the library has added new staff, it has added new materials — books, records and cassettes are on display in the reference room on a rotating basis.

The library has also recently added 30 new periodicals to the collection. Now available are "The Washington Post," "Analog Car and Driver," "Connoisseur," "Fifty Plus," "Gentleman's Quarterly," "Maclean's," "Omni," "Opera News," "The Progressive," "Scotts Stamp Monthly," and "Working Woman."

Thanks to the generosity of Drs. Charles F. Mahoney and F. Bruce Riedell, the library is also receiving issues of "Brides," "Food and Wine," "Golf Digest," "Sport," "Tennis," "Vanity Fair," "Venture," and "Woman's Day."

Video Cassettes Are Available

The library also loans video cassettes. The library has a collection of 110 titles that circulate for 3 days to Winchester residents 18 or older. A $10 deposit is required before videos can be checked out. A list of titles and lending regulations is available at the circulation desk.

Fall Programs Open Variety

The library is again sponsoring, in conjunction with the Friends of the Library and the Winchester Music Program, a series of autumn programs. Brad Sears, author of the Last Chance Garage, spoke on car selection and care on Sept. 10, and Nina Simonds will be presenting a demonstration of Chinese cooking techniques on Oct. 15.

The series of Music at the Library programs resumes Sunday, Oct. 6, and will continue with a Christmas program in December.

Displays Are For Browsers

The library is launching new ventures in its effort to be Winchester's information and culture center. Residents are invited to look at the displays of bears and balloons, browse through new materials, check out a video, meet the staff, and register for a Minuteman library card.

Music Program Set For Oct. 6

Music will fill the library on Sunday, Oct. 6, as the Winchester Music Program and Winchester public library co-host a concert for guitar and flute, the second program in the Music at the Library series.

The musician featured are guitarist Mark Leighton and flutist Cheryl Grono. They will be presenting a concert featuring works by Telemann, Villa-Lobos, Keith Jarrett, and Duke Ellington, among others.

Leighton is a graduate of the New England Conservatory, and is on the faculty of the Winchester Music Program. He performs with the Copley Chamber Players, and is the founder and artistic director of the Beechwood Chamber Players.

Grono, who plays first flute in the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra, and is a member of the Beechwood Chamber Players, is a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music.

The program will be held in the reference room of the Winchester Public Library, beginning at 3 p.m. The program will feature a mix of classical, jazz and popular music, and will last approximately an hour.

Funds from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery make this series of programs possible. All are invited to attend the free program.

Guitarist Mark Leighton and flute player Cheryl Grono will be performing as part of the library's renewed "Music in the Library" program.

Sight Problems Preventable

Many vision problems that develop during the school years are preventable, according to a Winchester optometrist. "But only if the earliest signs of future problems are detected before a permanent condition develops," cautions Albert L. Sherburne, O.D.

The beginning of each school year is a good time to check for potential vision problems, he says, "especially since many studies link vision problems with the kind of visual work that predominates in the classroom."

"Grade 3 is a particularly vulnerable time. It is the point where many children shift from learning to read to reading to learn. Books and reading assignments become longer, the type is smaller and consequently, the visual demands placed on the child become increasingly severe."

Dr. Sherburne cited a study of Eskimos at Point Barrow, Alaska. "The older generation (who didn't have to go to school) had virtually no nearsightedness. Among the younger Eskimos, the first who were required to attend school, about half were nearsighted."

The earliest symptoms of nearsightedness are blurring or slow refocusing of distant objects following a period of near work.

"But children don't realize this symptom is a danger signal. Someone has to ask them about it, or notice whether they seem to be struggling to focus when they look up from their reading."

Children who become nearsighted often have a strong inner drive to please by doing well in school. Parents of such children share that drive to please, and also are likely to be nearsighted themselves, says Sherburne. "Before this adaptive response pattern became clear, many people thought that nearsightedness must be genetic."

The vision problems that interfere with learning are more subtle, Sherburne adds. "These problems limit the ability to take in and understand what is being seen or read."

"Many children with learning-related vision problems avoid near vision work at any cost. They often have 20/20 distance eyesight, but they just cannot cope with work less than arm's length from their eyes," says Sherburne.

"These children have no vision complaints because the avoid most visually stressful work. Yet they have certain characteristics that show up when an optometrist examines and makes an analysis of their near vision and visual abilities. More often, they reveal themselves by their short attention span when doing near vision work."

Many children manage by substituting listening for reading, Sherburne says. "That is until they encounter an amount of schoolwork with which they can no longer cope. By high school or college a teacher says, 'I want you to read these books within two weeks.' The intensity of the work triggers a visual deterioration, or they simply flunk out."

Vision problems that affect a child (or adult's) performance at school may lie dormant during summer and even shortly into the school year. This is because of the out-of-doors lifestyle of the children's summer vacation.

Here is a list to clip and keep that will help parents or teachers identify signs of a vision problem:

- Signs of Vision Problems
- Holding a book very close (only 7 or 8 inches away)
- Child holds head at an extreme angle to the book when reading
- Child covers one eye when reading
- Child squints when doing (or looking up from) near vision work
- Constant poor posture when working close
- Poor attention span, drowsiness after prolonged work less than arm's length away
- Child must use a marker to keep their place when reading
- Writing up or down hill, irregular letter or word spacing
- Child reverses letters (b or d) or words (saw for was)
- Rereads or skips words or lines unknowingly
- Fails to recognize the same word in the next sentence
- Misaligned digits in columns of numbers
- Headaches after reading or near work
- Burning or itching eyes after doing near vision work
- Rubs eyes during or after short periods of reading

Colleen Costello And Scott Franzreb Are Wed

Colleen Costello and Scott Franzreb were married Sept. 7 at St. Eulalia's Church. Fr. Jim Haddard officiated at the 2 p.m. double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Joseph and Kathie Costello of Winchester. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Franzreb of Staten Island, N.Y.

The bride's father escorted her down the aisle. She wore a satin and lace waist-length dress and carried white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Kathleen McGinty of Arlington, sister of bride, was the matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Martha Kinton of Boston; Denise Fischer of Middletown, N.J., cousin of the bride; and Mary Jane Crouther of Waltham.

They wore periwinkle blue taffeta dresses and carried pink sweetheart roses and daisies.

Timothy Territo of Pt. Pleasant, N.J. was the best man. Ushers were John Dunne, Paul Francis and Robert Hansen, all of Staten Island, N.Y.

The reception was held in the rooftop ballroom at the Parker House. The couple went to Bermuda on their wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of Winchester High School and Assumption College. She is a public relations assistant for the Dunfee Hotel's Corporation.

SENIOR SCENE

Seniors Get Free Football Tickets

Bill Colella, athletic director at Winchester High School, has extended an invitation to all local seniors to attend football and soccer games free of charge. Identification cards shown at the gate will serve as passports to the games.

Directory Helps

The Silver Pages Discount Directory advertised on television by actor Bob Hope will soon be available in Winchester, according to Helen Dame, chairwoman for the Council on Aging.

"Local plans are underway to sign up all residents 60 and over for a free Silver Savers passport card and discount directory," she said.

The Silver Pages is a specialty directory that lists businesses offering discounts to senior citizens. Seniors will use an identification card called the "Silver Savers' Passport" to show eligibility for discounts or special offers. The card can be used nationwide.

In addition, the Silver Pages will contain an information and referral section describing the services and programs provided to senior citizens by national, regional and local agencies. Both the directory and identification card are free to eligible senior citizens.

Applications will be taken from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. by the Winchester Council on Aging at the Jenks Senior Center Mondays through Fridays beginning Oct. 7.

The Council on Aging is working in cooperation with Minuteman Home Care Corporation and Southwestern Bell publications to make the Silver Pages available to local seniors.

Further information can be obtained by calling the center at 721-7136.

Residents Save

According to Secretary Richard Rowland of the Massachusetts Department of Elder Affairs, the Elder Service Corps Volunteers represent the front line workers carrying out the basic philosophy of the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs.

With Elders helping elders toward independence, Rowland says that there will never be enough paid professionals to provide needed services to the frail elderly. He states that the staff of the Executive Office of Elder Affairs could not function without the Elder Service Corps Volunteers. It provides security to the older client and gives opportunity for elders to be productive.

Helen Hodgdon, a very active member of the Winchester Seniors Assn., is the Elder Service Corps Volunteer for the Winchester Council on Aging. She makes many contacts with seniors who need assistance and works together with Barbara Ciampa, administrator of the Council on Aging, in finding ways to solve pertinent problems.

Ballroom Dance Resumes Oct. 7

Don Mason, former instructor of ballroom and line dancing at Jenks Senior Center will resume lessons on Monday afternoons from 1 to 3 beginning Oct. 7. A small charge will be asked of each participant. The afternoon events provide pleasure and healthy exercise. Seniors may come with or without a partner to the two-hour sessions.

Pneumonia Clinic

On Oct. 8 and 9 from 9:30 to noon, flu and pneumonia shots will be given under the auspices of the Board of Health, the Visiting Nurse Assn., and the Winchester Seniors Assn.

Lip Reading Course Offered

A course in lip reading will begin at the Jenks Senior Center on Tuesday, Oct. 8, from 10 to 11 a.m. weekly. Because there has been a good response to this specialized course, there will be two teams, the second one meeting on Thursdays from 10 to 11 a.m. weekly.

Marion Moran, a retired audiologist from the Somerville School System, will teach 10 sessions for each team. She is certified by the American Speech and Hearing Assn. and conducts similar workshops in several communities. A small fee will be charged per session.

The course will be limited in size because of the nature of the training for lip reading. The purpose of the work will be to help those with slight and moderate hearing losses, as well as for people who wear hearing aids.

Hodgdon Plays Corps Volunteer

Rev. Robert Storer will conduct a play reading group for eight weeks on Thursdays at 2 p.m. His love for drama dates back to his years as an actor in the Midwest and Texas before he began studying for the ministry.

He played a significant role when plans were being made for a Senior Center and his interests in the welfare of seniors has continued through the years.

Fiesta Fair Is Oct. 4, 5

Volunteers for the Oct. 4-5 Fall Fiesta Fair at the Jenks Senior Center are working to make this fair, the ninth annual fundraiser, the best ever.

With an industrious committee headed by Anne Feuss and Helen Murphy, a variety of saleable items have been accumulated, but more are needed. With the exception of clothes, the articles to be offered range from collectibles to edibles and from small appliances to jewelry.

During the two-day fair, which runs from 2 to 9 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 4 and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 5, Randy Kazanian and his food staff will provide snacks.

Friday evening, Oct. 4, from 5 to 7 p.m. will feature a catered dinner at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Tickets for this complete Italian dinner are available at the Jenks Center.

The hard work of the Fair Committee, coupled with the generous support of the news media, local organizations and the townspeople, will provide necessary funds to underwrite the health and support services offered by the Jenks Center during the coming months.

Set For Oct. 8, 9 Bingo Begins Again On Fri.

The popular bingo games will resume tomorrow at the Jenks Center. Under the spirited leadership of Randy Kazanian, the games are held on the last Friday of each month starting at 1:15 p.m.

Refreshments are served at intermission. All are welcome.

Monthly Dances Will Resume

Seniors are invited to join in the fun Saturday night, Sept. 28 at the Jenks Center for an evening of dancing starting at 8 p.m. With the captivating rhythms of Dick Brogna's band, a variety of dances are featured for this "Fall Fling" evening. Light refreshments are available.

Seniors Day

The State Office of Elder Affairs is holding "The Governor's Cup" day on Sun., Sept. 29 on Charles st., between the Boston Common and Gardens.

Dedicated to fitness, there will be a 5 mile road race, a 3 mile competitive walk, and for the less athletically inclined, a 1 mile fun walk. The fun walk starts at noon. In addition to Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, Bobby Orr and Johnny Kelley will be present for this day of fun and fitness. Entertainment and refreshments will start in the morning and continue through the afternoon.

Those who plan to participate in one of the walks, telephone 727-4092 for details.

Oncology Services Move To New Area

Oncology Services at the Symmes Hospital Division of Choate-Symmes Hospitals Inc. has moved from the Multi-Service Center into newly-renovated 3A wing in the main hospital building, which will soon incorporate diabetes and laser treatment programs.

The department's move to its new location is intended to enhance patient convenience because virtually all outpatient services, such as

Laboratory Services, Radiology Services, Physical Therapy, and Social Work Services are close at hand.

Energy Tax Credits

The federal energy tax credit program available since 1978 is due to expire this year. Seniors are reminded that if the energy efficiency of your home can be improved, the costs may be allowable for a tax credit. IRS Publication 903 "Energy Credits for Individuals", contains full information about weatherization work that meets the credit requirements.

Jenks Center Programs

As the summer days lead into the fall season, local seniors are reminded of the diversification of programs available to all at the Jenks Center. The monthly NEWS LETTER is free to all seniors. A telephone call will add your name to the mailing list.

In addition to a vast array of recreational and social activities, the educational program includes lectures and seminars on topics of current concern to seniors, a Book Club, and a Men's Discussion Group.

Health improvement plays a dominant role at the Jenks Center. Exercise classes, the twice-monthly Get Well Clinic and the special screening clinics and inoculations, sponsored by the Board of Health and other local organizations, are available to all seniors.

Most meaningful to the professional staff and volunteers at the Jenks Center are those programs by their very nature receiving little publicity. Personal counselling, outreach activities, and widow-to-widow programs receive top priority.

Telephone the Jenks Center for details on any of its programs.

Letters Policy

Letters to The Editor are welcome on matters of interest to local readers. Deadline for submission is 1 p.m. on Monday.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better."

In a world where quality workmanship and door to door service seem like relics of the past, Faulkner's Cleaning, located at 437 Franklin st., Melrose, offers both of these to area residents.

For more than 38 years Faulkner's Cleaning has served the cleaning needs of Winchester residents and has built up a reputation for quality workmanship that has made them a trusted name in drycleaning and has made many Winchester residents lifelong customers.

Faulkner's not only drycleans all the usual items including pants suits, dresses, and coats, and cleans and presses shirts, but they also go one step further — Faulkner's inspects every article of clothing and replaces buttons or sews seams at no charge.

"We do all the basics that other drycleaners do, we just do them better," explains owner/proprietor Francis Hardy.

As far as service is concerned Faulkner's Cleaning offers something we tend to associate with past decades — door to door service. At no extra charge Faulkner's will pick up and deliver your drycleaning to your home.

Every Tuesday and Thursday their truck goes through Winchester for convenient door to door service. There is no extra charge for this convenience and customers can arrange for free pick-up and delivery by calling Faulkner's Cleaning at 665-6300.

In addition to cleaning all the usual items, Faulkner's also cleans various household items including slipcovers, draperies, and bedspreads. They are also experts at cleaning both suede and leather garments.

And, if you don't have the space around your home or apartment to store seasonal garb, Faulkner's offers storage for anything from furs to wools. Box storage is available in which you receive a large box to store your clothes which are cleaned and pressed just prior to pickup, and ready to wear when you retrieve them by calling Faulkner's Cleaning several days in advance.

For quality workmanship and the customer satisfaction which has been the trademark of Faulkner's for more than 38 years, or for convenient door to door service at no extra charge, come into Faulkner's at 437 Franklin st. Melrose, or just pick up the phone and call them at 665-6300.

Faulkner's Cleaning is open Monday through Friday, 7-5, Saturdays, 8-5.

Winchester Scout Troop 503 tromped through the woods and waters of northern Maine during an extended wilderness trip.

The senior scouts of Troop 503 spent five days canoeing on the West Branch of the Penobscot River in northern Maine this summer. On this extended wilderness trip the scouts put to use the various skills that they have learned at scout meetings and camping trips.

The trip followed the route that Henry David Thoreau took when he went to Maine in 1853 and again in 1857. Every day, moose could be seen eating weeds from the river bottom and bald eagles could be seen circling over head. Also along the river could be seen the relics of past logging operations.

A visit was made to Chesuncook Village. The village is unique because there are no roads to it and it can only be reached by boat or airplane.

On the last day of the trip white water rafts were used to continue on through some of the most spectacular

Explorers Travel Maine

By NICH HABER
Special To The Star

This summer, Winchester's High Adventure Post 505 went to the vast wilderness of Maine for their yearly supertrip.

Explorers is a co-ed camping group that is part of the Boy Scouts of America, Post 505, operating out of the Unitarian Church, is one of three posts in Winchester.

The post's activities include camping, back-packing, skiing, and spelunking. Explorers is for boys and girls, ages 13 to 20. It is run and organized by the scouts, with adult advisors.

Every year, the Explorers go on a week-long "supertrip." Prior supertrips have included climbing Mount Katahdin in Maine, skiing in Quebec, and exploring the wilderness in Newfoundland.

This year's supertrip, which was held in August, consisted of a nine day, 92-mile canoe trip down the Allagash River Waterway in northern Maine.

The waterway consists of about 50 miles of lakes and about 50 miles of river. It was once the way for lumberjacks to move their logs from northern forest to the papermill.

Along the way, the Winchester Explorers found abandoned 100 year old farm and logging equipment, including a log tramway, steam-powered water pumps, and two coal burning locomotives.

Neil Cullen, a junior at Winchester High School, was the trip leader. His two adult advisors were his father, Ed Cullen, and Clare Shawcross of Mystic Valley pkwy. In running the trip, Neil had to provide canoes, transportation, and various other tasks.

Mr. Cullen Sr., affectionately known as Mr. Ed, had traveled the Allagash several times before and was very familiar with the river.

Other post members that went were myself, Brian McCarthy, Michelle Barton, Tim Schmitt, Kim Shubrooks and Robert Southworth.

The trip started out with a ten-hour car ride from Mr. Ed's house on South Border rd. to Chamberlain Lake in northern Maine.

Chamberlain Lake is so far north that the towns have no names, just coordinates, so the departure was from T2 R8 Maine. They set camp and readied for the next day.

The first day, the group had good weather and flat water. In days to come the weather was not so agreeable.

The first four days were spent on lakes. When the wind was at the backs of the canoeists, they used trash bags and ponchos as makeshift sails to glide effortlessly across the water. However, when the weather wasn't as kind, the wind turned crossing of the lake into a struggle. At one point, a canoe actually moved backwards even though the riders were paddling as hard as they could.

One day, the group stopped for lunch at the Chamberlain farm. Mr. Ed described the history of the farm. More than 100 years ago the Chamberlain family tried to survive off the land out in the wilderness. The woods eventually defeated them, but the lake was named after them.

By the fifth day, the Explorers reached the beginning of the river.

At the campsite before the rapids, the Explorers met a very interesting man. He was a 70-year-old Boy Scout chaplain who had been canoeing this river four times a year for 20 years. His equipment was ancient standard issue Boy Scout gear including his green canvas tent for which he fashioned tree limbs as poles.

In a gruff French Canadian accent, he recounted the history of the Allagash Waterway and he told us the tricks for tackling rapids.

Unfortunately for one Explorers' canoe, these tricks didn't help. Midway through the rapids, it flipped over and wrapped itself around a rock.

The passengers were safe but the canoe was left twisted. It was repaired by a combination of Mr. Ed's know-how and Brian McCarthy's muscle.

Among the animals spotted by the group were a white-tailed deer that had an affection for salt, especially on the food that was given to her. Also noticed was an osprey that dove for fish, and a moose that was grazing on the mosses on the bottom of the lake.

The last night on the river, there was a feast. The feast consisted of Ritz crackers and salami, a pasta salad, and the piece de resistance — a canned ham, which Clare referred to as a giant spam. Nobody complained. Everyone was famished as they usually were by the end of the day.

Upon approaching the group's planned destination there was the first sign of civilization, a huge sign saying "Pizza 1 mile" along the shore. All the canoes went three times as fast.

The Town of Allagash, a logging town of a few hundred people, was the final destination. Although the post members were weary, aching, and sunburned from the trip, everyone sprinted to the general store, where they bought fruit pies, cokes, ice cream, and lots of other junk food.

The post returned to Winchester after another ten hour car ride.

The Allagash expedition made everyone proud of themselves and closer friends than they had been before.

Winchester residents who would like to learn more about Explorers, call Nich Haber at 729-3378.

Robert Southworth finds a spot to rest beside an old abandoned logging locomotive.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

THE HOUSE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the week of Sept. 15-19.

SALARY(S 1001)- House 132-15, gave final approval to and sent to the Senate for final action the bill raising the salary of the Director of the Office of Handicapped Affairs from $24,000 to $39,000 retroactive to July 1984.

Supporters said the current director was recruited several months ago and was promised a $39,000 salary. They claimed it was time for the legislature to address this injustice. Opponents said it is bad policy for the legislature to approve special acts raising the salary of one individual.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

BALANCED BUDGET (H 1408)- House 85-60, rejected a bill calling for a Constitutional Convention for the exclusive purpose of proposing a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget except in cases of a national emergency. The U.S. Constitution requires a convention to be held if two-thirds of the states call for one.

Supporters said Congress has refused to balance the budget and argued a constitutional requirement is the only way to accomplish it. Opponents said the requirement does not belong in the Constitution and argued Congress should retain the power to balance or not balance the budget.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

PITUITARY GLANDS(H 6431)- House first approved 80-67, then 84-64 reconsidered its approval of a new draft of a bill requiring a medical examiner to obtain permission of the next of kin before removing a decedent's pituitary gland from which a growth hormone can be extracted for use in children and others who have growth problems.

The new draft would replace the original bill which allows the examiner to remove the gland without permission.

Supporters of the new draft argued no one should have the right to take any parts of the human body without permission. Opponents of the new draft said there is a shortage of pituitary glands and that medical examiners cannot always reach the next of kin in time to remove the gland during an autopsy. Two roll calls were taken. On the first, the House approved the new draft 80-67.

A "Yea" vote is for the new draft. A "Nay" vote is against it. On the second, the House reconsidered its approval 84-64. A "Yea" vote is for reconsideration. A "Nay" vote is for the new draft.

Saltmarsh voted yes and no in the respective roll calls.

MORE GLANDS(H 6431)- Following reconsideration of its earlier approval of the new draft requiring consent of next of kin before removal of a pituitary gland, the House 107-39, gave initial approval to yet another version of the bill. This one requires a medical examiner performing an autopsy to make a reasonable attempt to obtain the consent of the next of kin before removing the pituitary gland, but allows the examiner to remove the gland without consent if he or she has made a reasonable effort to obtain the consent within a period of 12 hours prior to the autopsy.

Supporters said this is a reasonable compromise between earlier proposals and takes both sides into account. Opponents again argued that no parts should be removed without permission.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A

"Nay" vote is against it. Saltmarsh voted yes.

THE SENATE. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on four roll calls from the week of Sept. 15-19.

WETLANDS(S 2439)- Senate 25-12, refused to table a bill which would include wildlife habitat under the wetlands protection act. The bill adds wildlife habitat protection to the list of values a local conservation commission must consider when determining what conditions it may impose upon a developer building in a wetland area.

Bill supporters, noting the specific definitions and the rules and regulations would be developed by a Technical Advisory Committee, said the bill will protect wildlife and insure that wildlife habitat protection is considered when building projects are reviewed.

Some opponents said the bill is vague and poorly drafted without specific definitions. Others said the bill goes too far and may unnecessarily bring construction to a halt.

A "Yea" vote is for tabling the bill. A "Nay" vote is against tabling.

Senator Richard Kraus voted no.

CANDIDATES(S 861)- Senate 23-15, rejected a bill changing the date for filing nomination papers with the Secretary of State for candidates for state representative, state senator, executive council or county office from the end of May to the beginning of August.

Supporters said the move will give potential challengers more time to decide whether to run. They claimed the May deadline protects incumbents and noted the election year budget and other controversial issues are usually tackled after May when it is already too late for a challenger to file papers.

Some opponents said the May deadline gives challengers more time to run their campaigns and gives the Secretary of State more time to check signatures and print ballots. Other opponents said they actually favored the change to August but voted against this particular bill because it was technically improperly before the Senate and could jeopardize passage of another bill moving the date to July or August.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Kraus voted yes.

SEAT BELTS(S 2490)- Senate 24-14, gave initial approval to a bill requiring the use of seatbelts by Massachusetts automobile drivers and passengers beginning in January 1986.

The measure allows police to impose a $15 fine on violators only after the vehicle is stopped for another traffic violation. It also requires an extensive public education campaign and includes a provision requiring all motor vehicles, manufactured after September 1989 and sold or registered in Massachusetts, to be equipped with airbags.

Supporters said the law will save many lives, prevent injuries and lower insurance rates. Opponents said seatbelts often cause injuries and claimed the bill is another example of government intrusion into people's lives.

A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Kraus voted yes.

BALLOT QUESTION(S 2400)- Senate 27-11, rejected an amendment placing the proposed seatbelt law on the 1986 ballot and allowing the law to take effect only if voters approve it.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Kraus voted no.

Presidents Often Loom Larger Than Life

By TERRY MARROTTA

I set out to see the President last week on one of those incomparable September mornings you read about in books.

Skies billowed blue as robins' eggs. Shreds of morning mist draped themselves like wedding veils in hollows and valleys. Leafy flames licked up the sides of adolescent maples.

It could have been any day at all, and I out for a country drive, until my car crossed the border into New Hampshire.

There, no less than five state police cruisers waited by the side of the road, idling in formation and poised as if for the chase. Moments later, helicopters bumbled by overhead, press members, probably, shuttling up from Boston or Washington for the event.

Luckier press members than some, I thought to myself, in those fat motorized insects, which could light like honeybees on the rooftops of the capital, and set their passengers in place long before I had managed to reach the outskirts of the city even.

I had seen two presidents in the flesh before this day: John Kennedy the night before his election to the office, and Gerald Ford the day he kicked off the Bicentennial in Concord.

In Kennedy's case I was a little girl still, and remember cold feet more vividly than anything the candidate said that frosty night. With Ford I was an adult, at least, but one of thousands who viewed him from a canoe on the Concord river, from which vantage-point he was a tallish speck, merely, with a shiny head hundreds of yards away, gesturing in inaudible performance like a marionette.

So, seeing Mr. Reagan last week, I seemed to witness for the first time the considerable majesty involved in a presidential visit.

The crowds were overwhelming, for one thing. People jammed together like oranges working their way down the chute and into the juicer. The subway at rush hour is a tea-dance held in a ballroom by comparison.

There was literally nowhere to go in this crowd, and when I tried to make my way through it to the press entrance, a few people volunteered to dismember me.

At last, sheer momentum as much as anything else carried me through them all and past the electronic frisking devices. Hastily, I regained my bearings, quieted my heart rate, and made for the grandstand, where, along with a multitude of others, I waited.

High school bands looted wanly in the gathering heat. Babies bleated. World-famous newscasters strolled like princes over yards of electrical cable, sucking on cigarettes and gossiping. The few protesters rehearsed fierce expressions and waved their lettered pillowcases for the bored eye of live television.

Suddenly, the President flew over in Marine One. The crowd roared. Minutes later, the Army band arrived, brushing aside the youthful toolsters like so many flies. It was ruffles and flourishes then, a pause, some spit-and-polish singing, and "Hail to the Chief"....

Then he appeared, as if out of nowhere. It took your breath away. People clapped and cheered and stamped their feet. They yelled and snapped pictures, and held up their children for a better view.

I personally stood 30 feet away from him, crying like a baby. And I'm not even a Republican.

When the speech began, people listened, sure, but mostly they just combed him with their eyes. They noted his hearing aid, and remarked upon his tie. "I love his hair!", someone cried next to me, "See, what a nice smile!", another said to his grandson.

Before long, though, the whole thing was over. Security people whisked him away, and he was very likely enjoying lunch in the air over Connecticut long before the rest of us had even fought our way out of downtown Concord.

It was a thrill to see him, in sum, this aging but still-vital man who wields more power than anyone in the world today.

He has a certain quality, and no mistake. We want to believe in our leaders, believe them to be just like us in all the humble homey ways, but bigger too, somehow, and better if at all possible.

I don't know how this President does it, but he has the ability to compel such belief in him. I witnessed that ability last week, and I felt its power personally. It will be a long time before I forget its impact.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Youth Center Thanks Family

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Winchester Youth Center, I would like to thank Dr. and Mrs. Jose Angeles and family for their donation of a ping-pong table. Their generous gift is greatly appreciated as it will benefit many youths in Winchester. The Youth Center reopened on Friday, Sept. 20, and the ping-pong table has already received a great deal of use.

Once again, thank you for supporting and contributing to the Youth Center.

With much thanks,
Debbie Lizotte
Youth Center Supervisor

Librarian Appreciates Thoughtfulness

TO THE EDITOR:

At my retirement reception on Sept. 7, I enjoyed one of the most fulfilling days of my career in the junior library. Being with so many of the town's children, their parents, library colleagues and friends was a great joy.

Never before have you had so much for so little! The Winchester Public Library's Directory of Area Services can point you in the right direction just by flipping the pages! Available at the library and The Winchester Star.

State Fairs List

The 1985 fair season is still going on. Until the first of December, home gardeners, as well as commercial growers, exhibit their produce, livestock, canned goods, baked goods, handicrafts and special hobbies for competition and profit at fairs across the state.

There are over 100 of these fairs including grange, 4-H and youth, livestock and flower shows. The Middlesex County Extension Service is offering a free "Massachusetts Agricultural Fairs" listing.

Write to "Fair Brochure," Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett St., Concord 01742, for the free listing.

Food Canning

The Home Economics Department of the Middlesex County Extension Service provides information on the current home canning procedures to ensure safe and high quality canned products. Nancy C. Stutzman, Extension Home Economist advises that short cuts must not be taken and only reliable tested recipes must be used. If properly done, canning is a safe and economical method of preserving quality food in the home.

Contact the Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett St., Concord 01742 (Home Economics Department) 369-4845 or 862-2380 for more information.

I cannot thank all of you in person, so I take this way to do so. For your support, appreciation and friendship across the years and now for your gifts, notes, cards and kind words, to each one of you, my heartfelt "thank you."

Sincerely,
Jean B. Twitchell

HEALTH BEAT

Babysitting Class For Kids To Begin

A babysitting skills class for youths age 10 and older will meet four Wednesday afternoons, 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., beginning Oct. 2 in the auditorium at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham.

Local fire officials will speak to the group on accident prevention, safety and what to do in an emergency. Also, a registered nurse will demonstrate first aid techniques.

Each class member will prepare a kit for future use "on the job" and will have an opportunity to assist in babysitting children at the NEMH Strawberry Hill Day Care Center during the last class session.

Pre-registration for the class is recommended. Course fee is $15. For more information, contact the Health Education department at NEMH.

Lecture: Learn How To Relax

A free lecture on relaxation and personal mind control will be at 7 p.m., Sept. 30 in the New England Memorial Hospital auditorium.

NEMH occupational therapist David Moore will speak. A former Green Beret, Moore's specialty was mental discipline. His training included learning the techniques of brainwashing and pain control.

Moore will talk about how relaxation and biofeedback techniques work, how the mind can control body processes. He will touch on the facts and fictions of hypnosis. He will lead the audience through a relaxation session and there will be time for questions and answers.

Blood Supply At A Critical Level

St. Eulalia's Church, Ridge st., will host an American Red Cross Bloodmobile from 2 to 8 p.m., Monday, Oct. 7.

The community blood supply has dropped below critical levels in Massachusetts, according to the American Red Cross Blood Services-Northeast Region.

An unusually high number of accidents and emergency operations during the past two weeks in the Northeast Region has caused a critical shortage of blood.

Other upcoming bloodmobiles will be from 1 to 7 p.m., Sept. 26 at the Stoneham Town Hall; from 1 to 7 p.m., Sept. 27, at the First Congregational Church, Wakefield; from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Sept. 27, at the Masonic Hall, North Reading; from 1 to 7 p.m., Monday, Oct. 7 at the First Baptist Church, Malden; from 2 to 8 p.m., Monday, Oct. 7 at the Moose Hall, Malden; from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday, Oct. 7, at the Mass. Electric Co., Malden.

For more information about donating blood, contact the American Red Cross.

Exercise Class Is For Expectant Mothers

Expectant mothers can learn how to exercise safely during pregnancy at a six-week "Fitness Through the Childbearing Year" class from 7 to 8:30 p.m., beginning Thursday, Oct. 17 in the physical therapy department at New England Memorial Hospital.

Participants must pre-register for the course and have their physician's permission. Cost is $30.

The program was developed by the physical therapy and OB/GYN departments to teach mothers-to-be about essentials of safe exercise throughout pregnancy and into the post-partum months.

This class is not a substitute for early and natural childbirth classes offered by the hospital's maternity unit.

Thomasch Joins VNCH Staff

Christine M. Thomasch, R.N.,

B.S.N., has joined the staff of Visiting Nurse and Community Health, Inc. as a community health nurse.

Thomasch was a nurse at Mt. Auburn Hospital and holds a B.S.N. from Boston College, from which she graduated cum laude in 1982.

VNCH serves Winchester and 14 surrounding communities.

Minuteman Elects New Officers

The Minuteman Home Care Corporation, serving the elderly of Winchester, elected new officers at its ninth annual meeting.

Officers include: president, Cynthia Seavey of Carlisle; vice president, Malcolm Thompson of Concord; treasurer, William Sen of Lexington; assistant treasurer, Ernestine Schott of Stow; and clerk, Phyllis Newman of Harvard. Their terms begin Oct. 1.

For more information call the Aging Information Center in Lexington.

CPR Course Offered

A three-session class in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) from 7 to 10 p.m. will be held Oct. 1, 3, 8, at the Administrative Services Building classroom in New England Memorial Hospital.

Participants will be certified in the Heart Assn.'s Basic Life Support program and will be able to perform CPR and the anti-choking measures in an emergency.

The fee is $15, and the course is taught by NEMH's Emergency Room staff. For more information and to register, contact the NEMH Health Education department.

Square Dance For Health

The Skirts 'n' Flirts Square Dance Club invites area couples to a free introductory fun night of dancing at the West Intermediate School, Carter Lane, Wilmington.

Square dancing is an activity that can provide men and women with regular exercise to assist in improving their health and fitness. Rhythmic and continuous exercise that involves a large percentage of the body's musculature is the best way to attain cardiovascular fitness.

Square dancing is also a very efficient exercise in terms of toning muscles and giving people a good feeling. In addition, it can assist in a weight loss program. Many studies have shown that exercise is more effective than dieting for losing weight.

Health care professionals agree that when reasonable eating habits are combined with exercise, weight loss is more rapid than when dieting or exercise is used alone.

Square dancing is also an activity that can provide an emotional release from tensions and frustration in today's high pressure society. It requires no special talents or previous dancing ability. It facilitates communication and interaction while generating fun and laughter.

Introductory nights are at 8 p.m. on Thursday evenings, Sept. 5, 12, and 19. On Thursday, Sept. 26, regular weekly classes will begin.

Drug Hotline Continues

Middlesex County District Attorney Scott Harshbarger has established a toll-free hotline for the general public to call with any information concerning narcotics.

Harshbarger emphasized that citizen involvement in law enforcement efforts to combat the illegal use or distribution of narcotics is critical information received through the hotline is forwarded to the appropriate police department with jurisdiction. The toll free number is 1-800-445-4499.

The drug hotline has been used on numerous occasions since it became operational this June. Hotline callers have provided the district attorney's office with substantial information regarding illegal drug related activity in the country.

District Attorney Harshbarger's office has continued to focus attention on aiding local narcotics enforcement efforts.

"We are committed to alleviating the fear of drug pushers and the threat they represent to the citizens of Middlesex County. Cooperation between law enforcement agencies and the general public is essential to continuing our commitment to ensure public safety," said Harshbarger.

CLUB NOTES

Wellesley College Tour Planned

The Winchester Wellesley Club invites all interested high school seniors and juniors to visit the Wellesley College campus on Thursday, Oct. 3.

The day's activities will include lunch with college students, visits to dormitories, a full tour of the campus and an opportunity for informal questions at the Admissions Office.

Cars will depart from the front of Winchester High School at 11:15 a.m. following the early release day dismissal, and will return students to Winchester about 4 p.m.

Students are asked to sign up in advance at the high school Guidance Office or to call Mrs. Joseph Twichell, 21 Swan rd., who is admissions representative of the Winchester Wellesley Club.

Wellesley is a four-year liberal arts college for women, enrolling approximately 2,200 students.

Wellesley Club To Sponsor Play

Winchester residents will soon have an opportunity to enjoy the best of Boston theater right here in Winchester.

At a recent meeting, the Winchester Wellesley Club announced plans for this year's benefit luncheon. The Charlestown Working Theater will perform the play "Talking With..." by Jane Martin, on Wednesday, Oct. 16, at 10:15 a.m.

Proclaimed "the best of Boston's local theater" in the August issue of Boston Magazine, the Charlestown Working Theater is in its tenth year and has received much attention and glowing reviews in the local media. "Talking With" is a collection of 11 courageous and humorous women's monologues, of which five will be performed Oct. 16.

Among the actresses is Winchester resident Mary Klug of Highland ave., portraying a woman who, with chilling self-possession, explains the tattoos that cover her body like a history of her life.

The Wellesley Club benefit will start with the theater performance and conclude with a salad bar luncheon. The club's traditional fall presentation will be held at the parish of the Epiphany, Hadley Hall, and proceeds will benefit the Winchester Scholarship fund and Wellesley College.

Tickets are available from club members or from Celena Bradlee of Lorena rd.

Club Sponsors Bridge Games

Bridge players: there is a game in town every week.

Rain or shine, and with very few exceptions, the Duplicate Bridge Club of Winchester meets Wednesday evenings at 7:15 p.m. throughout the year at the Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church on Church and Dix sts. in Winchester.

Open to the public, the game is directed by Al Ozy, who is fully accredited by the American Contract Bridge League.

Newcomers may play for free at their first game.

Camera Club Open House

Winchester residents Paul Wyman and Chris Querze will be among Stoneham Camera Club members at the annual Open House on Wednesday evening, at the Marcy Room of the Stoneham Public Library, Main st. Stoneham, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Everyone who is interested in photography is invited to attend and enjoy the vast display of prize-winning work in all forms of the art. On display throughout the Marcy Room will be color and black and white prints which have won honors in past years in club competitions as well as the top prize-winning Best of Year entries.

In addition to the display, a slide show will be presented which will reflect the photographic accomplishments of all members in the classes of beginner, intermediate and advanced. Through the courtesy of the Stoneham Camera Shop, a display and demonstration of the latest in photographic equipment and accessories will be offered to all guests at the Open House.

All newcomers who join the Camera Club at the Open House or at its second meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 16, will be eligible to participate in the first photo competition of the year. The subject is sports shots.

For further information on the Camera Club, its educational programs and meetings and workshops, please write to Box 58, Stoneham, 02180 or drop by the Open House.

Republican Clubs Hold Joint Meeting

Members of the Winchester Republican Town Committee and the Women's Republican Club of Winchester joined for their annual fundraising party on Friday, Sept. 13.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Swanson hosted the traditional affair.

Co-chairmen representing the two organizations were Mary Jean Robinson and George (Bud) Pacetti.

Speaking briefly to the gathering were Republican leader of the Mass. House of Representatives, William G. Robinson; Winchester Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh Jr.; Town Committee Chairman H. Rushton Harwood Jr.; Women's Club President Phyllis Johansen; Harrison Chadwick, former representative from Winchester; and State Committeewoman Margaret Perenik.

A special honor of the evening was the introduction of the mother of Berta Swanson, Mary V. Johnson, who celebrated her 99th birthday that week.

Similar fundraising parties over the years have provided funds for Republican projects and donations to candidates.

Badminton Club Season To Begin

The Winchester Badminton Club starts its 1985-86 season on Oct. 1 at McCall Junior High School, Winchester. Play is every Tuesday and Thursday from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. There is a small charge per session.

Play is open to everyone and players of all abilities are welcome. If you have never played before or only in the summer in your backyard, come and try this exciting sport.

For further information, contact Whit Gray at 729-0582.

Estates Garden Club Meets

The traditional fall dinner meeting of the Winchester Estates Garden Club was held recently at the home of Marie Johnson of Thornberry rd. The evening was co-hosted by Susan Powers.

Following the dinner President Ruth Null conducted a brief business meeting. Members of her Executive Board for the 1985-86 season are: Vice President Anne Harris; Secretary Susan Powers; Treasurer Mary Perry; programs, Kathy Keane; hospitality, Gerry Driscoll; horticulture, Phyllis Daugherty; ways and means, Herta Botz.

This year's programs will include "Fashions by Janie Kasarjian," "Diamonds are a Girl's Best Friend," to be presented by DeScenza Jewelers, and "Summer Annuals and Flowering Bulbs" with Paul Parent of WRKO.

The Winchester Estates Garden Club was founded in 1963 to maintain the strips located on Wincrest drive and Capris terrace. Membership is open to all residents of the Winchester Estates area.

The program feature will be Mrs. Frank Benson of Bailey's of Boston on a delightful subject: "Sweets to the Sweet."

Troop 503

Planning Trips

Winchester Boy Scout Troop 503 is now organizing for the 1985-1986 season.

Meetings are held weekly on Tuesday nights from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the First Congregational Church on the corner of Church and Dix sts. All boys sixth grade and higher are welcome.

Plans are now being made for the first camp out and participation in the Mass. Camporee on Columbus Day weekend. Several thousand scouts from all over the state are expected.

Please call Larry Keats (729-9317) or Ray Whittemore (729-5472) with any questions.

'Meet The League' On Oct. 1

The League of Women Voters of Winchester extends an invitation to the public to "Meet the League" on Oct. 1 at 7:30 p.m.

Refreshments will be served at the home of Alice Warren at 33 Thornberry rd.

Winchester's new town manager, W. Chad Maurer, will speak briefly. The meeting is designed to give potential members a chance to meet members and find out more about the league's non-partisan issues and actions.

Membership is open to all citizens 18 years or older. Sponsorship is not required.

Insurance Women Plan Dinner

An overview of the new simplified rating program will be presented by Stephanie Murphy of the Lee Fraser and Patch Insurance Agency, and instructor for PIA-NE, at the Oct. 7 dinner meeting of the Middlesex Chapter of the Mass. Assn. of Insurance Women.

The meeting will be held at the Towne Lyne House, Rt. 1 South, Lynnfield, commencing at 6 p.m., and hosted by members from the Central Mutual Insurance Co.

Chapter Director Maryanne V. Nelson, vice president, and manager of the Allied American Insurance Agency, Wakefield, will preside.

Ask The Educators Community Councils To Ensure Input

Elizabeth Wolfson
Legislative Chairwoman, CSA

Edward F. O'Connell
Chairman, School Committee

Question: Can you summarize the establishment of Councils under the recently passed Public School Improvement Act?

The Public School Improvement Act seeks to promote community involvement and support for the schools. The Act establishes on the basis of the Commonwealth a School Improvement Fund "to improve the quality of education at the school building level."

Beginning this school year 1985-86, councils will be established in each school building containing grades K-6 and expanded to grades K-12 the following year.

Annual allocations of $10 per student will be made available from the Commonwealth's Fund to each school council and are to be used "to establish innovative academic programs, expanded services to students, purchase of instructional equipment, alternative education programs, cultural education programs, community or parental involvement programs, business and education partnership programs, staff training, or for any other purposes consistent with the intent of this section."

The councils will consist "of the school principal who shall serve as chairman; three teachers, elected annually by the teachers of the building; two parents of children attending said school building chosen in elections held annually by the local parent-teacher organization; and one person who is not a parent of a child attending said school building, appointed by the school committee."

All expenditures of these councils "shall be submitted to the school committee, who may veto same by a majority recorded vote."

Question: How will individuals be chosen to represent the School Committee on the councils and will they report directly to the School Committee or direction?

Community residents interested in seeking appointment shall advise the School Committee in writing of their desire to serve on one of the councils and how they hope to contribute to the success of the council. Subject to the number of applications received, the School Committee hopes to interview candidates.

Once appointed, an individual shall serve the council in an independent role and shall not be considered as representing the wishes or will of the School Committee. Each Council, as a whole, will make known its plans and proposed expenditures to the School Committee.

The Winchester School Committee views this as an exciting opportunity for parental involvement and wishes to encourage maximum creativity and flexibility in the work done by the council members.

Superintendent of Schools

Question: How soon will the councils be activated and what immediate impact do you foresee on the current curriculum?

One of the major goals for our schools this year is to foster a sense of community. The timing of the school improvement council section of Chapter 188 could not be better in assisting us in developing that goal.

School faculties and parent associations have been asked to elect their representatives to their respective School Improvement Councils by Oct. 1. The School Committee will appoint its designees on Oct. 8.

New Lincoln Principal Looks For Challenges between students, teachers and parents.

"We have to help each other grow and overcome the obstacles we may come up against. That's where trust plays a big part."

She recalls that some Winchester residents were unsure of how she would hold down the very demanding jobs of principal and mother of two young children.

Her four-month-old daughter Adria and son Evan attend day care in Arlington — which is convenient to both her job and her home in Lexington.

"I don't think that will be a problem. I have day care for the children and I won't be far from them should I need to rush over there."

She says that having children has even made some parents seemingly more comfortable with her.

"It's almost as if they feel that 'Gee, she has young children, so maybe she can relate to my children more.'"

"The thing is that I am accustomed to juggling several things at once. You have to be organized and pay close attention. I also know that it's important not to take on too many jobs."

While at Rhode Island, she used to commute to Boston each week to attend college classes.

"I used to work at the school until late in the afternoon, then I'd make the journey to Boston to attend classes until midnight. Then I'd make the trek back to Rhode Island and get up for school the next morning."

It was grueling schedule, but well worth the effort, she says. "After that schedule, everything else almost feels like a breeze," she says laughing.

Before Rhode Island, Villani taught first grade in Reading for seven years.

"It's really almost like coming home again," she says of her move back into the Boston area.

"I used to live in Cambridge and Somerville. Coming to Lincoln School has allowed me to be back in Boston area, which is where I really love to be."

She also did a brief internship at Winchester's Vinson-Owen School when she was a college student. It is rather ironic, she says, that she has returned to the local system after several years.

"I remember thinking at the time, though, that Winchester struck me as being somewhere I could feel comfortable about."

Now, she says, she's looking to make the same type of inroads in the Winchester system that she made while at the Hazard School.

She explains that several projects, including those that focused on ethnic heritage and work roles in today's society, became models for the state of Rhode Island.

"I'll be feeling people out in Winchester. I found that the kids at Hazard School were really receptive to finding out more about their heritages and about the jobs that people do."

"I'm very interested in opening people's minds to what lies beyond their own worlds. But I won't press anything."

"Everyone is different. It's going to take time for everyone to know what they can expect for each other."

"I'm just looking forward to sharing what I've learned, so that Winchester can shine even more. I know that we have the capacity to be models for this state."

V-O Principal Aims High

A native of Boston, McGee also was the first out-of-state principal to win in Maine.

"It was a boost for morale in the schools I was principal of," says McGee. Although visibly proud, she seems to take the honor in stride.

Still, the honor was a victory for women, too, she says. Upon receiving the award, McGee says she received letters and phone calls from women all over the state, congratulating her victory.

McGee finished her last year in June as principal of two elementary schools, consisting of 640 children in Skowhegan, Maine. During her three years there, McGee says she made it a point to be at both schools on a daily basis.

"Being visible is foremost for principals," explains McGee. It is her utmost responsibility, she says.

A total of 246 children attend Vinson-Owen school. That, says McGee, will make her job a little easier. Working with a smaller group of children within one school will allow her ample time to get to know the children better.

"I can be successful in getting to know the children as an authority figure and a friend. I am not a dictator," says McGee.

McGee frequently visits the classrooms while classes are in session to observe or help children with their work.

She says she strongly believes in School Superintendent Charles Mitsakos' motto to "Catch everybody doing good — teachers and children."

McGee says she likes to bring children into her office one at a time and talk with them. At first, she says, children were afraid they had done something wrong. Once she assured them that she just wanted to talk to them, the children relaxed, she says.

Before working in Skowhegan, McGee worked in Revere as a reading specialist for seven years.

"Reading has to be a strength in a teacher," stresses McGee. She received a doctorate in reading from Boston University and a master's in reading from the University of Rhode Island.

"I became interested in reading when I was teaching elementary school in Rhode Island," she says. She emphasized how important it is for children to learn proper reading skills at a young age.

This year in Winchester, a system-wide assessment of reading is under way. According to McGee, a visiting team of five people will assess present reading skills and techniques and suggest changes.

"I'm very excited about it," said McGee.

Vinson-Owen also looks forward to new computer programs beginning next month. The program will "embellish our writing program," says the new principal. Children are more receptive to using a computer to write a story than to write it by hand, McGee said children enjoy seeing the finished, clean printed copy.

Cable TV To Air Education Talk Show

"School Administration" will be the topic of Channel 19's local program "Conversations With Dr. Mitsakos" on Wednesday, Oct. 2 at 8 p.m.

Winchester's two newest principals, Dr. Susan Villani of Lincoln School and Dr. Suzanne McGee of Vinson-Owen School, will join co-hosts Dr. Charles Mitsakos, Winchester School Superintendent, and Marty Fuller, a local educator.

The program is designed to give interested parents, students and residents an opportunity to ask the superintendent and his guests questions concerning school policy making and decisions that come from the district office level.

The Oct. 2 program will deal with issues controlled by principals in Winchester. Villani and McGee are bringing their own unique styles to Winchester and this is an opportunity to hear their views and ask them questions.

Questions may be called in during the program and asked over the air or written questions may be submitted in advance.

Written questions may be submitted to: "Conversations With Dr. Mitsakos," continental Cablevision, 724 Main St., Winchester.

Nursery Session Opens Oct. 20 At W.H.S.

Children between the ages of 3 and 5 are eligible to attend the Winchester High School Childhood Development Study Lab. Through the program, mothers can enjoy free time while their children interact with youngsters their own age. Registration will be held Sept. 27 from 8:45 to 9:15 a.m. at the Winchester High School.

Home Economics Department.

The program will consist of 12 sessions under the direction of the early childhood education class, running from 8:30 to 10 a.m. from Oct. 3 through Jan. 9 each Thursday morning. There is no charge for enrollment.

WHS Plans Open House

An open house sponsored by the Parent-Faculty Assn. will be held at 7:45 p.m. Oct. 9 at Winchester High School.

All parents are urged to attend and follow a ten minute version of their student's daily schedule. This program offers an opportunity for parents to visit the classroom and become better acquainted with the objectives of each course.

The Parent-Faculty Assn. will be collecting dues of $10 per family to help defray the expenses of the PFA programs and to help support student activities.

The Winchester Star

NOTES FROM THE BLACKBOARD

The Winchester School Committee has moved swiftly to review the impact of Chapter 188, The Public School Improvement Act of 1985. At its meeting on Sept. 10, the committee encouraged elementary school faculties and parent associations to elect their representatives to their respective school improvement councils by Oct. 1.

Appointments are expected on Oct. 8 in order to allow the councils to begin their deliberations by mid-October. The councils will be charged with developing plans and expending funds to increase and improve educational services.

The state grants provide $2,520 for the Ambrose School, $3,940 for Lincoln, $2,290 for Lynch, $2,520 for Muraco, and $2,430 for the Vinson-Owen School. Secondary school councils will be funded during the 1986-1987 school year.

The committee voted unanimously to include warrant articles at the November town meeting that would allow the community to accept the $18,000 minimum salary and the professional grant provisions of Chapter 188.

In moving the warrant articles, the committee noted that it was not declaring its acceptance or rejection of these sections of Chapter 188 but only to assure their place on the docket. Negotiations with the Winchester Education Association are expected to get underway soon.

McCall New Staff

McCall Junior High would like to welcome the following new staff members for the 1985-86 school year: Lynn Carlson, secondary school psychologist; Lydia Garcia, art teacher, 7 and 8; Don Getson, custodian; Noreen Henneberry, chair, Chapter 766 Core Evaluations; Leslie Howell, Spanish teacher, 7 and 8; Naomi Precopio, instructional aide, SH-SEEM; Lyne Rahmeier, chorus, 7 and 8; Peggy Keefe, nurse; Danice O'Neill, nurse; Michelle Sanfigate, physical education, grade 7; Jack Squaglia, math, grade 7; Tom Hughes, who has returned from Winchester High School, social studies, 7 and 8.

Welcome Back

Muraco School extends a welcome to Mary Conley as she once again joins the teaching staff. She will work in the third and fourth grades with Sheila Gill and Janice Monteith.

First Grade Writers

Some of the first graders at Muraco School are already writing original stories to go with their own art work. This is a result of the creative writing program started in their kindergarten classes last year.

Ocean In Depth

The third and fourth graders at Muraco School are beginning a study of the ocean, based on facts, fables, and myths.

McCall New Staff

McCall Junior High would like to welcome the following new staff members for the 1985-86 school year: Lynn Carlson, secondary school psychologist; Lydia Garcia, art teacher, 7 and 8; Don Getson, custodian; Noreen Henneberry, chair, Chapter 766 Core Evaluations; Leslie Howell, Spanish teacher, 7 and 8; Naomi Precopio, instructional aide, SH-SEEM; Lyne Rahmeier, chorus, 7 and 8; Peggy Keefe, nurse; Danice O'Neill, nurse; Michelle Sanfigate, physical education, grade 7; Jack Squaglia, math, grade 7; Tom Hughes, who has returned from Winchester High School, social studies, 7 and 8.

McCall Open House

On Wednesday, Oct. 2, the McCall School Open House will be held. All parents are invited to tour the school from 7:30 to 10 p.m. This is an opportunity to meet the teachers and follow your child's schedule from class to class.

New Faces At Lynch

The student population at Lynch School has been enriched this year with the addition of new students from Chile, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Hungary, Israel, Japan, and Korea.

Among the new staff are three new classroom teachers: Teresa Maguire, first grade; Peg Kerr, second grade; and Maria Ramirez, third grade. Principal Andrew Allan met with many new parents for coffee on Thursday and Friday of the first week.

Class Trip

The fifth and sixth grade classes at Lynch School are preparing for their class trip to the Stephen Greer Outdoor Center in Plymouth, N.H. on Oct. 8-11. Planned every other year, this will be the third such trip for Lynch students.

Vinson-Owen Notes

The Vinson-Owen School welcomes Andrea Falvey, who is teaching sixth grade. Previously, Falvey taught in the Needham school system. She is also a former recipient of the Vinson-Owen Figure Skating award.

The Vinson-Owen School also welcomes Frank Row, who is teaching the split fourth and fifth grades. Row is from the Wellesley school system.

Dance Awards

Vinson-Owen sixth grader Leanne Perrone recently won two medals during the Terpsichore Dance Competition held at the Strand Theatre in Boston. Perrone won a bronze for her solo tap and a silver for her class tap number. As a result of scoring the highest points in their division, she and her tap class were chosen to participate in the "Show of Stars" hosted by Channel 7's Dave Finnegan.

New Lincoln Staff

Lincoln School welcomes new staff members Janet Lavey, first grade; Bernadette Golden, fourth grade; and Barbara Pickett, third grade. Joanne Martimette assumes the pilot position of Instructional Specialist to be shared by Lincoln and Lynch Schools. She will chair a community-based volunteer group headed by Susan McGonagle.

Ambrose Activities

Ambrose School began another school year with a flurry of activity. Welcome coffees and orientation meetings helped acquaint families with the level of work and expectations for students. A first grade teacher will soon join the staff in order to split a group of 28 into two classes. Class size in kindergarten is 22; in grade 2, 22; in the split second and third grade, 23; in grade three, 24; and in fourth through six on the intermediate level, 21-24.

School Year Goals

The goals for the 1985-86 school year are based on the philosophy of education for the Town of Winchester, according to Sup. Charles Mitsakos. The specific goals are designed to serve as a blueprint for the coming year.

Music Educators Workshop

Lynne Rahmeier, Director of Music for the Winchester Public Schools, will be presenting a workshop for music educators sponsored by the Massachusetts Music Educators Association.

Presenting

Eurythmics for the Public School," the session will be Saturday, Sept. 28, from 8:30 a.m. to noon. This will be held at the West Elementary School, Beacon St., Andover. It is open to members and non-members alike.

Sock Hop Planned To Benefit ABC As ABC Benefit

Winchester residents are invited to join the A.B.C. fall fundraisers, Friday, Oct. 25, from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Knights of Columbus Hall, on Mt. Vernon st. for a sock hop.

A disc jockey will be playing all yesteryear's favorite tunes for dancers to kick up their heels and reminisce.

In addition to all the fun, residents will help support an important program in Winchester. Winchester's A.B.C. program is now in its 15th year and relies on community support for its operating budget. A Better Chance (A.B.C.) is a national, nonprofit organization whose goal is to help minorities attain leadership. There are 10 students participating in the program, all of whom come from out of state. They live at 2 Dix st. with resident directors Meta and Daniel Fisher.

For more information about the A.B.C. sock hop, contact Terry Stevens, 7 Robinson cir., 729-9363, or Diana Deering, 22 Kenwin rd., 729-1757.

Recreation Department Offers Aerobics Classes

Winchester residents are invited to enroll in an aerobic dance exercise program that combines fun and fitness into choreographed routines. Beginners and advanced students are eligible.

A morning class from 9:15 to 10:15 will be held at the Winchester Town Hall on Wednesdays and Fridays beginning tomorrow, Sept. 27. The 10-week course costs $25. Babysitting is available. Call the Winchester Recreation Department at 721-7125 to register.

Afternoon classes will be held 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays as well as 7 to 8 p.m. classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Winchester High School. These 10-week courses begin the week of Sept. 30 and cost $35. Call the Winchester Adult Education office at 721-7020 to register.

Judy Whitney, a trained instructor from Health-Fit Consultants will be teaching jazzercise.

Center To Begin Programs

The Burnham Center, a non-profit program, will begin its fall session on October 8, for ten weeks. The center offers recreational, educational and social activities to developmentally disabled adults. In addition, the center offers transportation for Tuesday evening classes.

This fall session will offer adult education classes on Tuesday and Thursday evening in Woburn. The courses offered this session include: "Choral Singing," "Mime," "Learn to Use a Calculator," "Money Management," "Slim and Trim," "Writing a Newsletter" and "Cooking."

The center is open to all developmentally disabled adults from Winchester, Reading, Woburn, Wakefield, Wilmington, Melrose, Stoneham, Arlington and Lexington.

In addition to adult education classes the center offers social activities such as a trip to Amish Country Columbus Day weekend, a day at Capriland Farm in Connecticut and a theatre trip to see "Chorus Line."

CLUB NOTES

Boys/Girls Club Lists Activities

Activities for youth, adults and preschoolers from all communities get under way this week at the Arlington Boys and Girls Club.

The club is the only facility in the area where youth can come five days a week after school or on Saturdays at their own choosing for a very modest yearly membership.

Membership is open to youth from all communities between the ages of six and 17 years.

One of the premier activity centers in the clubhouse is the swimming pool. Youth may participate in daily open swims, enroll in the American Red Cross progressive series of swimming instruction or join the swim team.

The club's gymnasium offers a wide variety of classes, informal group games, races and skill challenges. Leagues are organized in basketball, floor hockey, soccer and flag football.

Two large games rooms serve ages 11 and younger and ages 12 to 17 years. They feature billiards, ping pong, bumper pool, tournament soccer, checkers, electronic video and knock hockey. Tournament and record setting skill contests are run several days a week.

Six through nine-year-olds have a combination lounge and learning center called the Sunshine Room. Activities offered are drawing, typing, musical organs, mini-computers, crafts, table games, art, reading and puzzles. The Sunshine room has a drop-in format requiring no advanced sign-up.

Sports programs starting at the club this fall include boxing, wrestling, karate, biddy basketball, high school and junior high school age basketball, flag tag football, soccer, floor hockey, archery and girls' gymnastics.

A complete brochure listing activities and program times is available at the clubhouse.

Many Activities At Newcomer's Club

For people who are new to Winchester and others who may have lived here for a couple of years but just haven't had the time to get out and meet people in town, the Newcomer's Club offers wonderful opportunities.

The club offers a wide variety of activities, all designed to give individuals and couples the chance to meet and talk in an informal, relaxed atmosphere.

For those who have some free time during the day, there is a coffee morning once a month on the second floor of the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church Hall on Dix st. Coffee, tea and homemade goodies are served, and babysitting is provided for a small fee.

Another daytime activity is the monthly luncheon, held either in a member's home or at a local restaurant. The October lunch will be at the new Dover Grille on Oct. 4 at noon.

The November luncheon, scheduled for the 8th, will feature a fashion show sponsored by Calista's of Thompson st. It will be held in the home of Patty and Michael DeFlumere, 2 Surrey rd. at noon. Fall and winter fashions will be modeled by club members.

Once a month, an arts and crafts group meets at the Beehive of Knots shop on Thompson st. to work on a particular project, usually a small decorative and/or useful item. Plans are announced in the newsletter so members can choose to attend for a particular project.

Once a month, the club sponsors a major social function in a member or members' homes. These are the most popular and best attended of the club's functions. Couples and singles come out to meet others of all ages and backgrounds, hailing from all parts of the country and several foreign countries.

The first social of the year was a pizza and beer party which was a big success. Coming up is a popular annual event, the Octoberfest, to be held Saturday, Oct. 19 at 8 p.m. at the home of Jim and Donna Down, 4 Atherton rd.

In sharing a meal, particularly when it has been prepared as a joint effort, a comfortable atmosphere is automatically created, making it easy to talk and get to know people. This concept is at the heart of the Diner's Club. Groups of eight share dinner four times a year. Participants host one dinner in their home and attend three dinners, providing hors d'oeuvres, salad or dessert. Each party is organized so that the group changes each time.

"Evenings Out" is a new activity begun last year. Participants get together to attend shows, concerts, sporting events, restaurants. By making reservations as a group, discounts can sometimes be obtained. Last year, the group attended the Winton Club performance, a Pops concert and went out to several restaurants.

To get involved with this club, call the membership person, Pat Shea, at 729-2041, or come to one of the functions and see if you like it.

If you decide to join, you will be asked to contribute $7.50 per person or $15 per couple per year. You will then be placed on the mailing list to receive the bi-monthly newsletter and calendar.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Jewelry by Harvey Kornicks, a Winchester craftsman, recently won recognition at an arts exhibition.

Silversmith Wins Award

Harvey Kornicks, silversmith and goldsmith of Printwise Gallery, 10 Winchester pl. exhibited at the fifteenth annual festival by the Mystic, sponsored by the Medford Arts Council.

He is proud to announce that he won honorable mention for his works in gold.

His designs may be seen Tuesday through Saturday at the printwise Gallery or at his one-year anniversary party Oct. 4 from 7 to 9. The public is invited.

Victorian Course Classes Moved

There have been a few minor changes since the schedule for the adult education course "Victorian Visions," sponsored by the Winchester Historical Society.

On Tuesday, Oct. 15, the subject is Victorian Arts and the speaker Nancy Schrock, a specialist in 19th Century American Art.

The second lecture on Oct. 29 (previously listed to be held on Oct. 22) will be by Marcia Wood, an antique lace expert. It is about costumes.

On Nov. 12 Jennifer Skeele, instructor at the Winsor School, will talk about Victorian Literature.

Further information may be obtained from the Adult Education Dept. or from the Winchester Archives.

Co-Op Has Room For More

The Winchester Cooperative Nursery School has an opening for a girl in its four-day afternoon class. This class is held Monday through Thursday 12:30 to 3 p.m.

Director of the school, Jean Mortensen says, "I'm really excited about our curriculum. It should result in a richer educational experience for the children. During the first weeks we'll concentrate on the individuality of each child, and on the way the child fits into the larger group."

In addition to Mortensen, who will teach the two and three-day morning classes, the staff includes Maureen McWilliams, teaching the five-day morning classes; Martha Wilder, teaching the four-day afternoon classes; and Pat Malcolm, handling the extended day program. Judy Andriesse, Carole Beals, and Diane Fiumara will serve as teachers' aides in various classes.

For more information, contact the school at 729-2003 or Cheryl Walker, enrollment chairperson at 729-3801.

Aerobic Workout Is Offered

The Winchester Recreation dept. is offering a 90-minute workout of aerobics and calisthenics.

Classes will begin on Oct. 8 and last until Dec. 8. This is a two-month program for $25.

Classes will be held Tues. and Thurs. evenings from 6 to 7:30 at the Lincoln School gym.

For more information, call the Recreation Dept. at 721-7125.

Kraus Resumes Press Briefings

Sen. Dick Kraus announced the schedule of bi-monthly press briefings to be held in his district communities over the next three months.

Kraus began the first series of these press briefings in March of this year. They continued through June. This second series is planned for September through December.

"My original intention was threefold: 1) increase the exchange of information from me to my district 2) make that exchange as easy as possible for the local press and 3) make myself as accessible as possible both to the local press and to each individual in each of my communities," Kraus said.

"I should make a special thank you to each community's local press and to the cable stations in Winchester and Arlington," said Kraus.

The public is invited to all briefings. Refreshments are served. Please note the new time: Thursday afternoons, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The schedule for the next six press briefings is as follows:

- Oct. 3, Lexington Town Office Building, Room 111;
- Oct. 17, Winchester Town Hall, Selectmen's Office;
- Oct. 31, Woburn City Hall, Committee Room;
- Nov. 14, Arlington Town Hall, Hearing Room;
- Dec. 5, Lexington, Room, 111; and
- Dec. 19, Winchester, Selectmen's Office.

Winchester Opens Title Quest With Victory

Sachems Beat Heat And Somerville Too

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester and football—the two go hand in hand. The Sachems opened another season Saturday afternoon and were forcefully victorious, defeating Somerville 34-0.

Hundreds of fans packed Knowlton Stadium on an extremely hot and humid September afternoon. The weather had little effect on the Sachems, though, as they scored on their first offensive possession.

Quarterback Mike White trounced down the sidelines 51 yards on an option right loop for the touchdown.

The first half was all Winchester, and Somerville could not sustain any kind of offense.

Halfback Darren Cromwell scored on an option right from 10 yards out on the Sachems' second possession.

It appeared that the Winchester team was simply in much better physical shape, as the extreme temperature and humidity clearly hurt Somerville considerably.

With only one minute gone in the second quarter, Mike White put the ball home on a left option, to give the Sachems a 20-0 halftime lead.

Winchester also had a great advantage in that they were able to substitute freely with quality backups.

In the second half, it was more of the same, as T. J. Della Salla scored on a 3-yard run. Della Salla scored on his bread and butter play -- the 24 power.

By 9:53 of the 4th quarter, Pickle Murray's touchdown was icing on the cake, and Winchester had a 34 point lead.

Offensively, Mike White shined, as he had 119 yards on 3 carries. Darren Cromwell also blocked very well out of the backfield.

The defense was sharp as Hoss Vozzella returned to the lineup after being out three weeks with a knee injury. He completed 6 tackles.

Defense end Nicky Gennan saw a lot of action, as he had 4 tackles and 4 assists.

T. J. Della Salla grabbed 85 yards on four corners.

"It was a nice way to start. We have things to improve on. Still, I thought our backfield was impressive and it was nice to get the second string some playing time," said Head Coach Manny Marshall.

The Sachem defense was tight, as everything was stopped at the line of scrimmage.

"The linebackers kept telling me how they weren't making any tackles. We did very well, it was mostly linemen making the hits," commented noseguard David Christopher.

Perhaps the best way to sum up

Tri-Captain Mike White had this to say, "Both the offensive and defensive lines were outstanding. The backs blocked awesome, especially Crommy."

A lot of people may be thinking that Somerville was not a challenge for Winchester -- Dennis Clarke echoed similar sentiments.

"There isn't much to say. We still have to push ourselves. It must have been very frustrating for them."

Perhaps the best way to sum up the coming Middlesex league season is to listen to Sachem waterboy Danny Braga:

"Mr. Marshall is the best coach in the league. The way the Sachems practice, they deserve to win."

With dedication like that, how can they lose?

The Sachems will hit the highway for the next three weeks with their first stop in Belmont on Sept. 28.

Here's what to expect: Coach Tom

Aprille's Mauraunders run out of a multiple formation. Last year's team went 4-5-1, which Belmont may find hard to beat, since graduation has taken so many key players.

On offense, Belmont has only one returning starter, guard Ben Welch. They have no skilled position help and are relying on the unproven talents of halfback Eric Aulerbach.

If all goes well, the Sachem defense should have another field day at the expense of a very young Belmont offense.

Defensively, Belmont has noseguard Carl Ivester and defensive end Will Reinhart. Still, those two shouldn't be enough to stop Winchester.

Watch for White, Cromwell and Della Salla to do a lot of running.

Sachem fans should be confident. This looks like another victory for Winchester.

Willing Wins Singles Tennis Championship

The 56th Annual Town Tennis Tournament ended on Sunday, Sept. 15, after two weekends of competition. Sunday's finals provided Winchester residents with some great tennis matches.

Jim Willing became the 1985 men's singles champion. Willing defeated Shawn Herlihy in two sets 6-4, 6-4. It was an exciting match, played by two good young tennis players. Herlihy got to the finals by upsetting the number one seed, and last year's singles champion Lou Desmarieaux. Jim Willing also beat some tough players on his successful bid to the championship.

In the women's singles, Diane Intravia won her fourth consecutive crown by defeating Pat Lavin in two sets 6-2, 7-6. The match was long and tough and that could have gone either way.

The senior men's singles saw Ron Salter defeat Will Aldrich by scores of 6-3, 6-1. The match was Salter's third consecutive win in this event. He also did well in the men's doubles, teaming up with Bob Horne Jr. and going all the way to the semifinals before being defeated.

The double finals had some great match-ups. In the women's doubles, the team of Joan Byrne and Mary Golden defeated Dede Cunningham and Peg Wiseman 7-6, 6-2. The first set was very close and could have gone either way. This was Byrne and Golden's second consecutive championship.

Roberta McNamara and Joe Palumbo combined to beat Diane Intravia and Steve Brosnan in the mixed doubles championship 6-2, 6-3.

Eating The Proper Food Is Big Key To Good Running

By STEVE NORTON

The big race is only a week away. Your training log shows that you've paid your dues with seemingly endless 20-mile runs and exhausting interval workouts.

You're confident about running a personal best; yet there is still a question lurking in the back of your mind: "Is there anything special I should be eating to make me run better?"

Regardless of what you may have heard or read, no miracle food or magic supplement exists that will enable you to run farther or faster.

However, eating the wrong foods at the wrong time can keep you from running your best. So, food selection before a race can influence your performance, mainly for the worse.

What then should you know about food and its effect on running? Here is a quick lesson in how your body uses food for fuel.

All foods are composed of six different "building blocks" known as nutrients -- 1) carbohydrates, 2) fat, 3) protein, 4) vitamins, 5) minerals, 6) water.

The first three nutrients are the "energy" nutrients. As food is digested, these nutrients are broken down into chemical forms that your body uses to provide energy.

Carbohydrates, which digest the most easily and rapidly, leave the stomach in about three to four hours. Fat and protein are harder to digest and take approximately five to six hours to leave the stomach.

Carbohydrates provide the main fuel for physical activity. During digestion, the carbohydrates are converted into glucose, which is used as an immediate source of energy for the central nervous system and the muscles. If glucose is not needed immediately for energy, small amounts can be stored as glycogen in the liver and the specific muscles that have been conditioned during training.

During the first few minutes of physical activity glucose is the main energy source; as the activity continues, the body then turns to its glycogen supply, which is converted back into glucose, for energy.

Fat can also be used for energy. However, it is a less efficient fuel than carbohydrates, since it requires more oxygen to release its energy. Fat is used as a fuel along with glycogen in longer races, especially the 26.2 mile marathon.

Long runs are important because they teach the body to burn fat as fuel, thus making your supply of glycogen last longer.

When glycogen stores are used, weakness and exhaustion occur. This is the experience marathoners refer to as "hitting the wall." So by doing that weekly long run your body is learning to use fat as a fuel.

A main factor to consider in your pre-race eating strategy is the length of the race. For 10k through 30k (1k equals .62 miles), the two most common concerns are the following: what to eat the night before the race and what to eat on race day before racing.

You need to know that your pre-race meal does not provide the actual energy used in the race. Instead, it helps to maintain a constant blood sugar level and prevents hunger and weakness.

Then what provides the fuel needed for the race? This energy comes from the glycogen the body has stored from foods eaten 24 to 48 hours before the race. The night before a race many runners eat a high carbohydrate meal -- the traditional pasta dinner. Other good high carbohydrate foods are rice dishes, baked potatoes and breads, including variations such as muffins, pancakes and waffles. High carbohydrate foods such as these are easily digested and provide energy that is stored as glycogen.

On race day, I recommend a small, light meal rich in carbohydrates three to four hours before running. The larger the meal, the longer one should allow for the food to digest and leave the stomach. My own favorite is a cup of coffee (cream but no sugar) and blueberry muffin about three hours before the race. This is just enough to keep me from getting hungry and seems to digest easily.

From personal experience, one of the most practical ways to learn how to eat is to keep a food log. List all foods eaten as a food pattern will develop, enabling you to see what foods coincided with good training runs and great races. Remember the following equation: "Eating plus training equals winning!"

Field Hockey Team Loses Two

The Winchester High School Soccer team won both of its games last week to improve their record to 3-0-1. The Sachems played Melrose away, Tuesday, and played their first home game against Watertown Friday.

Winchester beat Melrose 3-0, but Tuesday's game was played on a hard and bare field which made play unpredictable. Winchester took the lead early as captain James Campo scored in front off a fine cross from junior Chris Verhagen, who had dribbled by (Please turn to SOCCER, Page 16)

The Runner's Eye

By Steve Norton

This time of the year, the summer running clubs are winding up their seasons with end-of-the-year banquets and awards nights.

One such club had shown astute intelligence by inviting me to this celebration. The following is a selection of random thoughts I shared with the running audience.

Comment: "Runners don't belong on the roads."

Answer: "I couldn't agree more. They belong on all those sidewalks, trails and maintained paths that exist."

Comment: (Referring to a specific race) "Did you win?"

Answer: "No, I went the same distance but they gave it to another guy."

Comment: "Hey, a girl beat you."

Answer: "Yep, she beat a lot of good runners."

Comment: "Why do you keep racing if you are never going to win?"

Answer: "I've raced against Bill Rodgers, Frank Shorter, Greg Meyer, Carlos Lopes and thousands of other great runners. Have you ever played one, just one, hole of golf with Jack Nicklaus?"

Comment: "Gee the running boom looks like it's over."

Answer: "Yeah, the next thing you know the only people you'll see running will be the people who like running."

Comment: "Did you get a trophy?"

Answer: "No, I wasn't old enough."

By the way, I wonder if I'll be invited back next year?

Local Swimmers Complete Season

Several local members of the CSSM Swim Team showed outstanding times at the annual age group championships held at Harvard University.

Michael Carroll, 11, son of John and Mary Carroll, finished a very successful season. He earned fifth place in the 200 individual medley, sixth in the 100 breast stroke, and put in the best times in the 100 fly, 200 individual medley and 100 free. He's ready for some very hard training in the fall and more success next season.

Victoria Tobakis, 10, daughter of Carol and Ted Pringle, had personal victories in all events she entered. Vicky dropped 7 seconds in the 100 free, 4 in the 50 back, 3 in the 50 free and 2 in the 100 butterfly. Vicky has only been swimming since last September and has made tremendous progress.

Both local swimmers will begin practice for the 1985-1986 season Oct. 7 at Medford High School.

Earlier, McNamara and Palumbo had a tough semifinal match by defeating the top seeded team of Mary Golden and Terry Fuller by scores of 7-6, 6-4.

The match which drew the most interest of the tournament was the men's doubles, which put together two good and exciting teams. The brothers team of David Palumbo and young Joe Palumbo teamed up to defeat the always tough team of Vandy French and Chris Scanlon.

The Palumbos took the championship by a score of 6-2, 6-4. French and Scanlon have won this event four times. The match was a very exciting and well-played match, with both teams playing good hard tennis.

This year's tennis tournament was very successful, and the seeding committee did a fine job in seeding the players, as all the final matches were among seeded players.

Hockey

traveled to Melrose to face one of their toughest competitors. The Red Raiderettes netted 5 goals in the first half and 2 in the second to bombard Winchester 7-0. Missy Della Russo and Debbie Chew led in the scoring for Melrose.

"We played the best we have so far," commented senior Lucy Shawcross. "If we keep on playing this way, we should destroy teams that don't expect us," added Shawcross.

The Sachemettes played host to Watertown on Friday, Sept. 20. Again, Winchester could not muster an offensive attack. Even with "The Gazelle," Michele Sweeney, the Sachemettes were only able to get six shots off against Watertown.

However, Sachemettes' defense was better, as proven by Watertown's 3-0 victory.

"Our goalie Kerri Doherty made 16 saves today," said wing Michelle Sweeney.

Winchester has got to find the scoring touch if they are to bounce back from a 1-3 start.

two men on the wing.

The Sachems could not seem to put the ball in the net against a packed Melrose defense. A highlight film could have been made in the first half, as senior Alfonso Serrano made a solo run down the left wing in which he juggled over three Melrose defenders. The half ended with Winchester only ahead 1-0.

Early in the second half, James Campo lofted a pass to Chris Verhagen streaking down the middle of the field. Verhagen sped past his defender and placed the ball past a charging goalie. Anthony Cuccinatti broke in alone and scored Winchester's final goal.

The Sachem's next opponent was Watertown, the game was played in Friday's blazing heat. The Sachems were excited as they blew out Watertown 7-0. The game started off shaky but Alfonso Serrano scored Winchester's first goal off a penalty shot and they could not be stopped. Chris Verhagen scored off an outside shot. James Campo scored after dribbling past two opponents.

The half ended with the Sachems ahead 3-0, but wanting more. David Reinfield scored off a left-footed shot. Paul Erbatina headed in a cross. Jay Houlihan had an outstanding day as he scored two goals, he put in a cross and tipped a shot into the net.

Girls Win One

In League Soccer

By DAVID DEMARCO

The Winchester girls' soccer scene was relatively quiet this week, as the Sachemettes had only one game, shutting out Lexington 5-0 on Sept. 17.

The Sachemettes are 4-0 on the season so far.

The Lexington game was a team effort, as there were no repeating goal scorers.

Ellen Donahoe, Katie "Little Scooter" Binding, Danielle Dulong, Debbie Nowell, and Meghan Gurrota all scored for Winchester.

Lexington established a rare feat, as they managed to shut out Winchester's leading scorer, Julie Guarnotta. Winchester is on the road this week as they travel to Reading.

Patients Range From Cats To Cockapoos

By ERIC BLOM
Bootsie sat in the receptionist's chair, India-ink eyes watching visitors enter the room. She tossed her curls in the air with a jerk of the head. And barked.

The gray cockapoo was just a visitor to the Belmont Animal Hospital on Pleasant st. She was not one of the patients Dr. Amy Marder tries to help get over behavioral problems, but the waiting room will soon be visited by such patients, Marder says.

As one of only seven animal behavior specialists in the United States and the first one in New England, Marder tries to help dogs and cats deal with aggression, separation from owners, defecation in the house and other types of behavioral problems.

Last Thursday, Marder began sessions with Chelsea, a wire-haired dachshund whose owners want the dog to relieve itself outside and to stop using the bathroom. Feet biting is another particularly painful concern for Chelsea's family.

"Bare feet," says Meg Beiler, the dog's owner. "She goes for bare feet. The minute you take off your shoes, she's there. She did it as a puppy, and everyone thought it was cute. But now she has real teeth, and it hurts."

"Sometimes she poops in the house," Beiler adds. Chelsea sniffs the corners of Marder's chair and pokes the woman's feet with her nose.

Marder, unperturbed, writes Beiler's comments on a yellow form and asks questions every few minutes. Chelsea rests her head on a radiator and watches the traffic hurry by.

After all the pertinent questions have been asked and all the answers given, Marder explains her analysis of the dog. Chelsea looks up at the doctor.

"Well this is what we are going to do," Marder tells the dog.

She says Chelsea believes feet biting is an appropriate form of play, and teaching the dog another way to play will alleviate the unwanted behavior.

Kicking the sausage-shaped dog will not help, Marder adds, because the animal interprets this action as playfulness.

Throwing a ball will turn the animal's energies in the right direction; however, this activity must be done all of the time, not just occasionally, Marder warns.

"Intermittent reinforcement is more likely to maintain the (unwanted) behavior than even continuous reinforcement," says the veterinarian.

"I walk around the neighborhood saying 'Duncan, poop, poop,' and people think I'm crazy, but it works," she says of how she hydrant-trained her dog.

Marder says old dogs can be taught new tricks, but she distinguishes her work from that of an animal trainer.

"I don't train dogs," she says. "If a dog needs training, I'll send them there. They teach the dog to sit, stay and heel, but they don't deal with the problem."

"I had one woman who brought in her dog for me to euthanize (put to sleep) because it was biting her," recalls Marder. "She walks in with this long plastic pole, and I say 'What's that,' and she says 'That's what the dog trainer told me to hit the dog with when he tried to bite me.'"

"She beat the dog, and she had stitches in her arm," Marder says.

Since Marder — president of the American Veterinary Society of Animal Behavior — is a licensed veterinarian as well as behavioral expert, she prescribes drugs to help animals overcome behavioral problems, as well. Trainers cannot.

The pet doctor began her work as a behavioral specialist out of her love for animals.

During her practice in California, which she maintained for three years, people brought their animals in to be destroyed because of behavioral difficulties.

Marder says most people have their animals put to sleep for behavioral rather than physical reasons.

"They come home every day, and there's feces in the bathroom, and they get angrier and angrier until one day they just bring the animal in," Marder says.

"Many times, behavior problems lead to the disintegration of the bond between owners and pet," she adds. "People wouldn't have pets if there wasn't a bond there."

Marder, who charges $50 an hour for her services, says she plans to help maintain and reforge that bond between the Bootsies, Blackies and Bowsers of Belmont and their owners.

In the coming weeks, Dr. Marder will answer questions about animal behavior with a column. Questions should be typed, double-spaced, and sent to: Pet Editor, Century Newspapers, 3 Church st., Winchester, MA 01890. No phone calls.

Church Women Post Programs

At a recent board meeting of Church Women United of Winchester, President Marjorie Berger of St. Mary's Parish outlined programs for the coming year.

Activities for which dates have been chosen are:

Annual Meeting and Luncheon, Feb. 11 at Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church.

World Day of Prayer, March 7 at Parish of the Epiphany.

Sale for the Blind, April 29 at Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church.

Church. The annual sale of UNICEF cards and gifts will be organized this fall by the Unitarian Church with Mary Aubrey and Elizabeth Williams in charge.

Hilde Zerwekh of the Parish of the Epiphany, with the assistance of Margaret Keefe of Immaculate Conception Parish, will again coordinate the Share-A-Meal program at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Schedules were also completed for Meals on Wheels drivers (Church Women United covers one route every Thursday).

The church luncheons for seniors will be held monthly from October through May, except for December and January.

Church Women United plans to continue supplying fresh flowers for Winchester Hospital's Meditation Room.

Catholic Morality Lectures Offered

"Contemporary Catholic Morality" is the title of a lecture series on three consecutive Wednesdays, Oct. 2, 9 and 16, at 7:30 p.m. in St. Mary's Religious Education Center.

Included will be such topics as concepts of sin, guilt and moral development as well as specific moral questions. The series will be taught by Rev. James Flynn, Ph.D.

Father Flynn is currently headmaster at Notre Dame Preparatory School in Fitchburg. His experience includes professor of Philosophy of Education and Ethics at Boston College, Laboure Junior College and Regis College.

In addition, he is former pastor of Sacred Heart Church in Waltham. He has lectured and conducted workshops in Moral Education and teacher training programs in many parishes in the Archdiocese of Boston.

The series is sponsored by St. Mary's Religious Education Commission. There is no charge, and it is open to the public.

Classes Consider St. Paul's Letters

Saint Paul's letters will be highlighted during a series of classes to be presented each Monday at 9:45 a.m. at Saint Mary's Religious Education Center beginning Sept. 30.

Father Daniel Magni will discuss these scriptures in terms of the Christian's spiritual journey from Baptism to death. Please bring a copy of the New Testament.

Classes will begin shortly after the daily 9:00 a.m. mass and coffee will be served.

All are welcome and no previous preparation is necessary.

Church Women Plan Luncheon

A Church Women United luncheon sponsored by the women of St. Mary's Church will be held Tuesday, Oct. 1, at noon in St. Mary's Parish Hall.

Reservations should be made this week. Call Marjorie Berger (729-4693) or Mary Collins (729-6285). Cost is $3.

OBITUARIES

Vera P. Briggs

Funeral services were held Sept. 10 for Vera P. Briggs, 73, of Reading and formerly of Winchester, who died Sept. 9 after a long illness.

Born in Worcester, Mrs. Briggs lived in Winchester for 35 years before moving to Reading. She was the widow of Paul B. Briggs.

Among her survivors are her son, Richard B. Briggs of East Hartford, Conn.; and two daughters, Janet B. Colbath of Wolfboro, N.H., and Muriel B. Walters of Winchester.

Also surviving are two sisters, Edith Horton of Woburn and Juanita Alves of Tiverton, R.I.; one brother, Clifford Pagels of Boulder, Colo.; eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The funeral service was held from the Norris Funeral Home in Winchester. Burial was at Grun Cemetery in Middleboro, Ma.

Isabelle Going

Services were held Sept. 23 for Isabelle M. Going, 87, of Winchester, who died unexpectedly Sept. 20 in Providence, R.I.

Born in Providence, Mrs. Going was a resident of Winchester for nine years. She is the widow of the late John C. Going Esq.

Among her survivors are three daughters, Mary E. Crawford of Rockville, Md., Ann G. Gallo of Norwalk, Conn., and Margaret Settipane of Providence; two sons, Dr. John C. Going Jr. of Winchester and Joseph B. Going of Newport, R.I., and 23 grandchildren.

The funeral service was held Sept. 23 at St. Augustine's Church in Providence. Arrangements were made by the Russell Boyle Funeral Home.

Memorial donations may be made to the St. Jude's Research Center, P.O. Box 1818, Memphis, Tenn. 38108, or to the Franciscan Missionary, Congregation of Marian Fathers, Stockbridge, Ma. 02162.

Agnes Aiken

A memorial service was held Sept. 22 at the Unitarian Church on Church st. for Agnes (Montgomery) Aiken, 76, who died Sept. 15 at the Aberjona Nursing Home.

A Winchester resident for 40 years, she most recently lived at 183 Highland ave.

She was a 1931 graduate of Wheaton College and received her master's degree from Harvard University.

She taught Latin at Winchester Junior High for seven years, after which she taught French at the N. Andover High School for five years.

She was a life member and former president of the Winchester League of Women Voters; an active member of the Unitarian Church of Winchester and the Winchester Seniors Assoc.; and a member of the council for Winchester's A Better Chance program.

She also was a secretary of the Winchester Council on Aging; publicity director for the Winchester school system; a director of local adult education for many years; a member of the French Club of Winchester and a member of the Harvard Faculty Wives Assoc.

Among her survivors are her daughter, Elizabeth A. Chandler of Norton; her granddaughter, Rebecca Chandler of Norton and a niece, Marcia Wentworth of Watertown.

Memorial services were held Sept. 22 at the Unitarian Church on Church st. Burial was private.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Agnes Montgomery Aiken Scholarship for students with majors in foreign language, in care of Elizabeth A. Chandler, P.O. Box 373, Norton, Ma. 02766, or to the Unitarian Church Music Fund.

Rose A. Carroll

Funeral services were held Sept. 23 for Rose A. Carroll, 78, of Winchester, who died Sept. 20 at home after a long illness.

Born in Winchester, Miss Carroll was a life-long resident.

She was a 1926 graduate of Winchester High School and was employed in the advertising office of Filene's of Boston for 44 years.

Miss Carroll was a member of the Ladies Sodality and a member of the Ladies Auxiliary VFW Aberjona Post 3719.

Among her survivors are two sisters, Eleanor R. Eckert of Winchester and Martha Knowlton of Revere, and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral was held Sept. 23 from the Lane Funeral Home, followed by a funeral mass at the Immaculate Conception Church in Winchester celebrated by Rev. George J. DuFour. Burial was at Calvary Cemetery in Woburn.

BOARD OF APPEAL
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The WINCHESTER BOARD OF APPEAL will hold a PUBLIC HEARING on WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1985 at 7:00 P.M. in the BOARD OF HEALTH CLINIC ROOM at TOWN HALL on the following matters:

(1) PETITION NO. 2696 - That of DIANA KHAMRAZ concerning the property at 10-12 LORING AVENUE, WINCHESTER, MA. Bowen detailed his store, pointing to color renderings of a shop he said would feature clean, simple furnishings and seasonal displays such as flowers.

He cited a track record of running a restaurant that had received kudos from Boston dining critics. He added that he is financially comfortable enough so that he would focus all his business energies on the liquor store. His family, he said, would also work with him.

Next on the hearings list was Nicholas Buonopane. He said he would tap his 16 years' experience as owner and operator of Berkman's Liquors in Somerville.

Buonopane said he would sell the Somerville store and run only the Winchester shop if he is chosen.

After some dickering by board members Mark Lombardi and Alan Macdonald, Buonopane assured the board that his son would be the likely candidate to take over his work eventually.

"But I plan to be in that store 30 or 40 hours every week," said Buonopane, "especially at the beginning."

William Caci, along with his sister Louise Doherty and brother Frank Caci, focused on the impact a liquor store might have on the community.

Caci, who proposed to do business as Uncommon Spirits Inc., said he would spend $5,000 annually on the local school system's anti-substance abuse program.

The Cacis said his group had consulted studies on what the community's concerns might be, saying that he felt the town's main concern is possible effects on minors who might acquire liquor illegally.

Caci said he would install a video tape machine similar to those placed in banks. He said the videotape would be used as a deterrent to minors.

Galvin, appearing with his mother, Ann Galvin, and their attorney, cited his family's longtime involvement in the liquor business.

Galvin said he would expect to sell more wine than beer at the Winchester store, and said he plans to invest $100,000 on interior decorating.

Galvin, owner of the Giles Liquor Store in Medford, said he would tap that store's storage resources, but added that he would comply with the board's wishes regarding storage.

Legally, the winner of the license must pay $1,000 to the town for the permit. The license is only good for one year, which means the $1,000 fee must be paid again in January, upon approval from the Selectmen.

What To Do

Land's Herbs, Flowers, Vegetables In Garden Of Earthy

Quaking grass. Chinese lanterns. Dwarf queens. Bee balm. Unicorn pods. Walking stick cabbage. Pearly everlasting.

New underground punk rock groups? Ingredients for a witch's brew? Or elements of the latest pre-teen horror flick?

In fact, these are only a few of the more than 100 unusual herbs, flowers and vegetables at Land's Sake Garden, a 1½-acre fairytale forest on the Case Estates in Weston.

Here grow exotic vegetables, including two-foot-long cucumbers, white eggplant, pit-free baby watermelon and "floccoli" (a hybrid of cauliflower and broccoli).

Herbs boast strange and wonderful scents, stranger names and uncommon colors.

This extraordinary garden, as it exists today, was designed last spring by Land's Sake, a non-profit group in operation since 1980.

"The group has two purposes," says Brian Donahue, one of its founders. "We want to provide ecologically sound management of public and town-owned land and we want to educate the young people growing up here about the value of land conservation."

Hansen's Farms, with its harvest of traditional produce, borders on the Land's Sake Garden.

"We try to find unusual varieties of vegetables and we concentrate on the herbs and flowers so that we are not in competition with Hansen's," says Rob Crockett, the designer, chief engineer and caretaker for Land's Sake Garden.

The result is an abundant and colorful smorgasbord which includes nine types of mint: spearmint, peppermint, curly, lemon balm, cat, pineapple, apple, "ex-permint" and yes, even chocolate.

The garden began in Crockett's basement. Hundreds of seedlings were nurtured under dozens of Gro-lites. From there, the fledglings were moved to three greenhouses donated by Weston residents. Crockett recalls several hectic weeks of commuting to and from these sites.

Finally, the miniature plants were transplanted to the garden plot at the Case Estates. This process consumed six weeks of Crockett's time. It also took considerable doses of his imagination.

"I wanted to make the garden fun," says Crockett. "This is an 'Open House Showcase.' People enjoy it. And kids love the dahlia maze."

The four-and five-foot high dahlias, bordering a maze of paths, have a long history. The tubers, donated by one of the customers, are said to have come from the garden of noted artist Winslow Homer.

"People come here because they have no time or land to tend their own garden. Here they can pick herbs, vegetables and flowers with no hassle," says Crockett.

Yellow tomatoes sprinkled with purple basil? Two-foot long asparagus beans? Yellow watermelon?

"Many people find it interesting," says Crockett. "They're curious and like the variety."

And variety is offered. Consider apple cucumbers, purple beans, Hungarian wax peppers, coriander, Lebanese squash, yellow zucchini, licorice basil, turban gourds, sesame or blue corn.

Certain selections are more interesting than popular, says Crockett. "Some people just want red tomatoes!"

Not everything goes on the dining table. Addictive pumpkin carvers can plan ahead. Crockett has one patch growing that may produce pumpkins weighing up to 200 pounds.

Certain flowers can be easily dried and used in decorative floral arrangements. "You just strip the leaves and hang them upside down in a dark place for three to seven days, longer if humid," says Crockett.

He especially recommends statice-purple, pink, white, blue or lavender, ammobium - a white dry bud, cockscomb - "looks like red brain coral," and artemisia - a silvery foliage plant used in wreath bases.

Many herbs can also be dried for later use in cooking. Again Crockett recommends stripping off of the lower leaves and hanging in a dark, airy place. Basil, moistened with oil, can be easily frozen. And, of course, there are six types of basil: holy basil, licorice, lemon, opal, cinnamon and sweet basil.

Bottle gourds, which appear as the name suggests, become attractive and useful vases. "Just let them dry out in a basement" says

Crockett. "Next summer, cut off the top, empty out the inside, and polyurethane it."

Such vases are on sale at the Land's Sake stand for $15 to $20.

One plant, Job's Tears, produces tiny hollow discs which can be dried, painted and strung onto necklaces. These will be ready for picking at the end of the month.

Luffa, also called loofah, gourds grow until the first frost. They can then be soaked in water, peeled in slices, and dried out. The result? Very practical and useful sponges.

Walking stick cabbage do exist. At the end of the season, they are expected to grow to eight feet tall. They become woody and can actually be carved and used for... walking sticks.

Land's Sake Garden, located at the intersection of Wellesley, Newton and School sts. in Weston, is open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. until the first frost.

Prices for pickings vary, but stems usually cost 10 cents for flowers and herbs are 25 cents an ounce, says Crockett.

"Because we may not be here next year, we're telling people to bring their shovels. People can dig up the perennials they want for a fair price."

Some of Winslow Homer's dahlia tubers will also be for sale.

Another venture sponsored by Land's Sake is the sale of approximately 150 cords of firewood collected during thinning of the town's forests.

Land's Sake manages the town forest and 60 miles of trails. Other projects include an apple orchard with a cider press, the maintenance of 23 sheep on back pastures donated by residents and, for the future, a portable electric saw mill.

"We hope to break some paths and show people how land can be used. We don't want the rural character lost. We need to keep a balance with the open land," says Donahue.

For more information about the Land's Sake Garden and the activities of the organization, call Brian Donahue at 899-5341.

History of Land's Sake

The herb and flower garden began as part of a larger parcel.

Four years ago, the Arnold Arboretum of Harvard University requested that Land's Sake manage and develop an idle 40-acre parcel of a 110-acre estate donated to Harvard in the 1940's by the Case sisters of Weston.

"They wanted to see if the property could produce some income, become self-sustaining, and also be a community resource," says Brian Donahue, one of the group's founders.

Much of this property is maintained as woods. According to Donahue, the farmed section was just about breaking even when Harvard, in an effort to generate more income, leased nine acres to Hansen's Farms, an established business in the area.

The two farms work together, but now the future of the Land's Sake Garden is in the dark.

University officials, in order to raise money for the Arnold Arboretum, placed the property for sale with a price tag of $3.5 million.

The town of Weston has first right to purchase. Residents make their decision at the polls in October.

"This is a hot issue in Weston," says Donahue. "The town already owns 1700 acres of undeveloped property. This piece is close to the town center and there's a lot of sentiment attached to it."

Should voters refuse the purchase, the land can be sold for commercial development. Recent tests of the property indicate that it can accommodate 24 homes.

What To Learn

Fear Forum Draws Locals With Phobias

Stories by Susan Curtis

The fear is overwhelming. The victim feels helpless, faint and nauseous. Feelings of suffocation take over. The heart is pounding. Thoughts are scrambled.

There's no way out. One terrifying message invades the body and mind: something awful is going to happen.

The experience is an attack of agoraphobia, a complex and dangerous form of phobia, noted even in ancient times and all cultures.

In fact, over 13 million Americans are said to suffer from some form of phobia or anxiety attack. It is the most common psychiatric problem in this country.

"Phobia is an anxiety disorder," says Carol Goldman, President of the Board of Directors for the Greater Boston Phobia Society.

The non-profit group will host local events and forums throughout the Boston area to bring awareness to the issues and problems of phobic people.

Its first major free forum will be held on Oct. 1 at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Mt. Auburn Hospital, Mt. Auburn st., Cambridge.

"Simple phobia is very common. It's an irrational fear of something not scary in itself, such as cats or heights. Lots of people have phobias and don't even realize it."

A person normal in all other respects is phobic if he reacts uncontrollably with dread, terror and panic to what is usually considered an ordinary situation.

Common phobias interrupt but do not hinder effective day-to-day living, says Goldman. Someone with a fear of elevators, for example, will try to use stairs.

These phobias can be easily treated, says Goldman, through desensitization, a type of behavior modification, and relaxation techniques.

Agoraphobia — from the Greek, fear of open places — is a more complex and frightening display of anxiety which, in its most severe form, can paralyze a person's life.

Victims of agoraphobia feel physically and mentally trapped. They may be on a plane, driving in a car, or standing in line in a crowded store. A rush of panic suddenly envelopes them. They truly believe that they are losing their mind. Their strongest reaction is to flee.

"You're not crazy! I want to tell them," says Goldman.

"These anxiety attacks may appear to come out of the blue," says Goldman. Unlike simple phobia stemming from a specific object or stimulus, there is no external cue.

Rather, the panic is caused by the person's own nervousness, and his inability to cope with this nervousness.

One theory describes agoraphobia as a fear of fear. It is not the act of driving, for example, which frightens the phobic. It is the fear of an anxiety experienced while driving.

Public speaking is the most common fear people have. It is "normal" to feel concern and some healthy nervousness — about the content, the style of presentation, the audience. The agoraphobic, however, is not afraid of these elements, but of the total loss of control which might result from a panic attack during the speech.

Anticipation of future attacks dominates a victim's life. The phobic's prime focus becomes avoidance of all situations which might be associated with an attack. Daily events assume very narrow parameters.

The phobic may elect to drive only at certain hours and in specific areas. The right lane may only be used so that access off a highway is easily possible. Or expressways and major roads may be avoided completely. Finally, he may decide to give up all driving.

In its most tragic form, an individual becomes housebound and limits the majority of his or her activity to the safety of home.

Untreated, agoraphobia becomes a vicious cycle.

"People are afraid to feel anxious," says Steven Fisher, who has a doctorate in psychology and is a board member of the Greater Boston Phobia Society. "Feelings of anxiety create more anxiety."

"The phobic is on a tightrope," says Fisher. "He can't budge one way or another. There's tension to stay in control."

Carol Goldman is president of the Board of Directors for the Greater Boston Phobia Society.

Fisher describes reactions to skipped heartbeats by phobics and other people. The caffeine consumed by coffee drinkers causes missed heartbeats, a very common reaction.

"If I were anxious," says Fisher, "I'd notice every single one. A phobic would be convinced that something was very much wrong."

"Some people get ulcers or have heart attacks," says Goldman. "Others may be prone to anxiety attacks. It's one way the body responds to high levels of stress."

In his recent book, "The Anxiety Disease," Dr. David Sheehan of the Massachusetts General Hospital and Harvard Medical School suggests the disorder could be chemically based. Certain people might be physiologically predisposed to anxiety attacks.

Fisher identifies shared traits which often appear in people suffering from phobia.

"They're perfect people. They want to please others. They can't say no. They've been raised to feel responsible for others. They become victims of 'It's my fault if...'. They must maintain emotional control."

As a group, phobic people are intelligent, achievement-oriented and successful in work, school and interpersonal relationships. Their drive toward perfectionism also

Recovering Phobics Say Panic Lurks

Pam Lindsay and Pat Toner are recovering phobics.

Each woman experienced spontaneous panic attacks. They felt isolated, helpless, alone and terrified.

Each story has a happy ending — attained after tremendous personal pain, effective therapy, the supervised use of medication, and the constant support of friends and family.

Pat Toner was 18 years old when she suffered her first panic attack.

She was in a restaurant with her

From that point on, something changed for Pat. She constantly focused on her heart in dread of any abnormal occurrence.

grandmother and her friends when a man near them pulled a knife on another man.

"Don't worry about it, dear," Pat recalls her grandmother saying. "It happens all the time around here."

Certainly this scene created valid distress. Pat knew then, however, that her reaction was not normal.

"I couldn't move — my heart was pounding so hard. I couldn't control it. It lasted all night — over eight hours. I was terrified. I thought I was dying."

The next day Pat visited the family's doctor who dismissed her frightening experience as a simple case of nerves. From that point on, something changed for Pat. She constantly focused on her heart in dread of any abnormal occurrence.

Pam Lindsay's first noted anxiety began differently.

Initially there was no overwhelming rush of fear. She felt dizzy, flushed, nauseous, and about to faint.

She knew something was "not right." Her doctor diagnosed her symptoms as the flu. The ailment continued, however, for several months.

"It became worse," said Lindsay. "I started feeling a rush of panic often. Wherever I was, I'd have to get out — the fight or flight response. I'd just feel so afraid, so helpless."

"That's the irony of anxiety. It is internal," says Lindsay. "You can't escape it."

At age 24 Lindsay went through a complete series of physical exams. Nothing irregular was discovered. Yet her attacks of phobia were longer and happening more frequently. They would last from five minutes to an hour.

Both women were undergoing major life changes when their phobic experiences began. Toner was planning her wedding and would be leaving home for the first time.

8 to 10 p.m.	Eighth sign following
10 to Midnight	Ninth sign following
Midnight to 2 a.m.	Tenth sign following
2 to 4 a.m.	Eleventh sign following

ARIES (March 21 to April 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — Be self-confident but not overbearing — others may be jealous of your successes. Finances improve but overspending is a danger, so get accounts in order. A relationship that was lukewarm could start to heat up.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Other people will really listen to you now, so step up and be heard. Be flexible and listen to other points of view without anger, however. Check out all the facts of a "good deal" that is offered before jumping in.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Trust your feelings and follow your instincts — you're right on! don't be drawn into petty gossip sessions and keep everything aboveboard. You're in the spotlight now, so dress the part and forward your ambitions.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Someone from the past could reappear and stir old memories. Enjoy a social whirl and take note of new people you meet who could be important to you later on. If you get yourself more organized now, work will be much easier.

LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Finish up an ongoing project before tackling anything new. Let your friends know you're looking for new career opportunities — they can help. Take the lead in getting a group of family or friends together for a reunion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — A romance could move into a new stage of greater commitment now. Get involved in study programs, travel or cultural interests that expand your knowledge. Avoid power plays or competitive attitudes on the job.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Follow your heart, not your head, in a romantic relationship and you can make lovely new beginnings. Fix up your home to make it more attractive. Find time to be alone to clear your thoughts and find more peace of mind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — A close relationship will be strengthened if you are willing to communicate and compromise. In another area, be sure you live up to promises you make. Let others know about your ambitions and goals — they can help.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Use your creativity and move forward with confidence, but remember that commitments must be kept. It may be time to let go of a losing situation so you are free to move on. Be honestly direct in contract dealings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — A romance could be getting more serious; you may be ready to make a commitment, with assistance from another person, you could turn a dream into a reality. Take action to expand your base of operation — be enthusiastic!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Summon your courage and make a break with a living pattern if it has been holding you back. Don't get carried away by "too good to be true" schemes or people, something you begin now will mean more security later.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Financial worries can be dispelled if you're willing to tighten your budget. Organize tasks and don't spread yourself too thin. Your response to a family situation could be overly emotional — be willing to collect more facts.

What To Visit

Gallery on the Green in Lexington presents works by Michael David, and Gunnar Baldwin through Oct. 19.

Paintings Sparkle With Color, Light In Local Gallery

By Meredith Fife Day

Gallery on the Green, 1837 Mass. ave., Lexington, is exhibiting the work of three young artists.

The art is offering a rich, encompassing range of concept, style and vision, while firmly rooted in a rigorous grasp of formal visual principles.

Michael David's rowers navigate through waters of sparkling azures that melt into soft, quiet greens and mauves. Even bridge pilings are splashed with color—the shadows cast on concrete absorb light that turns a moody olive as David's sure hand and sensitive eye interpret the Charles River on a perfect New England Day.

Dazzling and seductive as David's color is, the viewer is able to see that his paintings maintain their strength and beauty without it.

A series of laundromat paintings, and some of the Charles River rowers, are painted in muted neutral tones, or black and white only.

These works reveal how David's understanding of value interplay and sometimes very complex and daring compositions contribute to meaning and presence in the work.

A somber, melancholy tone is set as people, isolated one from another, go about pouring detergent into washers, or sit alone reading as their clothes dry.

The theme of solitude is ever-present in David's work. Even if two oarsmen occupy a rowing shell, they are single entities alone within themselves.

The people of David's paintings have a stronger relationship with their environment and their tasks than they do with each other. David understands the inevitable verities of city life: one makes one's way by finding a moment of silent joy in nature's light and beauty, a moment of peace in the midst of the fatigue of menial chores—more is to be offered here than one dare ask of another preoccupied city dweller.

Gunnar Baldwin's paintings are all landscapes with not a hint of human habitation or participation.

Waters reflect only rocks which break their surfaces or define their shores, trees along their banks, and sky above.

Baldwin could be a Sierra Club photographer with a brush. His views of nature are scenic in a traditional sense—earth, water and air are selected and distilled in a way that evoke man's fascination for, and attraction to, the wilderness.

Who has not been struck by a citrus-yellow tree setting itself apart from all that surrounds it by its acid color among earthier tones? Baldwin paints the tree and paints its reflection in the brown waters of the stream it overhangs, and the viewer is reminded of nature's haughty, fleeting drama.

The paintings of Michael David and Gunnar Baldwin are handsomely offset by Elizabeth Whyte Schulze's quietly surprising and witty baskets.

Inspired by the work of primitive cultures, Schulze takes a basic, simple shape, tilts it slightly, bedecks it with a humble, yet determined pattern, and ends up with a sophisticated, haunting vessel that has spiritual and ritualistic overtones.

In one of her most delightful pieces, a phallic totem sheds its grandeur as two saucers attach themselves asymmetrically and irreverently to its sides, like two wide eyes.

Gallery on the Green, into its sixth year, is owned and operated by six women.

Kathleen Dolan of Belmont is its corporate representative and advisor.

Trish Heard, another one of the owners, describes the gallery as "user-friendly"—a place where thoughtful and enthusiastic collectors can go to find new and exciting work without subjecting themselves to the hype and glitter of Newbury st. or New York galleries.

The gallery is eclectic and intelligent in its choice of exhibitors. Among its most popular artists is a woman from England who does embroidery work.

A wide range of media and styles stock both the gallery "stable" and its exhibits.

The current exhibit will be on view through Oct. 19. Call 861-6044 for more information.

What Do You Say?

Do You Think Children With AIDS Should Be Allowed In Regular Classrooms?

By LINDA RAUCH

Mrs. Paulette Gilbert, 40
Furniture Accessory Designer
Arlington

I have mixed emotions on the issue. It's a very serious issue. It's such a new disease that they don't know whether it's only sexually transmitted. I would say now to let them go to school.

Lorna Tseckares, 48
Housewife
Winchester

I have mixed feelings until they can prove without a shadow of a doubt that it can't be contagious. Little kids touch each other and cry and I read that it could be transmitted through tears. If it can be proven that it can't be communicated, then they should allow it.

Beth Imhoff, 25
Manager - Arlington Food Co-op
Arlington

I really think that children with AIDS should be allowed in school until more evidence is shown that you can catch it through physical contact. To take children out of school is ridiculous. I think people are overreacting. As long as the parent of the child is very careful, then it's ok. The only solution I see is the government should provide a tutor for the child, if children aren't allowed in school.

Morgan Belford, 23
Earth Watch Researcher
Belmont

Yes, I think they should because I think the damage to the child by keeping him out of school is more than keeping him in school. It should be clear if there is a danger.

Mrs. Margaret Norris, 69
Works for Belmont Electric
Belmont

They should not attend school because I don't think it's healthy for others. I don't think it's right. The children should be taken care of and there should be a special school for them.

Laurie Roby, 34
Homemaker
Winchester

I can understand that parents with children in school should be sensitive about it. If necessary precautions are taken, then I don't see why they can't go to school. I think it's sad that there is this mass hysteria about it and the ones who are suffering are the children.

What's Free Couch And Cushion Care

By TERRY BISBEE

Would you like some assistance in running your household? No, we're not offering you an au pair — but we are offering you some terrific tips to help make your job easier.

Upholstery Care

You probably seldom consider the feelings of your couch or even your favorite chair. You spill ice cream on their cushions. And then you turn the cushion over and hope no one notices the big chocolate stain.

How do you think your furniture feels about having its upholstery covered in spots and stains?

You can put an end to this conflict and make friends with your furniture again. The Guide to Complete Upholstery Care can be your first step.

Read through the eight pages of this brochure and you'll come across some genuinely handy advice, like how to clean spots, stains and everyday soils from your upholstery. There are four methods, and it will tell you which method to use depending on the type of stain and the kind of fabric it's on.

You'll also find suggestions for the ongoing care and maintenance of your furniture.

Directions: Send a postcard. Ask For: Guide to Complete Upholstery Care.

Mail To: Bissell Inc., Advertising Department, P.O. Box 1888-F, Grand Rapids, MI 49501.

Beautiful Bathrooms

If you've got the "basic bathroom blues," here's a freebie that will help you change that. You'll find a number of exciting new decorating ideas in this 32-page, full-color illustrated booklet, Bathscapes.

Ideas for the minimalist approach of an "Urbane" bath are presented, with sleek lines and shining surfaces, or decorate your bath in one of the following styles: country, jungle, early American, Oriental, seascape or Roman.

There are 14 unique bathroom decors in all. And the producers of this booklet have tried to present several different accessorizing approaches as well as overall designs.

Directions: Send a postcard.

Ask For: Bathscapes.

Mail To: DuPont Bathscapes Booklet Offer, Room G-50026, Wilmington, DE 19898.

"Freebies" is compiled by Freebies Magazine, a national publication that features free (or postage-and-handling-only) offers you can request through the mail. To receive information about Freebies, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Freebies Magazine, P.O. Box 20283-CP, Santa Barbara, CA 93120.

Our Children College Counseling For Teens

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Q. Some of my friends are "at me" constantly because I know (and tell them) that our very bright teenager needs counseling to help her decide which route to follow regarding college and job goals.

I really think it is a matter of envy on their part, but it does get my goat to hear them pooh-pooh something that I feel is essential. Their point is that smart kids have a lot of insight and can figure things out for themselves, so counseling is just a waste of time and money.

Am I on the wrong track, or are they?

A. Because they frequently have so many options open to them, gifted children may need some professional help in deciding on vocational goals. Tests, hobbies, interests and other factors may open so many doors to them that frustrations could evolve with which a school counselor or other qualified person can be helpful.

So you are essentially correct, but I wonder why you feel it is necessary to discuss this issue with others. Why not just stick with what your common sense tells you, and talk to your friends about movies, books, TV, music, current events or other less touchy subjects?

Q. My husband loves to play cards, and now that our son is 8 years old he feels that he has a companion. But the trouble is that the boy always ends up crying because my husband always wins. Why shouldn't he? He has been at it for at least 30 years, and it is all new to our son.

They play poker, different kinds of rummy, and other games that ought to be a lot of fun for them, but it isn't fun for either one.

When I tell my husband that he ought to let the boy win once in awhile, he insists that it is a tough life ("winner take all"), and that it is time for our son to "grow up."

What would you say to that?
A. Maybe it is easier for me than for you to say it, but the obvious response is that so far as growing up is concerned, the emphasis seems to be on the wrong person. Look who isn't mature!

It appears to be time to change the whole experience for one they can both enjoy — a movie, sports event, shopping or something else. However, even that may not work out well if your husband continues to bully your son.

Q. Is there really anything to this business of trying to eliminate artificial coloring and flavoring in children's diets to control their behavior? We have a very active 4-year-old, and I would love to be able to tone him down at least a little bit.

The preschool teacher he has tells me that he is perfectly normal, just inquisitive and curious about the world around him. I find that hard to believe because he seems to have a million questions and enough energy to fuel a city! He's not tired at night, but I am worn out.

A. The research is still not complete on artificial coloring and flavoring in foods as they relate to possible hyperactivity. However, some parents have felt that their elimination has been helpful in reducing the stress some children's performances may place on a family.

If your youngster's preschool teacher is competent (as most of them are), he or she probably has seen him in situations where he can be compared with other 4-year-olds. So perhaps your boy really is within the "normal range" of children his age.

I've sent you a copy of a checklist I have prepared that describes the characteristics of most 4-year-olds. If other readers would like one at no cost, just send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request to me at the address below.

Letters may be sent to Dr. Willard Abraham, Our Children, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

Are you the parent of a preschool child, 2 to 5 years old? Send a stamp, plus your request for information about a monthly service that may help you, to Dr. Abraham, P.O. Box 572, Scottsdale, AZ 85252.

For Seniors Homes Can Pay Off

By LEONARD J. HANSEN

Are you property rich and cash tight? You may have a gold mine in your home and property but be limited in your cash income from pension, Social Security or other sources.

Today there are solutions you might consider that can increase your cash income dramatically, give you cash investments or provide for your financial security the rest of your life.

Congress and the federal administration have continued to authorize the $125,000 capital gains exclusions when a mature adult, 55 or older, sells his/her personal home, when it has been owned for at least five years and personal residency has exceeded three years.

This one-time capital gains exclusion from federal taxation starts after deducting the original cost of the property and any improvements, selling costs and the cost of buying another home (presumably smaller and at a lower price). The "gain" therefore is the net difference of profit in cash, which invested at 10 percent could produce significant cash-flow income each month and year. Cash-flow income from investment does not affect Social Security benefit payments but could be income taxable depending on the type of financial instruments or programs used.

Many senior citizens have used such a concept to provide for a very active retirement life while purchasing a smaller residential unit, or even while renting a home or apartment. The consideration should be based on your own statement of need or desire, and based, too, on the real estate value of your present property.

More and more research today shows that senior citizens are looking to their own lifestyles for the use of their estates — to go, do and buy what they want, as opposed to years-ago assumptions that any estate value must be preserved for heirs.

A recent twist on this sale concept is a Reverse Annuity Mortgage, where the senior citizen actually sells the residence, continues to live in it, and gains, too, cash-flow income in addition to Social Security, pensions and other income. The concept has been promoted through private industry demonstration programs and is being explored by some savings and loan institutions around the nation.

In the Reverse Annuity Mortgage, the buyer is actually an investor or group of investors, and to explore the possibility you need to take the question to a real estate broker who deals with investors.

In the savings and loan concept, the institution uses regular loan funds to create the purchase, debt and income service. The funds can provide a regular income while the senior citizen continues to live in the residence.

In both concepts there is an estate value — diminished by the value of the cash transacted through the arrangement. The major caution is to be alert to markdowns in property value as is the practice in the Reverse Annuity Mortgage — is the discount acceptable or not? You will want to engage your own professional appraiser to establish the current market property value before you ever talk to a broker, investors or the financial institution.

Both methods, if they make good sense to you, are ways to put property asset value to work for today's income and lifestyle. Each has its own advantages and disadvantages. To explore either possibility you should draw the counsel and participation of your attorney and a qualified accountant in addition to the earlier recommended professional appraiser.

Are there problems?

"The worst thing," one senior lady told us, "was in some interference by my children who thought they'd get less later."

So what did she do?

"I sold the house and took the investment income because I really want to see the world in this lifetime. I've earned it and I am doing it."

If you're property rich and cash tight, perhaps it makes sense for your own consideration. Is there more of the world you want to see; or more that you want to do? That's the question — and the answer is all yours, what is right for you.

If you have a question you'd like answered, please write to Mainly for Seniors, Copley News Service, P.O. Box 190, San Diego, CA 92112-0190.

Fall Through

'King Stag' Opens At ART

Somewhere over the rainbow lies the magical Oriental kingdom of Serendippo and the enchanted forest of Miracoli and reigning majestically over this land of fantasy, mirth and intrigue is the ultimate master magician, noted Romanian director Andrei Serban!

With rare sleight of hand and creative genius, Mr. Serban has guided the American Repertory company to a most auspicious season's curtain-raiser with Carlo Gozzi's commedia dell'arte fable, "The King Stag"! Along with the Company's magnificent ensemble, and the infinite talents of Julie Taymor, who created costumes, puppets and masks, and choreographed the movements of puppets, shadow puppets, marionettes and kites, Serban has molded a bewitching entertainment of rare and exquisite beauty!

The tragicomic fairy tale tells of the plight of good Deramo, the King, in his quest to find true love. With the magical council of a Buddha-like mask (a wonderful-stage set full-piece designed by Michael H. Yeargan) whose facial expressions signify "yea" or "nay," Deramo has already rejected 2748 bridal prospects.

The ambitious Tartaglia, his evil prime minister and confidant, yearns for his whiny daughter Clarice to be the chosen one, but Clarice is in love with the courtier Leandro, son of the Pantalone, second prime minister to the King.

The peasant wench Smeraldina would forsake the love of birdcatcher Truffaldino to seduce the King into selecting her and, at the same time, raise the station of her brother, Brighella, valet to the King. But it is fragile Angela, daughter of Pantalone, who truly loves the King and who he finally accepts as his bride.

In rage, Tartaglia plots the King's death. He charms the King into revealing his secret of transferring his soul into the body of an animal and, on a hunting trip, goads him into exhibiting his magical prowess. Once the King's soul is inside the body of a noble stag, the traitorous Tartaglia kills the stag and transfers his own soul into the body of the King.

But, do not fret! With the assistance of the magician Durandarte, all ends "happily ever after!"

While naive and childlike on the surface, "The King Stag" is spiced with satirical overtones and sophisticated ideas. It is an exploration of wisdom and dreams, the real and unreal, the ancient and modern, a fusion of the Oriental, Greek and Roman theatre, even morality plays.

Kudos to Thomas Derrah as The King, Ben Halley, Jr. as Tartaglia, Priscilla Smith as Smeraldina, Elizabeth Norment as Clarice, and Diane D'Aquila, absolutely luminous, as Angela. Impressive is the original music by Elliot Goldenthal and the work of percussionist Russ Gold.

"The King Stag" will run through Sept. 29 at the Lorb Drama Center, 64 Brattle St., Cambridge (547-8300).

Trinity Rep Opens Season

Adrian Hall, Artistic Director of Trinity Repertory Company in Providence, RI, has announced the scheduled plays and works under consideration for 1985-86. Trinity's 22nd season. All eight productions in the subscription series will be by American playwrights, and have been tabbed "Americana Revisited."

The season opens this week in the downstairs theatre with Christopher Durang's new comedy, "The Marriage of Bette and Boo." Durang's sharp humor has never been more exacting as he aims his comic and satiric sights at the American family. This will mark the play's first production with a resident professional company. Mr. Hall will direct.

The upstairs theatre series will begin with "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," by Tennessee Williams. One of his great efforts, the play is a dramatic and emotionally powerful look at one family's attempt to know itself. The show opens on Oct. 11. Richard Kneeland will play Big Daddy, and Margo Skinner will return to Trinity after a two-year absence to play Maggie.

The next production, in the Clockwise, from top: Anne Scurria and Richard Kavanaugh perform in Not By Bed Alone; Six Characters In Search Of An Author includes Diane D'Aquila, Alax Mixon, Nicole Shaloub, Priscilla Smith, Seth Goldstein and Jack Stehlin; King Stag featuring Elizabeth Norment and Thomas Derrah continues through Sept. 29; Andre Gavrilo performs at Symphony Hall at 3 p.m. Oct. 13.

Season Gears Up out New England

downstairs theatre, is Adrian Hall's world premiere adaptation of Richard Wright's novel, "Native Son." This provocative play explores the struggle of black Americans through the eyes of Bigger Thomas, a black Chicago teenager who lives in the slums. "Native Son" begins on Nov. 22 and continues Trinity Rep's world-famous reputation as a developer of new and exciting dramatic works. Adrian Hall will direct.

In the upstairs theatre for the holiday season will be Adrian Hall and Richard Cumming's lively musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." This ninth annual production will begin on Nov. 26. As in past years, subscribers will have the first opportunity to purchase tickets to this guaranteed sellout event.

The season's final production will be Eugene O'Neill's masterpiece, "Long Day's Journey into Night," which opens April 18. One of the world's great dramatic works, the play explores the failed dreams and bitter regrets of the four members of the Tyrone family. Painfully drawn from O'Neill's own life, the drama is a strong yet loving look at the need for affection and the roots of sadness and disillusionment.

To be staged in the upstairs theatre, this mounting will mark the return of Katherine Helmond, one of the first members of Trinity Rep, who later starred in the TV series, "Soap." Miss Helmond will play Mary, Richard Kneeland will portray James, and Richard Jenkins will essay the role of Jamie.

Mr. Hall will direct the O'Neill classic on the 20th anniversary of its first production at Trinity Rep, in which Richard Kneeland played Edmund, the younger son, and Katherine Helmond played Cathleen, the Tyrone's maid.

Also scheduled for the 1985-86 season is "Life and Limb," a new play by Keith Reddin, which looks at the life of a veteran with daring imagination, humor, and sensitivity.

Under consideration are S.J. Perelman's "The Beauty Part," a delicious send-up of everything from artists to private detectives, and "Once in a Lifetime," by Kaufman and Hart, a brilliantly funny satire on Hollywood and movie-making.

Subscriptions for either a four-play series in the upstairs or downstairs theatres, or to the complete eight-play series are on sale now. Saturday matinee performances are already sold out. For further information call (401) 351-4242 or visit the box office at 201 Washington St., Providence, RI.

'Leave It To Jane' Opens

"Leave It To Jane," the musical classic by the celebrated trio of Jerome Kern, Guy Bolton and P.G. Wodehouse, opens Wednesday, Oct. 2 at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, CT (through Dec. 8).

With this recreation of the sparkling musical comedy, set in the 'teens on a midwestern college campus, Goodspeed pays tribute to the legendary Kern in this 100th anniversary year of his birth.

The team of composer Kern and book and lyric writers Bolton and Wodehouse authored several musicals for New York's Princess Theatre, including "Oh, Boy!" and "Oh, Lady! Lady!!," both of which have been recreated at Goodspeed.

Their "Zip! Goes A Million" also played at the Princess Theatre, while "Leave It To Jane" opened at the Longacre Theatre in 1917. Kern and Bolton also collaborated on "Very Good Eddie" which was recreated at Goodspeed in 1975 and went on to successful runs on Broadway and in London.

Kern's score for "Leave It To Jane" includes "Wait Till Tomorrow," "The Siren's Song," "Cleopaterer," "The Crickets Are Calling" and a medley of college songs capturing the spirit of youthful energy and romance.

Directing the musical is Thomas Gruenewald, who was at the helm of Kern's "Oh, Boy!" at Goodspeed in 1983. Last season he mounted "Take Me Along" at Goodspeed, at the Kennedy Center and on Broadway. He directed Tom Stoppard's "On The Razzle" for Boston's Huntington Theatre Company and the original off-Broadway production of "Man With a Load of Mischief" as well as many operas and musicals around the country.

Choreographer for "Leave It To Jane" is Walter Painter, winner of an Emmy Award for his choreography of a Lynda Carter TV special and three-time Emmy nominee for his choreography of the Academy Award shows.

Musical Director is Lynn Crigler. Sets are designed by James Leonard Joy, lighting by Craig Miller and costumes by John Sullivan.

Playing return engagements at Goodspeed are Robert Nichols, who played the father in "Take Me Along," Gary Gage who appeared in "Shenandoah," David Staller who was the polo-playing man-about-town in "Oh, Boy!," and Faith Prince, the chanteuse who stopped the show in "The Great American Backstage Musical." Rebecca Luker will play the title role.

Also appearing are Tom Batten, Nick Corley, Jack Doyle, Patrick McCord, Dale O'Brien, Michael O'Steen, Iris Revson and Michael Waldron and an ensemble of actors.

For reservations call the box office (203) 873-8668. Performance times are Tuesday through Friday evenings at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 5 and 9 p.m., Sundays at 5 p.m. and Wednesday matinees at 2:30 p.m.

Debut of Pianist Andrei Gavrilov

Andrei Gavrilov, the heralded Soviet-born pianist, will make his Boston debut in a Symphony Hall recital at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 13 in the Wang Celebrity Series. He replaces Ivo Pogorelich, who was forced to cancel his American tour because of a recurring illness. Pogorelich's concert was to have taken place on Oct. 6.

At age twenty-nine, Andrei Gavrilov is considered one of his generation's most brilliant pianists. In 1973, he became the youngest first prize winner ever in Moscow's prestigious Tchaikovsky Competition.

Since then, he has enjoyed an international career. Last spring, Gavrilov made his American debut in Carnegie Hall to rave reviews. In March, Gavrilov was granted permission to remain in Great Britain until Feb., 1986 — accompanied by an unprecedented Soviet blessing.

Mr. Gavrilov's program will include: Scriabin, 24 Preludes; Sonata No. 4 in F sharp Major, Op. 30; Rachmaninov, 4 Preludes; B flat Major, Op. 23, no. 2, F sharp minor, Op. 23, no. 1, G sharp minor, Op. 32, no. 12, G minor, Op. 23, no. 5; Etude-Tableaux in F sharp minor, Op. 39, no. 3, 2 Moments Musicaux.

Tickets for Mr. Gavrilov's recital are on sale at the Symphony Hall box office 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. For information, call Symphony Hall at 266-1492. Tickets may be charged by phone by calling Concertcharge at 497-1118.

Polyarts sponsors Yuppie Prom

A first of its kind, tongue-in-cheek look at Yuppiedom takes place when Polyarts, a Cambridge-based multi-educational non-profit arts project, presents the Yuppie Prom at 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19, at the Sheraton Commander Hotel, Cambridge.

Highlighted by a Yuppie fashion show, Yuppie food, a band playing 50's and 60's sounds, the Yuppie Prom, according to Polyarts' director J. Robert Gordon "is not meant to cast Yuppie guilt or shame or to bury a lifestyle, but to point out that in considering the role of the urban professional, there is more to life than Gucci shoes and condominiums."

The prom is a fund-raiser for Polyarts' N.E. Writers' Foundation. Yuppies interested in attending are asked to "dig out" their 50's and 60's prom outfits. Tax-deductible tickets ($25 per person, $40 per couple) are available now by calling (617) 864-2300 or by writing Polyarts, P.O. Box 1985, Cambridge, MA 02139.

ART's Six Characters Electrifying

"Six Characters (may be) In Search Of An Author" but they certainly won't have to seek out an audience. The American Repertory Company's electrifying production of Luigi Pirandello's classic easily ranks alongside the best drama to be seen on any stage this season.

The non-stop 90-minute thriller (in repertory through Oct. 2) is brilliantly enhanced by Artistic Director Robert Brustein's new adaptation and adroit staging, stunning stage effects by Michael H. Yeagan (a la David Copperfield and Doug Henning), dramatic lighting by Jennifer Tipton, and the opulent talents of the cast — and the cast within the cast — resulting in an ensemble production that truly soars.

The build in the action (not unlike "Deathtrap") is dazzling and spell-binding, and the climax, devastating! Rarely is one privileged to witness theatre so mesmerizing.

The drama opens leisurely enough, with the casual arrival of ART company members for a rehearsal of "Sganarelle." The atmosphere is loose, authentic, typical, natural. Personalities of the stage manager, his assistant, the senior actor and four cast members are quickly established as they dilly-dally with topical chit-chat and humorous jabs while awaiting the arrival of a tardy actor and dominated by the impatience of the senior actor to commence rehearsal.

The rehearsal finally starts — raggedly — only to have the assistant stage manager announce that there are a strange group of people wandering around the theatre, claiming to be actors. Suddenly, from behind the scrim, an opening appears in the rear depths of the stage and there, backed by blinding white light and posed in a freeze, yet swaying in unison, is a family in black, in mourning. The Family Theatrically, it is stunning.

They are like six characters from another world or another life; and, frankly, they are characters rejected by their author before their drama was fully written have assumed real life. Is it illusion or reality...or a world of mirrors? The Father explains, "Dramatic characters continue to exist on some level even after a play is over...trapped in eternal reality!" And the six eventually play out their roles (a play within a play) to its terrifying climax.

There's A Reason Choosing The Right Home Equity Line Of Credit Is One Of The Most Important Decisions You'll Ever Make.

It's Based On One Of The Most Important Things You'll Ever Own.

If you're like most homeowners, you've spent years building up equity in your home.

No doubt, you have a lot invested in it, both financially and emotionally. And you've realized your equity can be a powerful source of credit for important opportunities like home improvements or your child's college education.

But it is an important decision. And it deserves a lot of thought.

At Shawmut, we believe that choosing the right home equity line of credit is a matter of choosing the right bank. That's why we want you to know the differences between our Equity Credit Line and other home equity lines of credit. Because these differences can be substantial.

For instance, some other banks are willing to make up to $100,000 in credit available to you, depending on the equity in your home.

Which sounds good until you discover that, with Shawmut's Equity Credit Line, you could qualify for even more.

Something else you may give up with other banks is payment flexibility. With a Shawmut Equity Credit Line, you can choose to pay only the interest on your outstanding balance for up to 5 years.* And that can make things much easier on your cash flow.

You get separate checks for your Shawmut Equity Credit Line, so there's no chance of fouling up your regular checking account records.

Plus, you can get a Shawmut Equity Credit Line even if you don't have any other accounts at Shawmut. That's not true with some banks.

Why, at Shawmut, you can even get special credit life insurance coverage on your Equity Credit Line.

As for our interest rate, it is very competitive. Our rate is variable and is set monthly at just 1½% above the prime rate published in The Wall Street Journal on our last business day of the month.

You see, there are some big differences when it comes to home equity lines of credit. So think about it carefully. Then, come in and talk to us.

Because we've been making Equity Credit Lines available to homeowners for some time now, we're committed to this business and we understand how important your decision is. And we have the people and the experience to help you make the right one.

To apply for your Shawmut Equity Credit Line, or for more information, come in and visit us at any Shawmut office, call 1-800-SHAWMUT, or send in our coupon.

ENERGY SAVERS...

Insulation Can Help To Lower Cost

It's a common fact that home heating and cooling costs have skyrocketed in recent years, and according to most energy experts, much higher costs are a predictable fact. It's also a fact that upgrading of insulation levels can help keep these costs down.

To determine the amount of annual energy cost savings that could be realized by increased levels of fiber glass insulation, CertainTeed Home Institute, Valley Forge, PA, recently conducted a research project using a computer program specially developed for this type of project.

It calculates the annual cost to heat and cool a hypothetical home in one of the hottest cities in the summer and coldest in the winter—St. Louis, Missouri.

In theory, a 1,200 sq. ft. home was built in 1960 with no insulation in the walls. The attic was insulated with R-11 fiber glass insulation. (The higher the R-value, the greater the insulation power; ask your seller for the Fact Sheet on R-Values.)

Projected costs (using rates obtained from local utility companies) to heat with gas and cool with electricity were combined to determine the home's total space energy cost for selected years from 1960 to 1990.

In 1960, the total space energy costs in the home were calculated to be approximately $233 annually. This figure jumped to $639 in 1980. Today, the annual energy cost to heat and cool the hypothetical home in St. Louis is $891. (By 1990, this figure is expected to reach $1,382.)

If this home is upgraded with additional insulation, such as CertainTeed's Insul-Safe™ II, a superior blown-in fiber glass, to provide an R-Value of R-14 in the walls and R-30 in the attic, today's annual energy cost could drop down to $658, a $233 decrease per year.

As gas and electricity costs continue to rise, the savings in total space energy dollars will grow even more. By 1990's projected figure of $1,382, the savings could be as high as $377 per year.

Recommended levels of insulation have climbed higher, through the years, as cost savings have become more apparent. Total space energy figures were also determined for an identical 1,200 sq. ft. St. Louis home built today with fiber glass insulation with an R-value of R-19 in the walls and an R-30 in the attic.

These are the recommended levels featured in The Energy Saving House at the 1984 World's Fair which features CertainTeed fiber glass insulation.

The total space energy cost to heat and cool the home drops from $891 to $572, an energy savings of $319 per year.

By 1990, the total space energy cost drops from $1,382 to $904, an energy saving of $478 per year.

"Proper insulation can help you reduce your energy bills in both summer and winter," said Joseph Kimpfen, technical director of the CertainTeed Home Institute.

"Exact savings will vary," he continued, "depending upon where you live in the country and the thermal condition of your home, but additional insulation provides significant savings for the homeowner."

Energy Crisis May Be Here To Stay For Homeowners

Some 11 years after the Arab oil embargo shocked the nation into taking drastic new measures to conserve energy, homeowners can ill afford to relax their vigil against energy waste.

Gone are the long lines at the gasoline pump and the fuel shortages that plagued the nation through much of the '70s. But apparently here to stay are rising fuel prices that again threaten to push winter heating and summer cooling bills right through the roof.

Recent studies reveal that energy usage will continue to rise sharply over the next 10 years, with electricity and natural gas setting the pace. And as electric energy consumption continues to soar, homeowners can expect continued upward pressure on electric rates as well.

In fact, one report projects the cost of electricity in 1985 at $25.78 per million Btu, compared with $9.84 for the comparable heating value of oil and $7.81 for natural gas. (Electricity currently costs approximately $21 per million Btu.)

Gas utilities have also been preparing customers nationwide for the same kind of price shock experienced previously by oil and electricity customers.

The deregulation of natural gas prices has been cited by utilities as the cause of the sharp price hikes to homeowners. About 65 percent of all homes are now heated by natural gas, including a substantial number that converted from oil to gas heat during the past 10 years.

Then, too, doubts about future availability of foreign oil supplies, due, in part, to the continuing Persian Gulf war, have also re-shaped current attitudes toward residential energy conservation.

Today, before a homeowner invests $5,000 to enlarge or add a new family room, he's as likely to consider the energy cost factors as much as the aesthetic benefits, says Jack McDermott, vice president-marketing for windows at CertainTeed Corporation.

Much of the homeowner's concern for energy conservation is now focused on windows since they traditionally have been the leading contributor to residential heat loss.

McDermott notes that of the five million homeowners who will be adding or replacing windows this year, a vast majority will be looking for an aesthetically pleasing product that is designed for maximum energy efficiency, one that will yield at least a partial return on his investment in the form of reduced energy costs.

Towards that end, CertainTeed recently introduced new solid vinyl bay and bow windows that are custom-fabricated with head and seat for easy installation into almost any size opening.

Geared to both the new construction and remodeling markets, the double-glazed entries provide an exceptionally tight fit, are virtually maintenance-free, and can substantially enhance the appearance and value of any home.

The new bay window can be designed with either a 30- or 45-degree projection. The bay's center segment is available in either a picture or double-hung design, while side units feature a dead-light or double-hung system.

The bow windows offer three or more segments to preserve a home's original architectural lines or to satisfy a variety of aesthetic preferences.

All exterior portions of the bay and bow units are pre-trimmed in color-coordinated vinyl stock, eliminating the need for filler or brick moulding.

For more information on the new bay and bow windows or CertainTeed's complete line of vinyl windows, write to CertainTeed Corporation, Vinyl Products Division, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.

Expert Warns To Get Ready For Winter

Batten down the hatches! Seal the windows! Stack the firewood! And, most importantly, prepare the vehicles!

Brace yourself. Winter is on the way, and everything in its vengeful path must be ready to face the foe, when it bombards us with its powerful ammunition — sleet, snow and ice.

"One of the most defenseless victims of winter is your automobile, dependent upon you to protect its vulnerable under-sides, including the exhaust, brake and suspension systems," says Walt Alley, Director of Training at the Midas Institute of Technology (M.I.T.) in Palatine, Illinois.

"Preparations on these and other car systems will ensure that you, your passengers and your car make it safely and smoothly through the war against winter."

Where to begin

Start your winter preparation with a complete under-the-car safety inspection of your auto's vital systems and a tune-up. Here are a few of the primary points from Walt Alley's fall car care and safety checklist.

Brakes — The brakes should be inspected just prior to the winter season. If you hear a scrunch or squeal, notice the car pulling to one side while stopping, or have an unusually hard or soft brake pedal, your brakes should be checked.

Exhaust — Severe weather, rocks and potholes can damage the exhaust system.

A hole in the muffler or exhaust pipes can let engine exhaust fumes seep into the car. This creates a danger when driving with the windows closed against the cold winter air. Have your exhaust system inspected for possible leaks.

Shocks — A hard jolt from a winter pothole will attempt to throw your car out of control. Worn shock absorbers may reduce the ability to control your car. Ineffective shocks may also cause excessive body roll on curves.

Springs — If you notice that the tail end of your car sits lower than the front, you may have weak or broken rear springs. Weak springs can cause vehicle instability and result in loss of control, especially on slippery roads.

Your under-the-car suspension specialist can measure your car's height to determine the condition of your springs.

Struts — Many foreign cars and most new American models have strut suspension systems instead of the traditional shock absorbers.

Struts require basically the same care as shocks, but there is a clue to detecting strut wear: Your tires will wear unevenly because of poor alignment caused by faulty struts.

Oil and Lube — Cold temperatures thicken lubricating oil, making it hard for engine parts to move. Change the oil to the proper winter weight and replace the oil filter.

A fall lube will help to protect the suspension and steering parts from the ravages of snow, slush and salt.

Sensible precautions

"After the car has been fully inspected and prepared for winter, do your own safety maintenance inspection," Alley suggests. "Even if you don't know a lot about cars, you can still take several simple precautions."

- Make sure wipers are in good operating order and the windshield wiper fluid tank is full.

- Check the heater and defroster for proper functioning.

- Examine all fan belts, hoses and clamps for signs of wear and potential breaks. Squeaking noises from under the hood can mean your power steering pump belt is worn or needs adjustment.

DON'T LEAVE YOUR CAR OUT IN THE COLD when preparing your home for the onslaught of winter.

- Inspect all lights. If you turn on your lights and hear a squeak from under the hood, your alternator belt is worn or needs adjustment.

- Check tire pressure and tire treads for uneven wear and make sure the spare is inflated and in good condition. Low tire pressure wastes gasoline and causes premature tire wear.

Three Senses Can Spot Car Trouble

One of the most agonizing noises a car owner may ever hear is the scraping or grinding sound of an automatic transmission that's low on oil. Even in a well insulated car, the metal-to-metal sound is awesome.

According to the Car Care Council, at the first indication of such a noise, the transmission fluid should be checked. If the level is low, adding fluid may correct the trouble.

If the noise persists, the culprit could be a clogged transmission filter which is preventing fluid from reaching the pump. As a result, the transmission is starved of fluid, with eventual destruction of the pump and other components. This can add up to a very large repair bill.

The above mentioned horror story should never happen, says the Car Care Council, if automatic transmission fluid is checked regularly (at least as often as the oil is changed) and if fluid and filter are replaced periodically.

The Council recommends checking fluid only when the vehicle has been run for a few miles after the engine has reached normal operating temperature.

Check to see if it is discolored, rather than pink or red, which is normal. When fluid has turned brown, this is an indication that it has been burned. Note also if it smells burned. Burned fluid should be drained and replaced, along with the filter.

The Council also notes that the tip of the dip stick should be cool enough to touch; an automatic transmission should operate at 150-200°F. Severe service driving, which can overheat the transmission, may call for the addition of a transmission cooler. Fluid life is greatly extended when it is kept within normal operating temperature.

Most types of "severe" service driving require most frequent fluid and filter changes, as well as other periodic services.

This type of service is described as follows:

- Frequent idling for long periods of time, such as stop-and-go driving in heavy traffic.
- Sustained highway driving in hot weather.

Women Suffer Agoraphobia More

makes them subject to depression. Many phobias begin in young adulthood, with most starting around age 24.

"If you tell yourself that you're only comfortable when everyone likes you, well, that's kind of fragile," says Fisher.

"It's nice to be liked. We all want to be liked. But you can't live that way unless you avoid all kinds of situations."

Women are more often victims of agoraphobia than men.

"It's not totally clear why, but one theory suggests the metaphor that women are trapped in their own lives," says Goldman.

Women can more often afford to become housebound.

"They are at home raising the children. It's easier for them to stay at home and avoid situations," says Fisher. "This makes their fears worse. They are focused more on the fear of panic."

Something triggers the first anxiety attack.

Both Goldman and Fisher identify a major life conflict or change as the catalyst.

"Perfect people" want to keep things in control," says Fisher. "They feel they're losing it when the anxiety starts - when something, such as the death of a loved one, happens which they cannot control."

"When anxiety comes in a larger measure than they are used to, it triggers other feelings."

Fisher includes a fear of strong feelings in his definition of agoraphobia. Phobic people have not let themselves feel anger, sorrow, even heights of joy. Emotions are bad.

A phobic person, says Fisher, might tell himself, "If I start to cry, I'll never stop."

A conflict, such as a job problem, may be resolved through a meeting with the boss or even a new position. The agoraphobic, however, cannot let go. He is now so sensitized to the body's reactions to the conflict that he starts to worry about everything.

Fisher advocates two focuses for treatment of agoraphobia. The phobic person is first taught how to live with his anxiety.

"It's part of life," says Fisher. They can learn to control the feelings of being frightened of their anxiety.

"They need to also learn to live with their 'humanness' - to become more comfortable with themselves."

"It's okay to make mistakes, to feel anger or sorrow, to not be liked by everyone. You don't have to be responsible for everyone and everything."

Fisher sees serious implications in the lifestyles of children of Yuppies.

"They are taught to strive, to achieve, to be perfect. There's pressure on youngsters in sports.

They need to learn that it's okay to strike out."

The most predominant approaches to the treatment of phobia involve behavior therapy and the supervised use of medication. The behavioral technique used often is "supported exposure" bringing the person repeatedly into the phobic situation so the fear of what might happen becomes manageable.

"In the case of simple phobia, for example, the fear of cats, a systematic desensitization is used," says Goldman.

"We teach the body to relax. You expose yourself to a mental picture of a cat. Relax in the mental presence of the cat. Slowly the phobic stimulus is introduced once you're relaxed. It's done in a graded way. Little bits at a time."

The support and understanding of friends and family is also important. Part of the treatment process involves educating those close to the phobic person about the nature of phobias.

Self-help groups can extend the support network for recovering phobics.

The Greater Boston Phobia Society is a group of volunteer laymen and professional who care about the suffering of phobics.

"We want to bring phobia out of the closet," says Goldman. "Now everyone is informed about alcoholism. It is a disease. We want the same thing to happen here."

The Greater Boston Phobia Society acts as a clearinghouse for information and for referrals on professional help, including those with sliding fees.

Information on self-help groups is also available.

CAR CARE

Quiz Spotlights Change

Automobiles have come a long way in the last few years, and the field of automobile mechanics has become increasingly technical.

There are a few around who still think working on a car is a piece of cake, but they probably haven't tackled one of the new ones. Today's car is an ideal combination of computerized components, hydraulics, electronics, aerodynamics and internal combustion.

The automotive technician has a real challenge to keep abreast of constantly updated information if he is to stay in business.

Some "easy" questions

For those who thought they knew a pinion from a crush sleeve, here are a few of what the Car Care Council feels are the easiest questions from a certification refresher test of the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (A.S.E.).

1. All of these statements are true about ignition contact point operation except:

- a) the dwell begins when the points close,
- b) the dwell decreases when the point gap increases,
- c) the ignition timing changes when the point gap changes,
- d) the spark plug fires when the points close.

2. Mechanic A says too much clutch pedal free play may cause the clutch to drag when disengaged. Mechanic B says not enough clutch pedal free play may cause the clutch to slip when engaged. Who is right?

- a) A only
- b) B only
- c) Both A and B
- d) Neither A nor B.

3. The steering wheel of a car is not centered when the car is traveling straight down the road. Mechanic A says that the steering wheel can be removed from the steering column and its position changed. Mechanic B says that the steering wheel can be turned to center and the wheel alignment readjusted. Who is right?

- a) A only
- b) B only
- c) Both A and B
- d) Neither A nor B.

4. Mechanic A says the automatic choke is opened by manifold vacuum. Mechanic B says the automatic choke is closed by spring force. Who is right?

- a) A only
- b) B only
- c) Both A and B
- d) Neither A nor B.

How did you do?

Stumped? It's not surprising. Auto mechanics is a wide and varied field and only the most informed layperson can keep up with the changes. Certified mechanics have kept up and have passed the tests to prove it.

The answers are: 1. d, 2. c, 3. b, 4. c.

Lindsay, Toner Tell Of Fear's Feelings

Lindsay admits to enormous physical and mental pressure when her symptoms started. She was working 12-hour days in an urgent quest for career success. She was also living away from home, and alone.

Hoping to make herself feel less anxious, Lindsay drove home every weekend, adding a brutal 10-hour round trip drive to her week.

"Now I realize what those trips home did to me," says Lindsay.

"The bad feelings I was having mirrored my childhood. My father had left when I was two years old. My mother went back to school then — high school, then college. Every Sunday night, my mother left to go back to school. Now I was leaving every Sunday night."

As a five-year-old, Lindsay remembers feelings of desertion. People left her. She felt she had to become perfect to control the situation around her.

"I told myself, 'If I'm good, people will stay and I'll be fine. If I'm bad, they'll leave me.'"

She was essentially raised by her grandmother who herself experienced some form of phobia.

"For a span of 20 to 30 years, she would not leave the house," says Lindsay. "Her doctor told her that she was having a nervous breakdown."

"There's no such thing as a nervous breakdown. How can nerves break down?"

Lindsay attributes her childhood conditioning as well as the role model presented by her grandmother as possible factors in her later phobic attacks.

"Do you mimic behavior or is it hereditary?" asks Lindsay. "Two people in the same family with similar problems? Perhaps there is a physiological pre-disposition."

Lindsay took a month leave of absence after only eight months in the new position. She saw her hometown general practitioner. He told her that she was having "anxiety trouble" and sent her to the mental ward at the community hospital.

"I remember I was wearing a pin-striped shirt. The patients there surrounded me and kept asking me if I were their new doctor."

"Wow, I realized then that there was a big distance between them and me."

After different referrals, Lindsay found a three-prong treatment to her agoraphobia. She was also extremely determined to become better.

"I was fighting a monster inside myself," says Lindsay. "It's really you but you visualize a monster."

"My anxiety was generalized. It didn't matter where I was. I became terrified, I stopped thinking. I only wanted to get out, away, back to safety — to homebase."

Toner's case bears similarities yet she was able to continue for over 10 years.

"I was 23 when my son was born. I was glad to have an excuse to stay home," says Toner. "I had been working but my palpitations and my attacks were getting worse. Sometimes it was so bad, I'd have to leave work."

"Staying at home, in a way, made it worse. We bought a house, moved to the suburbs. When anything social happened, I would get attacks. Little by little, my world shrunk."

"I gave up driving for 10 years. I remember driving with my baby in the car and I had an attack. It's a physical reaction. I wanted to pass out or die. I was terrified."

"My God," I thought, "what if I'm in an accident and kill this baby? That was it. I somehow got home but wouldn't drive after that day."

"The car sat outside for two years. My husband used to say I should use it as a planter."

"My whole life revolved around avoiding situations."

"When my kids were sick, I could only take them to the pediatrician if my husband went with me. I made sure I had the first appointment of the day so I wouldn't have to wait. I'd want to go home fast."

"I could only go out in the car with my husband. I loved it when the fast food restaurants started having pick-up windows. We could go out to eat and yet I wouldn't have to go into a restaurant!"

"I used to order all our clothes from catalogs. I'd just order everything by mail. Now, isn't it silly, I don't even look at those catalogs anymore."

Toner recalls the role of her husband throughout her bad 10 years.

"He'd always say, 'Don't worry, Pat.' He was very supportive. When the children had events at school, he'd go. I couldn't."

"I'd feel guilty about that but I'd always bake or do something so they knew I was involved."

In addition to palpitations and spontaneous panic attacks, Toner experienced a specific writing phobia.

"I couldn't sign my name — my hand would shake so much. That lasted about six years. Now I can and my husband says he wishes I won't because I'm using all the charge accounts again!"

Toner's sense of humor does not mask the isolation, helplessness, guilt and terror she felt for so long.

"I'm recovered now, but not cured. Every day I'm practicing. I can't ever forget what it was like. You feel like you're not part of the world. I learned to live around life."

Toner and Lindsay have both been in some form of therapy for the past six years. Toner especially notes the role of a self-help group in her recovery.

She went to her first group meeting several years ago in Newton. She was amazed by what she saw.

"These people can't have what I have," Toner said. "They look normal!"

At this meeting, she met Joan Leone. Together they launched a self-help group at Mt. Auburn Hospital in Cambridge. This group has been meeting regularly for the past six years. To Toner's knowledge, it is the first self-help group in the area established specifically for agoraphobics.

"It helps so much to know that you're not alone," says Toner.

Lindsay will complete a masters degree in psychology at Harvard University in June. She intends to continue in a doctoral program. She works 40 hours and more a week in a position in Human Resources Management and has a counseling business on the side.

"I'm a pretty busy lady," Lindsay says. "I can't afford to have anxiety stop me now in the middle of my life."

Toner, in addition to her family and the management of the self-help group in Cambridge, works as a para-professional in aiding and counseling phobic people.

Both women are members of the Board of Directors of the Greater Boston Phobia Society.

IMPORTANCE OF COMPARABLES

When you decide to sell your home, nothing, but nothing, is more important than the sales price you put on it. If you select the right agent, he or she will help you come up with the best marketing price. This is not done by looking into a crystal ball or consulting with a guru. The most important factor to consider is the price of comparable sales in your immediate area. These are sales which have already been completed of homes as nearly like yours as possible.

The homes selected for comparison should be geographically near, for no one factor determines value more surely than location. The sales should also be near in time, for five-year-old sales have almost no meaning in today's volatile financial market. Also, the homes should be similar in style, size, and condition as your property — the closer the better.

Don't pay much attention to neighborhood scuttlebut about selling prices. Sellers often exaggerate the amount received, and buyers often minimize the amount paid.

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with 38 call rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and a 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over - from Maine to Rhode Island to New York - but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Horjerson at 1-835-3192 for further information. 11/3/TF

ST. JUDE, thank you for favors granted. MP 9:12/9/26

Prayer To Obtain A Special Favor

REMEMBER, O glorious and Good Saint Anne, that never was it known that anyone who fled to thy protection, implored thy help and sought thy intercession was left unaided. Inspired by this confidence, behold, I cast myself at thy feet, and beseech thee, by thy great prerogative of being the Mother of the Queen of Heaven and the Grandmother of Jesus, come to my aid with thy powerful intercession and obtain from Almighty God through the ever Blessed Virgin Mary, this special favor which I beg of thee. Cease not to intercede for me until, through Divine Mercy, my request may be granted. Above all, obtain for me the grace one day to behold my God face to face and with thee and Mary and all the Saints praise and bless Him through all eternity. Amen. 9:19/10/3

THANK YOU Saint Jude for prayers answered. S.F. 9:19/10/3

THANK YOU St. Jude for favors granted to me 9:26/10/10

MAY THE sacred heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved, and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. Say this prayer nine times daily for eight days and your prayers will be answered. This prayer has never failed, but publication must be promised. My prayers have been answered. M.D.M. 9:26/10/10

First Liquor Store Opening Is In Sight

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Winchester's first liquor store will open shortly before Thanksgiving, says Nicholas Buonpane, who Selectmen unanimously awarded the town's one license last Thursday night.

Selectmen chose Buonpane's over Sean Galvin after a month-long selection process.

Selectmen Judith Muggia, Mark Lombardi and Wade Welch voted for Buonpane, while member Alan MacDonald abstained from voting, saying "Buonpane is not my first choice."

Buonpane, a 16-year Winchester resident, will open Winchester Wine and Spirits in six to eight weeks, at the Albani Building, 600 Main St.

MacDonald favored Galvin. "I liked Galvin's application," he said. MacDonald also said he received several calls from residents who liked Giles Food market in Medford.

owned by Galvin.

After the three selectmen chose Buonpane, MacDonald made a motion that the vote be unanimous. "I wanted to show that I supported the nominee," he said.

"Any of the four finalists would do a very good job," said MacDonald. Proposals from Stuart Bowen and William Cusi failed to receive a single vote from Selectmen.

All four applicants gave 30-minute presentations to Selectmen last Monday night on the type of liquor store, names of employees, and an outline of the floor plan. Muggia said Buonpane's proposal was a "non-presentation."

"I was very surprised and upset," Muggia said.

Selectmen asked Buonpane to return on Thursday night with a more detailed presentation.

Muggia said Buonpane's idea of running the store as a "neighborhood package store" and not a high class establishment appealed to her.

The vast majority of calls I got from residents were about not wanting a high class place," said Muggia.

Muggia visited Buonpane's store, Berkman's Liquor Mart, in Somerville. "I was impressed with way he ran the store. He runs a tight ship."

Muggia's main concern about Galvin was his age. "I'm not sure he has the maturity and the clout to handle older employees if he is going to be the owner," she said.

Galvin is 22 years old and his family has been in the liquor business for more than 40 years.

MacDonald said, "Age was not a factor for me. It would be a chance to grow with the liquor store and the town of Winchester."

Buonpane told Selectmen Thursday night said he would sell the Somerville store and run only the store in Winchester if he was awarded the license.

Buonpane must pay $1,000 to the town for the permit. The license is only good for one year, which means the $1,000 fee must be paid again in January, upon approval of the Selectmen.

Store To Have 'Atmosphere Of Old New England'

Winchester Wine and Spirits, the town's first liquor store, will have "the type of atmosphere like the Old New England," says its owner, Nicholas Buonpane.

"We hope to have the type of selection Winchester residents will like," he said.

Buonpane said he plans to sell the "finest spirits and wines, all domestic beers and most imported beers."

He has been a Winchester resident for the past 16 years and was owner of the Berkman Liquor Mart Inc., 285 Beacon St., Somerville since 1969.

He plans to run a family business, with his wife Rose, his son, David B. Buonpane of Billerica as General Manager, and his son-in-law Steven Tibbets of Leominster as assistant manager.

"I plan to be in the store 30 or 40 hours a week," said Buonpane.

Selectmen's Docket Manager: Clear Your Own Debris

By AARON ZITNER

Residents recovering from Hurricane Gloria must take responsibility for clearing trees and debris from their own property rather than expect town crews to haul it away. Town Manager W. Chad Maurer said at Monday's Selectmen's meeting.

"Public works crews only picked up tree debris from trees that fell within the public ways. Debris falling on private property is the responsibility of the property owner to bring to the transfer station," Maurer wrote in a report on hurricane clean-up.

The majority of property owners cooperated with this procedure. However, some persisted to store their debris at curbside in hopes that the town will pick it up.

"It will be difficult for the public works to pick up residential debris while they still have a major task in front of them in the parks, school grounds and cemetery," the manager wrote.

In related news, Selectmen and two residents Monday criticized Boston Edison's handling of Winchester's electrical problems after the storm.

"I come from a section of Precinct 5 well into its fourth day without power," David Mortensen told Selectmen.

"I drove around my neighborhood before I came here and there is not a single Boston Edison truck in sight. There were no trucks this morning," Mortensen said.

He added he was not at the meeting to attack the bears but to provide ammunition to the board's actions.

Mortensen found a sympathetic ear in board chairman Michael Saraco.

Saraco criticized the utility for putting forward too much public relations and not enough technical assistance.

He said Boston Edison told him they had 12 crews available to service communities, but often got differing figures on how many of those crews, if any, were in town.

The board did find kind words for town workers. Saraco listed Eric Gallagher of the Tree Dept., communications man John Dooley with the Fire Dept. and DPW Director Dominic Serratore as "outstanding people."

In other Selectmen news, the board:

• ACCEPTED the resignation of Selectman Mark Lombardi to the Citizen's Advisory Committee to the Winchester Housing Authority.

• APPOINTED two residents to terms on the Arts Lottery Council: Martin Hitchcock of Wildwood St. and Moira Linehan Ounjian of Chesterford Rd.

Ounjian told the board, "I am a poet. I have an interest in arts in general, saw the position advertised in The Star and thought it would be an opportunity to serve the Winchester community."

She has been an English teacher and has experience in drama and poetry. Ounjian currently works for a utility company, "but not Boston Edison," she said.

Martinson said he is "a sort of fanatic about music."

"Winchester is one of the towns with a problem supporting its own musical activities. I am interested in fostering greater musical awareness in this town," he said.

Martinson, chairman of the Winchester Music Society, noted that residents often join orchestras or choirs in other towns if they want to perform.

INITIATED a subcommittee on private ways to consider drawing a warrant article that would allow the town to repair private roads without having to accept the road as a public way.

The article, proposed by Selectman Alan MacDonald and based on an Arlington bylaw, will be discussed by MacDonald, the town manager, the town engineer, the director of Public Works and the town counsel.

Top: Sid Steward and Jymme Butcher commiserate on a fallen tree at 93 Bacon St. after Hurricane Gloria had blown her worst Friday afternoon. Below, winds were still howling as cleanup crews fanned-out along Church St. to dismantle fallen trees and branches blocking the roadway. More photos and stories about Gloria on pages 2, 19 and 20.

Town Will Hire Health Insurance Consultant

By AARON ZITNER

Citing a 131 percent increase in health insurance costs to the town over the past five years, Selectmen Monday voted to hire an insurance consulting firm and to change its contract with Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

The town currently pays BC/BS premiums in advance of learning what claims might come up during a year.

Under the new arrangement, called "cost plus," the town will set up a trust fund and all employee deductions and local contributions will be paid to the trust. The town will then pay BC/BS for claims as they arise.

This allows the town to audit claims before they are paid — or rather, to hire a private consultant to audit health claims.

Committee members selected Claims Monitoring Services Inc. of Marshfield as consultant.

"We will be able to control what deducted from every paycheck," the manager said.

The town must tell BC/BS by Nov. 1 that it wants to change its contract. Contracts will be signed Dec. 1.

Committee members selected Claims Monitoring Services Inc. of Marshfield as consultant.

"We will be able to control what we pay for," Special Insurance Committee chairman Thomas Schmitt told Selectmen. "We currently have no control over payments. Some claims should not be paid."

"I'm not suggesting there is fraud, but with the volume of claims in town, some arise that should not be paid."

Schmitt said the consultant would weed out claims from ineligible people and decide whether workers' compensator or personal automobile insurance is more appropriate to cover a claim than town insurance.

The firm will also negotiate the town's contract with BC/BS in November and act as a liaison throughout the year.

Claims Monitoring was chosen over Insurance Cost Control of Worcester because its service is cheaper and the firm has more experience, committee members said.

Claims Monitoring will be paid $10,000 next year. Insurance Cost Control's fee would be $7,500.

The town will also purchase extra insurance to cover claims larger than $30,000, which would be too large for the trust fund to cover.

Maurer said he had called the presidents of all town unions about plans to change health insurance and allowed their labor counsel to review related documents.

Selectmen approved the recommendations unanimously, despite some questions from Town Counsel Douglas Randall about the cost of the firm's labor counsel to review related documents.

Gloria's Winds Held Light Grip

The wind howled, the branches creaked like rifle shots, and the people wandered — gleeful — through the streets.

After less than three hours of confinement sparked by Hurricane Gloria's wind and rain, Winchester residents flocked to their porches and the streets to watch the town get put back together again.

The hurricane was so short-lived as to almost be the storm that wasn't. Some dubbed her the "sissy hurricane."

But in her three hours of bluster, she caused her share of damage in felled trees and power lines. Some residents were still without power on Wednesday, and others still did not have telephone service.

The much-praised winds picked up in force about 1 p.m., driving all but official patrol vehicles indoors. But they became light enough by 3:30 that the streets took on a black-party atmosphere. As the winds died, stripped leaves carpeted the streets, and fallen branches created an impassable forest of the roadways.

Porches filled with people, strollers waved at the few passing cars and gave the "humps up" sign. Family groups ventured around their blocks, assessing damage and comforting each other's losses.

Cars unloaded passengers to help move trees out of the roads. Volunteers toiled cut-up logs to free the streets for traffic.

Details of Hurricane Gloria appear in other stories. The Winchester Star this week presents its readers with a keepsake of Hurricane Gloria, the first two and last two pages of the edition.

Stories were written by Jill Higgins, Maureen Quinlan, Susan Curtis and Valerie Jones-Long. Photographs were taken by Paul Drake, Jill Higgins, Linda Rauch and Valerie Jones-Long.

Power Restored Today To 100 Private Lines

By SUSAN CURTIS

Some 100 homes still without power on Wednesday should have electricity restored by today, according to a Boston Edison spokesman.

Approximately three-fourths of the homes in Winchester were without electricity at some point during Hurricane Gloria and the days following her debut, said Harry Meehan, District Manager of Community Relations for the Boston Edison Co.

As of Tuesday, 400 customers were right down to the ground. We have to still without power. Some 100 homes, which suffered interruption between the power line and the house, were still without power on Wednesday. Meehan expects all service to be restored by the end of the day Wednesday.

"Our first priority must be the repair of primary lines which feed the transformers to multi-customers," said Meehan.

"This requires time as fallen trees take wires, poles and transformers right down to the ground. We have to still without power. Some 100 homes,

Fletcher Street Bears Lots Of Wind Damage

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

It was almost as if the Fletcher St. area was the target of Friday's hurricane.

At the corner of Bacon St. and Church St., across from the entrance to Fletcher St., a 200-year-old tree "exploded," said Anne Kraus of 90 Church St., breaking one window in her home.

About an hour later, Kraus said she heard a snap. She peered out the window and saw the other side of the tree crash down across the street, blocking all traffic.

Kraus said within minutes town workers were on the scene to clean up the problem.

Her daughter Arwen, 14, said "I heard a crack and ran inside to get my mom, the house was shaking."

Kraus said, "The whole house trembled, it was like a mini-earthquake."

"The whole tree exploded, it was like a cannon going off," Kraus said. Jymme Butcher and Sid Steward, of Fletcher St., were in the street.

Please see GLORIA, page 20

BC/BS rates are 4 percent lower than other insurers, the committee said. Also, few other insurers are willing to bid on insurance contracts with Winchester.

In addition, BC/BS is specified in certain collective bargaining agreements as Winchester's primary insurer, and the town would have to go through the collective bargaining process to change that.

The committee considered switching to BC/BS's Master Health Plus plan, which would have cut premiums more dramatically next year, members said.

Master Health Plus was rejected because benefits might be diminished and the experience of other towns with the plan is limited, members said.

The committee next looks at the town's workers' compensation program.
